FLYERS SEEK AMUNDSEN IN VAIN; NOBILE NEARER LAND

Maj. Penzo Cruises Nearly 500 Miles Without Sighting Explorer and Five Others.

ITALIA MEN DRIFT TOWARD ISLAND

Experts Doubt Faint Radio Signals Heard by Two Ships Came From Group in French Seaplane.

(Copyright, 1928.)
By the Associated Press.

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, June 23.—Waters and coasts of the archipelago were combed by aviators today in search for Roald Amundsen and the five men with him in the French seaplane, but without success. The party, which started in search of missing members of the Nobile expedition, seemed to have disappeared more completely than those they sought to rescue.

A notable effort was made by Maj. Penzo in the big hydroairplane in which he flew here from Italy. The Major flew nearly 500 miles today, going as far as Bear Island, almost half way to the coast of Norway. He saw nothing of the missing plane.

Penzo flew most of the way at an altitude of 2300 meters (about 7000 feet). The weather was fine and clear and at that height he had opportunity to sweep wide stretches of ice and water. He covered practically all of the open sea in which the Amundsen plane might have come down.

Doubt on Radio Signals.

The negative result of this flight, coupled with failure of other planes to find a trace of Amundsen, has almost convinced experts here that faint radio signals heard last night by at least two vessels did not come from the missing plane. They pointed out that the explorations had gone far beyond the boundaries of the space in which the machine's radio might have penetrated.

There is a theory now that the rescue expedition may have been forced down on the ice in some fiord or other deep indentation of the coast. This is coupled with a belief that the radio has been damaged so that Amundsen is unable to communicate with his agent, Capt. Wisting, at Kings Bay.

The faint wireless signals were heard by the coaling steamer Marita, which came into port today. The operator said he picked up a faint S O S at 11 o'clock last night. The plane was equipped with wireless, but the apparatus could be heard only 60 miles if the machine were at rest on the water. The Marita saw nothing of the missing men.

Another gleam of hope arose from a report that the ice-breaker Maligin also heard indistinct signals. That vessel, however, was not sure they came from the Amundsen plane. It requested further information.

Definite plans toward searching the coast of the archipelago were put into operation today by aviators who turned their attention toward Amundsen and away from Gen. Nobile. The latter now is in a situation that requires only patient waiting.

Swedish Plane Explores Coast.

The Swedish plane Upland, big three-motored Junker piloted by Capt. Lyttenberg, explored the west coast of Spitzbergen, but found no trace of the Amundsen party.

Gen. Nobile's party now is only 20 miles from Foyne Island, the ice having drifted with them rather rapidly toward that piece of land. Some of the experts here suggested he might try making his way to the island. They recognize that the party would be handicapped because of the broken leg of one of the men and the fact that Nobile himself still is suffering from injuries suffered when the Italia was wrecked.

One of the arguments advanced in favor of this course was that Nobile could exist for months on land with the supplies he now possesses. He also is fully equipped for such a journey, even though it is slow and painful. In fact, he probably has more equipment and supplies than his little group could transport. There were 750 pounds in the first batch of goods dropped from the plane by Maj. Maddalena and he has received additional provisions.

NEGRO KILLS INDIAN AT BARBECUE STAND

Tom Smith, Proprietor, Said to Have Admitted Shooting Reuben Neri.

In a brawl at a dilapidated Negro barbecue stand stand at 2824 Chouteau avenue, Reuben Nera, 35 years old, an Indian, was shot and killed at 9:40 o'clock last night.

A motorcycle policeman, sent from city hospital in response to a call for an ambulance, found Neri's body in a dark gangway beside the stand with a bullet in the heart. The wound was powder-burned.

In the barbecue stand, seated on a bench in a dazed condition, was the proprietor, Tom Smith, 54, a Negro. His head was badly cut and the fragments of a broken bottle lay on the floor beside him. Taken to city hospital No. 2, police say he admitted the shooting of Neri, but offered no details.

Neri's body was taken to the City Hospital where a carpenter's union card bearing his name was found in a coat pocket, as well as a half pint of gin.

At a rooming house at 1218 Missouri avenue, police learned that Neri had rented a room during the afternoon, bringing no personal property. After buying some groceries, he departed saying he would return late in the evening with his baggage. He told the landlady he was employed with a house-moving crew on Kingshighway boulevard.

No eye-witnesses to the shooting were found.

GEORGE SIEGMANN, ACTOR, DIES

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 23.—George Siegmann, 45 years old, widely known character actor of the films, died at his home here last night of pernicious anemia following a long illness. His widow, Mrs. Maud Darby Siegmann of Portland, Ore., whom the actor married about a year ago, and a brother, Frank Siegmann, of New York City, are the only relatives surviving.

One of Siegmann's earliest successes was in "The Birth of a Nation." His last work was in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," in which he played the role of Simon Legree. Siegmann was under contract to the Universal Pictures Corporation.

NEW MADRID AND CAIRO HEARD ON FLOOD PROBLEMS

Illinois City Favors Army Engineers' Plan—Missourians Fear Interests Would Be Jeopardized.

CONTROL BOARD TO REPORT ON HEARINGS

Floodway Would Be Wet One Per Cent of Time Says Jadwin — "But When?" He Is Asked.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW MADRID, Mo., June 23.—The life and death drama that underlies the dull figures and puzzling blue prints of flood control swung into vivid action here today in the first public hearing of the Mississippi Flood Control Board.

On this section of the river is the most perplexing situation the engineers have to solve. Cairo, Ill., on the east bank, cannot withstand a higher flood. New Madrid, Mo., on the west bank, fears that plans to protect Cairo will jeopardize New Madrid. Missouri farmers clenched sinewy hands as they told of the acres they stood to lose. The more urbane faces of Cairo lawyers were tense as they pleaded that Cairo levees had reached their limit—the town could not, without relief, withstand another flood like that of 1927.

Once a levee district president, William Hollaway of Charleston, declared "No reputable engineer" would contend that the proposed Missouri Floodway would lower the Cairo flood stage more than two feet.

Major-General Edgar Jadwin, chief of engineers and chairman of the board, stopped him with a few sharp questions, and gravely added: "Four reputable engineers agreed, within a fraction of a foot, that the floodway would lower the stage at Cairo by six feet. They were not employed to work out any one plan, but simply to find the truth."

"We Don't Blame You Folks."

"We do not blame you folks on the other side of the river," the district leader wound up in effect. "The existence of your community is threatened. So is ours. Let us find a way to save both."

To this Gen. Jadwin replied that the board had weeks of preliminary work yet to do and would welcome any facts that could be placed before it within that time.

The Army engineers propose to relieve Cairo flood heights by a floodway five miles wide and 70 miles long from Bird's Point, opposite Cairo, to St. John's Bayou, east of New Madrid. A new and stronger levee would be built five miles inland. When the Cairo gauge reaches 55 feet, by this plan, "fuse plug" sections at the upper and lower end of the present river bank levee in that section would break, letting water flow into the floodway opposite Cairo and out just above New Madrid.

The Mississippi River Commission's plan calls simply for heightened and strengthened levees on both sides of the river. The function of the board, which departed for Caruthersville last night on its first survey of the river to New Orleans, is to report to President Coolidge on the engineering differences of the two plans and make such further surveys as it finds advisable.

Uncertain of Protection.

New Madrid representatives expressed, rather than opposition to the army engineer's plan, uncertainty as to how fully it would protect them. Representatives of the Mississippi and Scott county districts, which built the present levees to protect land in the floodway, asked for time to prepare an argument. George W. Kirk, a Mississippi County land owner, declared that the floodway would take in half of Mississippi County, and, when it was flooded, would stop the drainage of the remaining half so that it would be inundated by surface water.

"Cairo approves of the army engineers' plan," said Congressman E. E. Denison of Illinois. "The salvation of Cairo depends on lowering the flood height. In former years nature provided three natural diversions between here and Cape Girardeau—at Little River, St. James Bayou and St. John's Bayou. They have been stopped up and the flood heights at Cairo have risen successively as the levees on the west bank have been built up.

"Cairo cannot survive without security against this artificial con-

HOOVER DISAVOWS QUAKER SCRUPLES AT TAKING OATHS

Will Be Sworn, If Elected, Despite Traditional Stand of His Church.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Would the fact that Herbert Hoover is a Quaker be inconsistent with his taking the oath of office as President of the United States?

The question was answered today by Hoover in connection with discussion arising over the traditional Quaker attitude.

Hoover said there was no inhibition among the Quakers with respect to taking any oath, and that as a Quaker he had not subscribed to any oath against war. He emphasized that his uncles, all Quakers, had fought in the Civil War and that his father was kept from enlisting only because he was too young. Hoover also cited his own activities during the World War as showing his attitude and freedom from any religious bar against participating. Though he was not a combatant, his conception is that his work was nevertheless of such a nature that it could not have been performed by one committed against war.

The Encyclopedia Americana, in its article on the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers), says: "Friends have always maintained that war and oaths were inconsistent with Christianity, being forbidden by Christ and His apostles in the New Testament. Consistent members refuse to perform military service or partake in warlike preparations. They refuse oaths in civil courts or elsewhere as forbidden by Christ's language, 'Swear not at all.'"

WARSHIP SENT TO ESCORT SHIP CARRYING MUTINEERS

Another Man O' War Reports Inability to Find the Liner Jervis Bay.

By the Associated Press.

COLOMBO, Ceylon, June 23.—Although Capt. Daniels of the liner Jervis Bay notified his local agents today by wireless that a recent mysterious outbreak on his vessel was due entirely to stowaways, there was an alarming message in the air tonight and a warship has been sent to bring the steamer into port.

H. M. S. Slavol radioed that she could not find the Jervis Bay. She asked the shore stations to try to get a message through to the steamer and also suggested that the cruiser Suffolk "help locate and render possible assistance."

H. M. S. Enterprise then sent a message to the Suffolk telling her to proceed with all haste to the Jervis Bay and escort the liner to Colombo.

The captain's message earlier in the day cleared up reports that some of the steamer's crew had been involved in the trouble. Two days ago he reported that the stowaways were under control and that he expected to reach this port Monday.

LINER SINKS SCHOONER, NO TRACE OF CREW FOUND

The Lake Ellethorpe Radios Report of Disaster Just Off Barnegat Light.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The radio operator at police headquarters reported early today receipt of a radio message from the new Tex Line ship Lake Ellethorpe, saying that while passing Barnegat Light she collided with an unidentified schooner. The schooner sank with all hands aboard.

The commander of the Lake Ellethorpe said he steamed back and searched the vicinity but could find no trace of the schooner or any members of her crew.

ELEMENTS BENT ON BEATING SMITH LACK CANDIDATE ON WHOM TO UNITE

Reed Willing to Take the Assignment, but Whether He Could Solidify Opposition Is Doubtful.

NEW YORKER STILL SEEMS SURE TO WIN

His Backers Expected to Offer Wet Plank, See It Beaten, Then Accept "Law Enforcement."

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 23.—Between the convention which is to assemble here Tuesday and the Republican convention at Kansas City there is a striking parallel. As at Kansas City there is here a coalition dedicated to the purpose of stopping the leading candidate, and the Houston coalition has the same fatal weakness as its Republican prototype—it has no candidate on whom its various elements can unite.

Mathematically, it is possible for Smith to be blocked, but there are very few observers who believe he will be. The situation today is exactly what it has been for a long time. Smith will go into the convention with an assured strength of 650 or more delegates. He needs 734 to gain the nomination. If the opposition had someone around whom it could rally in a last-ditch fight, an effective one-third bloc might be built up and held intact. But that hypothetical leader of a desperate cause is not in sight.

Jim Reed is willing to take the assignment. But consider the elements that make up the opposition to Smith. There is, first, the element that is opposed to Smith because he is a Roman Catholic. There is the element that is opposed to Smith because he is wet. To a large degree these two overlap. In view of Reed's record and preachments, how can these two elements be counted upon to work for Reed with the fanatical fervor that is necessary if the convention is to be turned from Smith? And if by a miracle Smith should be stopped by a dry anti-Catholic, anti-Tammany combination, how can Senator Reed expect to profit?

These are among the questions that one hears discussed in a hundred different forms in the buzzing hotel lobbies where the delegates and a small army of newspaper men foregather.

Reed's the Leading Opposition.

Reed remains the outstanding oppositionist. His arrival yesterday was the signal for a rush to his train and unlimbering of all the news cameras in the city. When he made his appearance to be interviewed today, 200 reporters swarmed about him. Erect and spare, with his white hair and his undimmed blue eyes, he was, as always, an impressive figure. He handled himself well. There was nothing new in what he had to say, but he said it in a way that "put it across."

He was properly modest. The Missouri delegation, he said, had come down to Houston to win the nomination; it was not that Jim Reed had come to win the nomination, but the Missouri delegation. They believed it could be won; but if it were not, they would be found supporting the successful ticket with absolute loyalty. Missouri, he continued, knew but one maxim: "To the end of the road."

No, he laughed, in reply to a question, he did not say "the end of the rope," he said, "the end of the road."

Thus Jim Reed in his first statement after arriving on the scene of battle. The statement was vigorous enough, but it did not have the fighting quality that most of the reporters had expected. The reaction of most of those who heard it was that Reed had been forced to the conclusion that he was beaten, and was prepared to accept the inevitable with what grace he could muster. Certainly there was in the statement none of the sourness that marked so many of the preconvention outgivings of the anti-Hoover coalition at Kansas City.

Prohibition and Farm Relief.

To carry further the parallel between this convention and the Republican—the main two platforms problems center around the same topics that agitated the delegates at Kansas City. They are prohibition and farm relief. There the likeness between the two conven-

Sidelights at Houston

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 23.

NLOOD may flow and blows be struck here but not over the candidate. The real hopes of the Southern drys is not to "step Smith" but to get his consent to put a dry plank in the platform. The average candidate is glad to have a presidential nomination on any old platform that is handed to him—tickled to death to get it on any terms, yet Alton B. Parker once made his acceptance conditional upon the adoption of a "sound money" plank, and a dreadful fear pervades the dry that Gov. Smith may insist on dictating the plank dealing with prohibition. In such an event, trouble might follow. It is possible, however, that the drys will even surrender that precious cause. The writer was at dinner last night with a bone-dry Southern Senator. The question was raised. The Senator looked around cautiously, then whispered: "If the thing is to be done, let it be done quickly."

A Contrast of Parties.

WHY is it that the Democrats fight over prohibition so much more bitterly than the Republicans do? The issue cuts as squarely across one party as the other. Why is it that dry Republican Ohio and wet Republican Pennsylvania can lie down peacefully together, while dry Democratic Georgia and wet Democratic New York must scratch each other's eyes out? Perhaps because Democrats take issues more seriously than Republicans do. More likely, however, because party discipline is stronger among the Republicans. That is why such confirmed wets as Nicholas Murray Butler, James Wadsworth and Bill Vare could take their steam rolling lying down at Kansas City. With such men the party always comes first. Rising high above every question of principle, they keep their eyes glued to the main chance and swallow the unpalatable in order to win.

Floating Drys.

TWO dry "leaders," one from Chattanooga and the other from New Orleans, devoted last evening to framing a dry plank to be presented to the convention. This high and holy work was carried out over a bottle of Scotch. When a correspondent blundered into the room late at night the two "leaders" were in such a condition that they mistook him for a local clergyman, and asked his advice about the matter. The correspondent poured himself the last drink in the bottle and paternally advised them to forget it. The situation recalled one which arose at Kansas City, where an open bar was set up in the leading hotel for the benefit of delegates and other visitors—all drinks free. A leading Middle Western dry, former Governor of a state, spent the entire evening in the place and then insisted on sleeping there. The bartender finally got rid of him by giving him a bottle to take home.

Prayers for Prohibition.

BEVERTHELESS, not all the drys are so insincere and a group of women whose earnestness will not be doubted, have set up a "dry headquarters" in the heart of Houston. Every day at noon they have a prayer meeting to which the public is invited. The walls are covered with posters like those once used to advertise the play, "Ten Nigthts in a Bar Room." The dissolute father is shown spending his last penny for gin while his weeping child pleads with him to come home. There are such slogans as "Save the American Home," and "Lawbreakers must not be lawmakers."

Tame Tigers.

THE New York Tammany leaders have made a remarkably good impression upon the local public and upon Southern and Western delegates who, evidently expected them to appear wearing brown derbies and checked vests, and chewing large black cigars. Undoubtedly there is a well-laid plan behind the quiet demeanor and pleasant speech of the men from the sidewalks of New York. They are doing little talking. Big Chief Olvany reluctantly admitted, under questioning by reporters, that New York had a candidate for the nomination, but went no further. When Smith's manager, Van Namee, was asked whether he had held any conference on the question of prohibition, he replied: "Yes—one—with Mrs. Van Namee. You have my consent to interview her about it; she is a woman of great discretion." The fact is that the New Yorkers know they have this nomination "in the bag," but they are determined to do no exulting over it.

Too Hot to Fight.

THE towers of Houston rise upon a level plain. The streets are spacious and straight. The

PROPOSAL MADE BY MACK IN LONG TALK IN HOUSTON

Senator Listens for Two Hours, but Is Reported Not to Have Given Any Indication of Yielding.

PUBLICLY SAYS HE'LL GO 'TO END OF ROAD'

Missourian's Close Friends Say He Would Not Take Vice Presidential Nomination.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 23.—Seemingly lacking the votes to make the nomination of Gov. Smith absolutely certain on an early ballot, the Smith forces are dangling before Senator Reed of Missouri a tentative offer of support for the vice presidential nomination, a support which would assure the militant Missourian the nomination if he cared to have it.

Reed has listened and said nothing, holding off the Smith emissaries while checking over the strength which he may command in his leadership of the fight to block Smith's nomination.

It is extremely doubtful that Reed will seriously consider the vice presidency. His closest friends express the opinion that he would not have it, and in a brief general statement which he issued today he said the contest would go to the "end of the road."

Mack Confers With Reed.

Within an hour after Reed's arrival in Houston last night Norman E. Mack, Democratic national committeeman of New York, and E. H. Cullinan, wealthy Texas oil man and chief Smith supporter in the State, called on him in his rooms. They talked for nearly two hours, and, while none of the parties to the conference would discuss it with newspaper men, it is known that Mack virtually tendered Reed the vice presidential nomination if Reed would abandon his fight for the first place. Reed undoubtedly could bring about Smith's nomination on the first ballot. A continuance of his opposition might delay it for several ballots, and Reed's friends continue to insist that it can be prevented.

It was known that Mack's attitude was, and that he even directly suggested, that Reed could have anything he wanted except the presidential nomination, which could be construed to mean the vice presidential nomination, the portfolio of Attorney-General in the Smith Cabinet, or any other place at the President's command, if the party won. He is said to have listened and "swallowed it all," but to have given not the slightest intimation that he was willing to come to any terms.

The questions of religion and of prohibition are said also to have been discussed, Mack taking the position that throughout all the history of the party, Catholic Democrats, solely because of religion, had been refused recognition in considering the presidential nomination and that this discrimination must be abolished this year by the nomination of Smith.

Because the conference was a secret one it has been impossible to obtain confirmation from any of the principals of the reports which have trickled out as to what was said. But the tricklings have come through very reliable conduits.

Senator Reed's Statement.

Reed met several hundred newspaper men by appointment in his headquarters on the mezzanine floor of the Rice Hotel today. He prefaced his remarks with a stipulation against any questions, saying that he might have a formal statement tomorrow.

"All I wish to say," he said, "is that the Missouri delegation is here to win the nomination if possible, that they believe it can be won, that if they lose they will be found supporting the ticket with absolute loyalty.

"So far as my personal views are

NOTABLES ON WAY TO HOUSTON PASS THROUGH ST. LOUIS

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson Here for Short Time Yesterday —Mrs. Al Smith to Arrive at 5:50 P. M. Today.

GOV. RITCHIE LAYS STRESS ON WET PLANK

Expects Smith's Nomination by Third Ballot—Nine Delegates' Specials Due During the Day.

Numerous groups of political leaders and delegates to the Democratic convention are passing through St. Louis from the East and North, on the way to Houston, Tex.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the wartime President, and Hugh C. Wallace, Ambassador to France in the second Wilson administration, were here for three-quarters of an hour yesterday afternoon, followed two hours later by Gov. Ritchie of Maryland, who recently withdrew from the presidential race in favor of Gov. Smith of New York. Mrs. "Jimmy" Walker, wife of the Mayor of New York, a Smith supporter, was on a private car going through last evening.

In a private car attached to the Maryland delegation special were Bernard Baruch of New York, one of President Wilson's advisers, and Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, President Wilson's personal physician.

Mrs. Wilson, wearing a dark traveling dress was at luncheon when her private Pullman was switched from the Pennsylvania Railroad to the Missouri Pacific at Union Station. She sent word through former Ambassador Wallace that she had made it a rule never to see newspapermen. She had no comment on the assertion of Breckinridge Long, former St. Louisan and Assistant Secretary of State under Wilson, made here Friday, that she was for Smith.

Wallace Warmly for Smith.

However, Wallace, who with his wife and son, Melville, rode on the same car, is an ardent Smith booster.

"I think Al Smith will be nominated on the first or second ballot," he said, "and probably at the end of the first, by which I mean that delegates will change their votes at the end of that ballot when they see how strong he is. I think the platform will call for strict enforcement of present laws, with nothing about repeal of prohibition or a referendum on the subject. I've no idea who will be chosen for Vice President and don't think Smith has a candidate in mind."

Wallace, whose home is in Tacoma, Wash., although he came here from his winter residence at Washington, D. C., will set with the Washington State delegation as an onlooker and Smith worker. He was born at Lexington, Mo., where he lived until he was 17 years old. He was named for the late Hugh Campbell, a St. Louis merchant. Mrs. Wilson, he related, is going to Houston as a spectator at her first national political convention, and to participate in the dedication today of Sam Houston Hall, the auditorium in which the Democrats will hold their sessions.

Edwards Discusses Issues.

Again declaring that the Democratic party should avoid a "mealy-mouthed" plans on prohibition, Senator Edward I. Edwards, wet Senator of New Jersey, spent several hours in St. Louis yesterday on his way to Houston.

The selection of Gov. Smith, an avowed wet, Senator Edwards said, would constitute in itself a modification plank. He predicted the nomination of the New York Governor on the second or at latest the third ballot. Not at all hopeful of so much as a wet or even a "damp" formal plank, Senator Edwards said: "It doesn't make any difference what the platform says concerning prohibition, everyone knows Al Smith and his attitude on the liquor question."

The outstanding issues in this campaign, he said, were farm relief, honesty in the business of Government, prohibition, and the promulgation of a foreign policy looking to the outlawry of war and a re-alignment of international relations with our Southern neighbors.

Several New Jersey delegates were in his party, which left St. Louis at 2 a. m. today.

Leaving on the same train for Houston that carried the Wilson-Wallace car were several of the St. Louis convention delegates and others among them, Mrs. Roscoe F. Anderson, an observer for the League of Women's Voters.

Gov. Ritchie headed the Maryland delegation of 90 persons, including 16 delegates to the convention and 16 alternates.

Gov. Ritchie's Prediction.

"I expect to see Smith nominated by the third ballot," said the Maryland Governor. "Smith no doubt will determine who the vice-presidential candidate will be. I haven't any idea who he will be. Personally, I favor former Senator Underwood of Alabama. The main thing is to get a vice-president candidate who agrees with Al Smith, if he is nominated."

"How about Senator Reed of Missouri as a running mate for Al Smith?" Ritchie was asked.

"He wouldn't take it, would he?" parried the Governor. "I think Senator Reed is a great statesman and admire him."

As for himself, Ritchie said he would not consider the vice-presidential nomination.

"If there is a big fight at Houston—and I don't look for any—it will be over the platform." Ritchie added, "I believe with Gov. Smith that the states should determine the wet and dry question. I am in favor of a plank along that line. The liquor question, anyway, is just one phase of the big issue—states' rights and centralized Federal government. That is the main issue of the next election. And I anticipate an election that will excite keen interest next fall. With Smith as the nominee, the Democrats will have excellent prospects of winning."

The Maryland special arrived at the Union Station yards over the Baltimore & Ohio at 4:20 p. m. and departed 20 minutes later. Among the newspaper men aboard were David Lawrence and Mark Sullivan.

Nine special trains, with 59 cars of convention delegates and others, will reach St. Louis today from the East and North and leave for Houston on the Missouri Pacific. They are:

From Cincinnati, arrive on Big Four at 6 a. m., leave at 8 a. m.; from St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., and North Dakota, arrive on Wabash at 9 a. m., leave at noon; from King's County, N. Y., arrive on Big Four at 1:40 p. m., leave at 2:20 p. m.; from Detroit, Mich., arrive on Illinois Central at 3 p. m., leave at 3:30 p. m.; from Chicago, carrying George Brennan, the Democratic boss, arrive on Chicago & Alton at 4 p. m., leave at 4:30 p. m.; from Chicago, arrive on Wabash at 4 p. m., leave at 4:30 p. m.; from Jersey City, arrive on Pennsylvania at 4:15 p. m., leave at 5 p. m.; "Tammany No. 1," from New York, arrive on Pennsylvania at 5 p. m., leave at 5:35 p. m.; "Tammany No. 2," from New York, arrive on Big Four at 5 p. m., leave at 5:45 p. m.

Mayor Walker of New York and "Tex" Rickard will be on private cars arriving on the Pennsylvania's "Spirit of St. Louis" at 1:35 o'clock this afternoon and leaving on the Missouri Pacific's "Texan" at 2:10 o'clock.

Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, wife of the candidate, will be one of a party in three private cars arriving on a regular Pennsylvania train at 5:50 o'clock this afternoon and leaving on the Missouri Pacific at 6:45 o'clock. A special car with a delegation from New Haven, Conn., will go out on the same train, as will one with the party of George F. McDonald of New York.

Complying with the direction of the Headquarters Committee of the Anti-Saloon League of Missouri the Rev. Dr. Parker Shields, superintendent of the league, will leave here for Houston tomorrow afternoon, to join superintendents of the kindred leagues from other states and officers of the national organization in the effort to prevent nomination of Smith or any other wet candidate or inclusion of a wet plank in the platform. Especially southern states, where dry sentiment is strong, will be represented, Dr. Shields said.

TEMPERANCE FORCES MUST DEFEAT SMITH, SAYS LEADER

Officer of League Against Alcoholism Asserts Governor's Own Words Mark Him as "Wet."

WESTERVILLE, O., June 23.—Gov. Al Smith's declaration that he has not changed his attitude on the prohibition question draws the line of warfare against the presidential nomination and election of the New York executive, Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, said in a statement today.

"Gov. Smith's declaration," Dr. Cherrington pointed out, "undoubtedly is his honest statement to the country of his position on prohibition. It should be accepted as such and should forever set at rest any rumors that he isn't as wet as he has been reported to be.

"The united temperance forces of the United States are interested in the election of dry presidential and vice presidential candidates as well as dry platforms. They must align themselves against Gov. Smith simply and solely because he is against prohibition, and this alignment must hold against any other candidate of any political party, and for any office in the Federal, State or local government."

HEFLIN SAYS PARTY WILL REORGANIZE IF SMITH RUNS

By the Associated Press.

BLOOMSBURG, Pa., June 23.—Senator J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama predicted here today that if Gov. Smith of New York wins the Democratic nomination for President that there would be a reorganization of the party in the South.

His prediction was made to newspapermen following an address at a Ku Klux Klan gathering.

"If Smith is nominated you won't hear a word from me during the campaign," Heflin said. "I will decide tomorrow or Monday whether I will go to the convention in Houston. If Smith is going to be nominated, I don't want anything to do with it and I don't want to be there. There certainly will be a reorganization of the party in the South if he is nominated, and I doubt that he will be nominated."

Several thousand persons heard Heflin speak. He said that he might be a candidate himself for the presidency, and remarked that "in 1932 things should be about right." He emphasized that he wanted Catholics to have their own religion but said "meddling in politics by the church was the subject of his criticism. Mexican and Nicaraguan affairs and campaign funds investigations were discussed in detail.

SIDELIGHTS AT HOUSTON AS THE DEMOCRATS GATHER

city is spick and span, clean and new. It has a metropolitan dash, and is noticeably proud of itself. Nevertheless, this is Texas, and Texas IS different. Mexican and Indian loiter wonderingly about the hotel entrances. One cannot forget that this is a distant corner of the republic. And, meantime, my friends, it is hot. It is hot enough to melt a brown derby into a sombrero. Perhaps there was method in bringing the convention here. There is such a thing as being too hot to fight. With a cool sea breeze, the Democrats might have managed to mess one another up at some length. It would take Spartans to battle long in this humidity. Houston may be known to history as the melting pot of Democracy. Under the slogan, "let us dissolve together," harmony may prevail at last.

Reed's Fight Hopeless.

JIM REED says he "is going to the end of the road." What a pity! In the Senate he was a distinguished and useful figure. He belonged there. His colleagues respected him, and he left his impress upon the times. But this fight is hopeless, and has been hopeless for a long time.

A Lindbergh Yarn.

THERE is an interesting yarn here to the effect that when Smith is nominated, he will start for Houston in an airplane piloted by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. It sounds entirely too interesting to be true. Lindbergh probably has no politics. His father was a fighting La Follette Republican. He was maligned, slandered, misrepresented and defeated, and he died a disappointed man. His son doubtless saw enough of politics to keep away from it.

Listen for Pat's Voice.

THE radio fans will hear a real voice when Pat Haltigan, reading clerk of the House of Representatives and Secretary of this convention gets on the mike. Pat takes his hat off to no hog caller ever born. Loud speakers simply annoy him. Nature gave him all he needs to make himself heard. There is just enough of the brogue in his voice to make it rich and attractive. There are nearly 500 members in the House, and Pat calls the roll an average of four times a day when Congress is in session. That is sufficient practice.

SMITH 'ROOTERS' CAN'T 'ROOT' AT HOUSTON

New Yorkers Have No Band and Parades and Noise Makers Are Forbidden.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 23.—The soft pedal has been applied to the pre-convention campaign of Gov. Smith. Houston has not yet heard a single note of "The Sidewalks of New York." The rallying song of the Smith supporters will be played before the convention ends but not by a Smith band. The Smith forces have no band.

"What, no band?" George R. Van Namee, the Governor's manager, a member of the New York Transit Commission, was asked.

"No," was the reply, "and no fire sirens or other noisemaking devices and no parades. We are here to attempt to get two-thirds of the votes of this convention for Gov. Smith in the most dignified way we know, with no effort to prove that a person or set of persons can yell for 24 hours."

Dignity at Headquarters.

Dignity is the watchword at New York State headquarters. The word slips into practically every conference Van Namee holds with newspaper men. In four big parlors at the Rice Hotel, decorated in the conventional red, white and blue bunting with trees and shrubs furnishing a green contrast, visitors tread softly on thick carpets. Large framed pictures of Gov. Smith and other Democrats who have been honored with high office look down on the soft spoken crowds, a far cry from the tumult and shouting of Madison Square Garden only four years ago.

The yelling, so far as Smith's supporters go, has passed with the old Garden. Talk of "Al" Smith is heard at headquarters but the familiar and affectionate "Al" is used exclusively by the visitors. No one connected with the organization abbreviates Alfred. To Van Namee, George Olvany, Norman E. Mack and the others all the way down to the office boy it is "Governor Smith."

Van Namee explained today that Mrs. Smith, wife of the New York Governor, who will reach Houston Monday, will confine most of her public activities to attending the convention sessions. He explained that Mrs. Smith underwent an operation a few months ago and thought she would find it impossible to accept invitations to private functions.

Other members of Gov. Smith's family to visit Houston for the convention will be his three sons, Alfred E. Smith Jr., Arthur Smith and Walter Smith. Mrs. Francis Quillinan, the former Catherine Smith, a bride of June 9, will be the only daughter present, as Mrs. J. A. Warner (Emily Smith) is ill. Mrs. Warner was elected an alternate delegate from the Twenty-eighth New York District, and had she been able to attend the convention, would have sat as a delegate, since James M. Fleming, who was Mayor of Troy and a delegate has died since his election.

"Rooters" Cannot "Root."

Eight hundred New York "rooters" will be in Houston the night before the convention opens, coming by train and boat. They will have no chance to "root." The directing forces of the Smith board of strategy have turned thumbs down on demonstrations, and they can only lend their moral support.

Only by their canes can the New Yorkers be picked out of the crowd of visitors. Texans do not carry canes. The men from the East doffed their woolens for the conventional summer linens of the South, and Van Namee went his companions one better by donning a beach hat. With this cool headgear at a jaunty angle, he praises the Houston weather.

Two-thirds, or 733 1-3 votes will be required to nominate.

Pending last-minute caucuses, no candidate is claiming the following 166: Alabama 24, Arkansas 18, Florida 12, Mississippi 20, Pennsylvania 10, South Carolina 18, Texas 40, Virginia 24.

The Smith totals are based on the claims of State leaders who are working for his nomination. Smith headquarters itself declines to make any specific claims.

Of the 710 claimed for Smith, 69 are in dispute: Colorado 6, Illinois 9, North Carolina 3, Oklahoma 20, Pennsylvania 16, Utah 3, Porto Rico 6, Canal Zone 6.

Of the 81½ votes claimed for Reed, 40 are in dispute: Illinois 9, Oklahoma 20, Pennsylvania, 8, Utah 3.

420 VOTES AGAINST SMITH, SOUTH CAROLINAN DECLARES

F. A. Hampton, Hull Supporter, Confident That New Yorker Will Be Beaten.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 24.—The first open declaration of confidence from the Southern anti-Smith delegates came tonight from F. A. Hampton, personal representative of Senator Simmons of North Carolina, arch enemy of the New York Governor.

"We have between 420 and 460 votes that are anti-Smith," Hampton declared. "We have confidence that they will remain against Smith. This has been determined after a careful survey of leaders on hand."

Hampton is a Hull supporter. There has been no definite coalition of the Southern group and it seems to be the plan of the anti-Smith forces to support their favorite sons until, and if, Smith is stopped.

LABOR TO URGE BEER PLANK

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. June 23.—The American Federation of Labor will seek inclusion of a plank in the Democratic National platform favoring modification of the Volstead act to permit manufacture of 2.75 per cent beer, William Green, federation president said here today. Green stopped at Indianapolis on his way to Houston for the Democratic convention.

Other planks which the labor men will urge on the party leaders, Green said, are clauses favoring better wages and better working conditions for federal employes and relief from injunction laws.

EX-DETECTIVE FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER

R. H. Stogsdill Gets 43 Years for Killing Non-Union Brakeman.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSON, Mo., June 23.—After deliberating five hours, a jury found R. H. Stogsdill, charged with the murder of B. M. Hargett, brakeman, at Chaffee, Mo., guilty of murder in the second degree and fixed his sentence at 43 years in the State Penitentiary. The case was given to the jury at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

At a previous trial May 11 a jury disagreed.

Hargett, 27 years old, went from Jonesboro, Ark., where he had a wife and three children, to Chaffee, Mo., to get a job last Oct. 17. Before his arrival a story had been circulated in Chaffee that he was a "scaley"—railroad slang for non-union man—and had taken pay as a strike-breaker. He lived only four hours and a half after he reached Chaffee. His head was crushed and he was shot three times. He had been "taken for a ride" by masked men who dragged him from his room and forced him into an automobile. Hargett was thrust into the back seat of the automobile with Stogsdill who shot him after the car had been driven to the outskirts of the city. Stogsdill, who is 36 years old, was head of the Frisco railroad detectives at Chaffee at the time and in that capacity directed the hunt for Hargett's murderer, until Sheriff Everett Dye of Scott County became suspicious and caused Stogsdill's arrest.

Stogsdill was a right-hand man of Sam Allender, chief special agent of the Frisco Railroad and formerly head of the detective force in St. Louis. Allender resigned after Stogsdill's indictment.

NEW TRAFFIC FINE SYSTEM GOES INTO EFFECT ON JULY 1

Bureau at Police Headquarters Annex, 110 South Twelfth Made Ready to Handle Minor Cases.

REVISED FORM OF TICKET PREPARED

Fixed Schedule of Penalties Provided — All Third Offenders Must Go to Court.

The tickets which policemen issue to violators of minor traffic ordinances on and after July 1 will bear the postscript, "You may appear before the Traffic Violations Bureau at Police Headquarters annex, 110 South Twelfth boulevard, within three days of the issuance of this arrest notification, waive trial, and pay a scheduled assessment for the above violation."

The ticket will bear the usual summons to Police Court on a particular day, one week ahead, and the motorist may, if he wishes, wait until that day and then appear at the Municipal Courts Building to sit on a bench an hour or two until his case is called.

"Courtroom" Made Ready.

Or he may, if he wishes to save the time of himself, the policeman and the police court, appear at the Traffic Violations Bureau at any time between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m., except Sundays and holidays, pay a set fine for the offense charged and sign a power of attorney authorizing the Assistant City Counselor in charge to enter for him a formal plea of guilty. As July 1, the first day of the operation of the new regulations is Sunday, the bureau will not be open, but will go into ation July 2.

Finishing touches were being put on the informal traffic "courtroom" yesterday and detailed instructions in the operation of the new bureau were being placed in the hands of all policemen, with copies of the table of fines and the form of summons.

The instructions emphasize the fact that cases of major traffic violations must go direct to police court for trial in the formal manner. These cases include careless driving, speeding, driving when intoxicated, driving under age of 16, driving with defective brakes, driving over streets under construction, driving with no State license tag or the tag only, and leaving the scene of an accident.

The minor cases, amenable to handling in the Traffic Violations Bureau, include improper parking, fighting cases, violating signals and boulevard stop signs, passing street cars on the left or when car is stopped, and breaking through a funeral procession. The tabulated penalties vary from $3 to $10 for the first offense and from $4 to $15 for the second offense.

The Traffic Violations Bureau will deal with first or second offenders. All third offenders must go to court.

The bureau will be in charge of Police Sergt. Eskridge Votaw, an Assistant City Counselor, a clerk and a Marshal. Policemen will send a copy of each summons to the bureau, where it will be held three days. If the motorist appears and waives trial, paying the set fine, the case will be struck from the open record. If he does not appear, the summons will be sent to the Police Court and the officer will be ordered to appear there on the date set in his original summons to testify against the offender. The bureau will issue books of tickets to policemen and check the returned tickets against the canceled stubs.

"Parking" Horses.

The $3 fine provided for "leaving a horse-drawn vehicle unattended," it was explained at Police Headquarters, is based on an ordinance of that title which provides that "every person driving a vehicle other than a motor vehicle shall continuously hold the reins to guide and restrain the animal attached to such vehicle or shall continuously walk by the head of the wheel animal, either holding or keeping within reach of the bridle or halter thereof."

Officials at headquarters yesterday said they could not recall that any ice man, milk man or any other deliveryman had been prosecuted for "parking" his horse-drawn wagon in the street while he made a delivery.

Fixed Schedule of Penalties Provided — All Third Offenders Must Go to Court.

The tickets which policemen issue to violators of minor traffic ordinances on and after July 1 will bear the postscript, "You may appear before the Traffic Violations Bureau at Police Headquarters annex, 110 South Twelfth boulevard, within three days of the issuance of this arrest notification, waive trial, and pay a scheduled assessment for the above violation."

The ticket will bear the usual summons to Police Court on a particular day, one week ahead, and the motorist may, if he wishes, wait until that day and then appear at the Municipal Courts Building to sit on a bench an hour or two until his case is called.

"Courtroom" Made Ready.

Or he may, if he wishes to save the time of himself, the policeman and the police court, appear at the Traffic Violations Bureau at any time between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m., except Sundays and holidays, pay a set fine for the offense charged and sign a power of attorney authorizing the Assistant City Counselor in charge to enter for him a formal plea of guilty. As July 1, the first day of the operation of the new regulations is Sunday, the bureau will not be open, but will go into ation July 2.

Finishing touches were being put on the informal traffic "courtroom" yesterday and detailed instructions in the operation of the new bureau were being placed in the hands of all policemen, with copies of the table of fines and the form of summons.

The instructions emphasize the fact that cases of major traffic violations must go direct to police court for trial in the formal manner. These cases include careless driving, speeding, driving when intoxicated, driving under age of 16, driving with defective brakes, driving over streets under construction, driving with no State license tag or one tag only, and leaving the scene of an accident.

The minor cases, amenable to handling in the Traffic Violations Bureau, include improper parking, jitney cases, violating signals and boulevard stop signs, passing street cars on the left or when car is stopped, and breaking through a funeral procession. The tabulated penalties vary from $3 to $10 for the first offense and from $4 to $15 for the second offense.

The Traffic Violations Bureau will deal with first or second offenders. All third offenders must go to court.

The bureau will be in charge of Police Sergt. Eskridge Votaw, an Assistant City Counselor, a clerk and a Marshal. Policemen will send a copy of each summons to the bureau, where it will be held three days. If the motorist appears and waives trial, paying the fine, the case will be struck from the open record. If he does not appear, the summons will be sent to the Police Court and the officer will be ordered to appear there on the date set in his original summons to testify against the offender. The bureau will issue books of tickets to policemen and check the returned tickets against the canceled stubs.

"Parking" Horses.

The $3 fine provided for "leaving horse-drawn vehicle unattended" it was explained at Police Headquarters, is based on an ordinance of that title which provides that "every person driving a vehicle other than a motor vehicle shall continuously hold the reins to guide or restrain the animal attached to such vehicle or shall continuously walk by the head of the wheel horse, either holding or keeping within reach of the bridle or halter thereof."

Officials at headquarters yesterday said they could not recall that the ice man, milk man or any other delliveryman had been prosecuted for "parking" his horse-drawn wagon in the street while he made a delivery.

Ash Laid to Pollution of Stream.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CARBONDALE, Ill., June 23.—The coroner's jury here today held Ayer & Lord Tie plant responsible for the death of Mrs. Claude Smith, 40 years old, who died. The jury held, from poisonous fish taken that had been caught from a creek near the Claunch farm. The coroner's jury held that the plant which uses creosote in treating railroad ties against decay, had allowed the creosote to run into the creeks.

SMITH MEN URGE REED TO QUIT FIGHT, TAKE SECOND PLACE

concerned, I think I have made them plain in some 50 speeches over the country. If I have any further statement to make, I will give it later.

"The only maxim Missouri knows is 'to the end of the road.'"

Catching questioning looks on the faces of some newspaper men who had misunderstood the final words, Reed said: "I said to the end of the road, not to the end of the rope."

While the language of the Senator was in words of careful choosing, his statement can be interpreted to have no other meaning than that he intends to go through with the fight to block Smith regardless of whether he may know in advance that he will lose, and many correspondents who heard him today thought they caught a sign that he saw failure ahead.

Many Conferences Held.

However, in the Reed headquarters, there was every indication that no such view had been passed on to the enthusiastic workers in the Reed organization. There were many conferences of Reed supporters and leaders of Southern states and states having favorite son candidates who are being counted upon to hold out against Smith.

It is not expected, if Reed has anything so say for publication tomorrow, that he will abandon the fight, or that he will discuss the vice presidency. If he says anything it probably will be to state his views on the prohibition problem.

With the increasing talk of Reed for the vice presidency which is accompanied by a general assumption that Smith will have the presidential nomination, there is much speculation as to whether Smith would really care to have Reed on the ticket with him, and as to whether Reed would take the nomination.

There have been overtures to Reed managers, not in the conference with Mack last night, however, so far as is known, by supporters of Smith on the ground that Reed could well afford to take the second place, it having been bluntly stated that Smith's health was such that any opponent for the presidential nomination could well afford to gamble with the second place.

It is conceded in the discussions that Reed, because of his power on the stump, would strengthen the ticket immeasurably, but on the other hand some party leaders have doubted the wisdom of choosing him, taking the position that he would not be amenable to organization discipline and that if he were nominated for the vice presidency, he would conduct his own campaign for the ticket in his own way and according to his own ideas, regardless of what the organization thought was advisable.

Friends Say He Won't Take It.

However, one can do nothing but speculate as Reed apparently has not confided to even one of his friends whether he would accept second place. His close friends are almost unanimous in the opinion that he would not consider it. But none of them knows whether he will. He will decide that for himself and will not have anything to say about it unless the time comes when he must say whether or not his name shall be placed before the convention for the second place nomination.

No decision has been reached on the question of whether Reed will have a place in the Missouri delegation on the floor of the convention. His organization has under consideration a plan to substitute him for one of the Missouri delegates so that he may be in a position to address the convention if at any time he thinks there is occasion for a speech from him.

The plan contemplates putting him on the platform committee which would give him the opportunity to speak either in support of the report of the platform committee, or in the submission of a minority report if he cared to make one.

It is not expected there will be a decision on this question until the Missouri delegation meets Monday morning.

Considerably more than half the Missouri delegates had arrived tonight, and the remainder will be tomorrow.

The forces of Senator Reed were augmented today by the arrival of Charles Howell of Kansas City, who will place the Senator in nomination, and of Sam Fordyce, chairman of the Reed-for-President Committee.

In a brief talk to the Missourians at the Reed headquarters, the Senator warned the delegates not to be stampeded "by this talk that it's all over, for it certainly is not all over."

Fordyce issued a statement referring to Reed's record and his long standing opposition to Hoover, adding that "if Hoover dares take the stump, Reed will drive him from it in 10 days' time."

arms, rubber boats and radio batteries since then.

Riiser-Larsen Wants to Use Icecutter in Search.

By the Associated Press.

OSLO, Norway, June 23.—Capt. Riiser-Larsen, Norwegian flyer who has been reconnoitering off Northeast Land to aid the Nobile party, has asked Commander Romagna of the base ship Citta di Milano to place the icecutter Braganza at the disposal of his expedition to search for Roald Amundsen and his five missing companions.

The Norwegian flyer says the Braganza is not needed now for the Nobile search in view of the departure of a dog team expedition for the stranded men.

Swedish and Norwegian expeditions will search the coasts of West Spitzbergen and the sea between Spitzbergen and Bear Island.

The Braganza at present is surrounded by ice, but Capt. Riiser-Larsen hopes that the situation will improve and it will be possible for the ship to leave for North Cape tonight.

ROME, June 23.—A Stefani news dispatch from the Citta di Milano, the dirigible Italia's base ship, tonight said it was leaving Kings Bay, where it has been stationed during the Polar flights of the Italia and ensuing rescue work, for Virgo Bay, which is 60 miles farther north. The move is being made so the ship may be closer to the scene of the rescue work.

$10,000,000 ROAD BONDS VOTED BY ST. LOUIS COUNTY

Clayton Gives the Largest Majority for Proposal; Maplewood and Richmond Heights Against It.

St. Louis County yesterday voted to issue $10,000,000 bonds for road construction. The vote in 120 of the county's 121 precincts was 9986 for the issue and 3819 against it. This was 782 more than the two-thirds vote required to pass a bond issue. The vote of about 14,000 was a light one.

Construction of 225 to 250 miles of 20-foot concrete highway, or its equivalent, is expected to result from the vote.

The election was the third held within three years on a road bond issue proposal. Previous elections were held in 1925 on a $5,000,000 proposal, which was defeated, and last November on a $10,000,000 proposal, which was defeated. A $3,000,000 issue was voted in 1916.

Clayton gave the largest majority for the bonds of any of the county communities, 594 for, to 91 against. University City gave a favorale vote of 575 to 213. Maplewood and Richmond Heights gave adverse majorities, the Maplewood vote eing 436 for and 618 against, and that in Richmond Heights 317 for and 388 against.

Other towns voted for the bonds. In the two previous elections, the towns generally voted against these proposals.

Plans for Use of Bonds in Improving Highways.

Plans for the roads to be built will be prepared by County Highway Engineer Jablonsky and the engineers of the various suburbs and carried out under the direction of the County Court, or administrative body, which proposed the bond issue, Albert Wehmeyer, presiding member of the court, designed the plan which was agreed upon. In the towns, the routes to be improved will be selected by the municipal governments, but must be parts of through routes.

It is expected that the first contracts will be awarded this summer, as the officials will begin at once to cosider what roads will be made first. The plan is to issue $2,000,000 in bonds annually for five years. No scheme of what highways are to be improved or what surface materials are to be employed has been prepared.

Among the thoroughfares which seem likely to be among the first undertaken are Clayton road, from the city limits to North and South road; Antire road, Ferguson avenue, and Ladue road.

In order to gain the support of suburban voters, the County Court has promised that about a fifth of the whole fund will be spent within the 15 towns. An allocation of $1,900,000 to the 13 older ones in proportion to their assessed valuation, was set up, as follows: Brentwood, $80,000; Clayton, $260,000; Ferguson, $80,000; Glendale, $35,000; Kirkwood, $200,000; Maplewood, $240,000; Oakland, $25,000; Richmond Heights, $180,000; Florissant, $25,000; Shrewsbury, $40,000; University City, $400,000; Valley Park, $25,000; Webster Groves, $300,000. Ladue and Deer Creek, new incorporated villages, also are promised allotments.

Among the Townships.

The rest of the funds will be allotted among the townships, outside the towns, as follows: Central, $3,000,000; St. Ferdinand, $1,400,000; Bonhomme, $1,350,000; Meramec, $1,000,000; Carondelet, $1,350,000. This likewise is in proportion to assessed valuation.

By proclamation, the County Court has established a General Supervisory Committee of citizens, to supervise expenditures under the bond issue, as a guarantee of economy and efficiency. This is not a legal body, but the court promised to heed it. It comprises: Edward Beecher and Jacob Studt of Bonhomme Township, Henry Rott and August Boenecke of Carondelet, Thomas Shields and Edward J. Bayer of Meramec, C. W. Reinemer and Mrs. J. K. Stribling of Central, Charles Kinamore and Bernard Gerbers of St. Ferdinand, and the Mayors of the suburbs, who at present are: Harry J. Burkart, Oakland; John B. Chipman, Webster Groves; Sidney R. Garrett, Florissant; Charles S. Humphreys, Maplewood; Edward J. Houlihan, Richmond Heights; R. L. Jacobsmeyer, Kirkwood; William Kenny, Brentwood; William O. Recder, Deer Creek; Eugene D. Ruth Jr., University City; William G. Schluter, Shrewsbury; Edward F. Stockho, Clayton; William H. Tiffin, Ferguson; Orville K. White, Glendale; William Young, Valley Park, and Fred Zeibig, Ladue.

In 1916 the county voted $3,000,000 in road bonds, expenditures of which was delayed by litigation for several years, but since then the county has gained considerable road improvement from this money. In 1925, when several items were submitted, including a new courthouse proposal, at a time when the possibility of merger with the city was imminent, a $5,000,000 road item was defeated by 1154 votes, and the other items lost also. On Nov. 29 last, a $10,000,000 road item lost by 974 votes. At the same time, a $1,000,000 public hospital item carried, but items for a new courthouse and county parks failed.

There was a comparatively mild capgaign carried on this time, during the last two months, by the Citizens' Road Bond Committee, headed by F. J. Hollocher of Clayton. No definte or organized opposition appeared. It was argued that the need of road improvements was obvious, but that general revenues were hardly sufficient to maintain the existing soft-surface roads, let alone build new, hard ones.

MAN SHOT, SERIOUSLY HURT, AT REAR GATE OF HIS HOME

Arthur Davies Tells Police He Can't Name Assailant; Search Started for "Shorty."

Shot in the abdomen and through two fingers of the right hand, Arthur Davies, 43 years old, a laborer, of 1414 Menard street, staggered into the City Hospital at 10:15 o'clock last night and asked for treatment. He told police he was entering his home through the rear gate when he was shot by a man he did not know.

Davies' daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ruth Davies, said he came into the house exclaiming, "Shorty shot me!" A search is being made for a man she described. Davies' condition is serious.

FRANCE TO STABILIZE FRANC AT 3.93 CENTS

Finance Committee Approves Bill, Which Is Expected to Be Passed.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 23.—Stabilization of the franc on a gold basis at a rate equal to 3.93 cents in United States money was undertaken today by the French Government. A bill to this effect, introduced in the Chamber of Deputies by Premier Poincare, was approved this evening by the Finance Committee of that body. The vote was 32 in favor, one against, and eight abstaining from voting.

The Chamber and the Senate will assemble tomorrow to vote on the bill, the Chamber convening at 9 a. m. Every prophecy was that the measure would pass.

It was 9 o'clock when the Premier appeared and gave a concise explanation of the bill. A few minutes later members of the committee passed the word among the newspaper men in the lobbies that the rate would be 25.52 to the dollar and 124.21 francs to the pound sterling. In terms of metal it will be 65½ milligrams of gold 900 fine.

The committee devoted a good portion of the night to consideration of the various provisions of the bill, particularly those having to do with redemption of paper money and old coinage.

The stabilization rate differs only slightly from unofficial trading on the Paris Bourse today. It corresponds exactly with the last New York quotation received here. On the Bourse sterling was transacted at 124.20 and the dollar at 25.47.

The new coinage which the Bank of France will have struck in order to be ready to pay gold to holders of paper will be worth just about one-fifth of the coins that were in circulation before the World War. Consequently, the gold coins will be five times smaller than the old. The principal coin will be the 100-franc piece, of about the same size as the old "Louis" or 20-franc piece that was in current circulation until July, 1914.

Economically, the effect of the stabilization will be far-reaching, but the man in the street will have no more gold to jingle in his pockets than before. The French Republic's entire stock of gold will remain for the present in big, gold bars held in the vaults of the Bank of France for use in adjusting international balances.

MARONEY FUNERAL HELD AT CATHEDRAL

Judge Falkenhainer Pays Brief Tribute to Late Prosecutor Before Services.

Several hundred friends of Andrew C. Maroney, criminal prosecutor and former Election Board chairman and Police Commissioner, gathered at St. Louis Cathedral for his funeral yesterday afternoon.

The assemblage was made up largely of elderly and middle-aged men and women. Some of them were associates, and some were antagonists, in the days when Maroney, as Joseph W. Folk's right-hand man, fought the Butler "Indians" and prosecuted City Hall boodlers.

W. Scott Hancock and C. Orrick Bishop, who were Maroney's colleagues as Assistant Circuit Attorney, Theodore C. Eggers, Circuit Attorney before Folk, and the present Circuit Attorney, Howard Sidener, with most of his staff of assistants and clerks, were present.

Others of bench and bar in the gathering were Judge V. H. Falkenhainer, former Judge Jesse A. McDonald, Lambert E. Walther, S. S. Bass and Thomas P. Bond.

At a Russell boulevard undertaking parlor, before going to the Cathedral, Judge Falkenhainer spoke briefly. He told of Maroney's life as one devoted chiefly to the public service, and praised his energy and courage in the difficult tasks which his duty imposed.

"Though he fought unrelentingly for the law and for the right," the speaker said, "Andrew Maroney was a man who made friends. He was loved by all who knew him."

The short service of absolution and prayers at the Cathedral, conducted by the Rev. Nicholas Brinkman, was followed by interment in Calvary Cemetery. Mrs. Maroney, who was separated from her husband, and their daughter, Mrs. William Bernard, with relatives and associates from the Circuit Attorney's office, accompanied the body to the grave.

Bank Robber Captured.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 23.—Lee Collins, 19 years old, captured early today at the home of a relative near Burkhart, Douglas County, confessed to being one of the two robbers who Friday robbed the Bank of Rockbridge at Rockbridge, Ozark County. He led officers to a stump where he had hidden $99 in silver, but said that he lost $900 in currency while swimming Bryant River in an attempt to elude his pursuers.

TWO SLAIN JUGO-SLAV DEPUTIES ARE BURIED

Crowds of Peasants in National Dress at Funeral of Leaders.

By the Associated Press.

ZAGREB, Croatia, June 23.—All Croatia mourned as the bodies of Paul Raditch and Dr. Basaritchek, leading figures in the Croatian Peasant party, who were shot down by a Deputy in Belgrade, were borne to their graves today through a vast assemblage of peasants.

Not since the death of King Peter seven years ago has Jugo-Slavia witnessed a more impressive funeral procession. Brilliant sunshine flooded the crepe-shrouded capital of Croatia. Peasants with bared heads followed their late leaders with devotion.

Legions of peasants marched five abreast through the crowded streets to the cemetery, carrying lighted candles, vials of holy water and sacred ikons. Their heads were shaved, their feet bare and they wore the National costume of pure white.

Deputy Prebitschevitch pronounced a panegyric. He officiated in place of Stefan Raditch, the Peasant leader, who was wounded in the Belgrade shooting and could not go to Zagreb. The widows and nine small children of the slain deputies were at the graves.

As the coffins were lowered, Prebitchevitch read a message from King Alexander and also a long statement from Stefan Raditch written from his hospital. Raditch declared the Croatian Deputies and the representatives of all Provinces would never return to Belgrade until the present Cabinet resigned. The leader also paid personal tributes to King Alexander who, he said, was doing superhuman work trying to pacify and unify the bitterly diverging political and racial elements on the three-fold Kingdom.

High School Boy Missing.

Milton George Wedler, 16 years old, a Beaumont High School student, is reported missing by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Wedler, 4256 San Francisco avenue. He was last seen walking on the railroad tracks near Second and Barton streets. He was wearing dark trousers, a white shirt, low black shoes and a wrist watch on his left arm. He weighs about 140 pounds and is 5 feet 8 inches tall.

COOLIDGE GOES FISHING IN RAIN

Indian Guide Takes Him Up the Brule River in Canoe.

By the Associated Press.

SUPERIOR, Wis., June 23.—Listening to the advice of John Larock, his Indian guide, that fishing shoulud not be missed today because the fish would bite, President Coolidge went up the Brule River in a canoe.

Braving a warm drizzle in a black raincoat and carrying two of the new pieces of fishing tackle which have come to Cedar Island Lodge, Mr. Coolidge let Larock paddle up the stream into the heart of the forest. Mr. Coolidge on his return, was said to have made a heavy catch.

Under instructions from Mr. Coolidge, all matters requiring executive action which had accumulated at his offices were taken out to Cedar Island Lodge today. The Chief Executive had intimated that he would dispose of them over the week-end. Since no engagements have been made for Mr. Coolidge at his offices and since it has been found perfectly feasible to have him attend to business at his residence on the Brule, it was considered likely that Mr. Coolidge would not visit Superior regularly this summer but would spend most of his time at the lodge.

No word has been received as yet from Washington as to Secretary Hoover's plans or when he proposes to stop here.

Mrs. Coolidge expected today to accompany her husband to church tomorrow. Last Sunday she was advised not to go on account of her recent indisposition.

C. E. U. Convention in St. Charles.

ANTI-SMITH GROUP CAN'T FIND MAN ON WHOM TO UNITE

tions ends, for whereas the greater trouble-maker of the two at Kansas City was farm relief, the greater here is prohibition. The farm leaders here are not demanding an indorsement of the McNary-Haugen bill, nor even, as yet, of the principle of the equalization fee. If they did make a demand of this kind, no end of grief would lie ahead for the simple reason that the east, on which the Democrats are relying for a decisive number of electoral votes, is against the McNary-Haugen bill. But with the farm spokesmen in the mood to do without a specific commitment of the party to McNary-Haugenism, the problem before the Platform Committee is fairly simple. All that it needs to do is to go a bit further in promises of relief than the Republicans went. This undoubtedly will be done.

Wet and Dry Fight Serious.

The prohibition question cannot be settled so easily. It cuts deep. It is dramatized here in two contrasting pictures.

On the mezzanine floor of the Rice Hotel, which is the center of all the preconvention activities, are the Smith headquarters. Here functions the efficient organization that is seeking to nominate for President one of the outstanding wets of the country—a man who, whatever his platform may say, must make his race as a believer in modification of the prohibition laws. Go down one flight of stairs, out the front door of the hotel and around the corner, and you come to the headquarters of "All dry forces" opposed to the nomination of Smith. Daily prayer meetings are held here at noon to ask the Almighty to preserve the country from the catastrophe that threatens it—the nomination of a wet by one of the great political parties. Zealous devotion to prohibition is written in the faces of the dry leaders, men and women, at these meetings, and in the placards on the walls. Here is a picture of a type familiar in the early days of the anti-saloon crusade. It is called "The battle of the bottles." Another shows a drunken automobile driver crushing the lives out of children in the streets. Posters exhort to teetotalism and support of the eighteenth amendment.

"Sparkling water we will drink," says one of them, and another calls upon God to save the country for temperance.

The wet and dry fight was brought out into the open by the statement of Gov. Smith that he has not changed his views with regard to prohibition. It has been kept there by the statement of Judge Cordell Hull, the Tennessee favorite son candidate, that he is "opposed to any modification or weakening of the present Federal prohibition measures," and by similar pronouncements from dry leaders. The subject simply will not stay under cover.

What will the Smith people do? This, as the Post-Dispatch correspondent has learned, is their present plan: they intend to bring before the Resolutions Committee a wet plank. Exactly what form this will take has not been learned, but probably it will call for amendments to permit the states to engage in the sale of liquor on the Canadian plan. This wet plank will be offered not with any hope of its adoption, but as the Smith people say, to prove Gov. Smith's good faith to New York and the other wet areas of the country. The plank will be voted down, and the Smith people will then accept a law enforcement plank.

"Law Enforcement" Plank Likely.

Whether or not the Smith people go through with their plan to make a wet gesture, it is virtually certain that in any event, the outcome will be a law enforcement plank—a plank on which anybody can stand. The obvious "politics" of the situation, as it is seen by the harmonizers of the party, demands a plank which will give slightly more comfort to the wets than the dry Kansas City plank, but which at the same time will hold the votes of all but the most fanatical of the drys.

Smith, it is pointed out, has declared time and again for law enforcement, even to the extent of saying that so long as the prohibition laws remain on the books, their enforcement is a sacred duty. He can, therefore, it is argued, run with perfect consistency on a law enforcement plank. The chance is very large that this is precisely the plank he will run on, that so far as modification is concerned, his platform will be his own statements on the subject.

Gov. Dan Moody of Texas is the man to whom the ardent drys are looking to make their fight for a bone-dry plank. They want something on the order of the Kansas City plank, which specifically mentions the Eighteenth amendment. The play of the less ardent ones is for a general law enforcement plank.

Plenty of Liquor on Tap.

The hypocrisy that prohibition has brought about was never better illustrated than here at Houston. Liquor is easily obtainable by all and sundry connected with the convention. It is excellent liquor, too, and it appears to have been specially laid in for the occasion.

This city of unexpected skyscrapers is on its toes to give the visitors a good show, and it is succeeding admirably. As at Kansas City, even the weather is doing its part uncommonly well. The weather is hot, but the much-touted breeze from the gulf is actually in evidence. Arrangements at the new convention hall are excellent.

The Tammany Braves have astonished some of the natives by their impeccable conduct and clothes. It is the manifest strategy of the braves to keep in the background as much as possible. Judge George Washington Olvany, leader of the Hall, when interviewed upon his arrival, was the soul of modest reticence; all that he knew was that a convention was about to be held and that a New York delegation had come down to take an inconspicuous part. Tammany will go along with the rest of the delegates on almost anything they want. It will make but the very minimum of requests for keyposts in the convention, and the requests will be urged with utmost politeness.

It Looks Like Smith.

It looks like Smith. And to daje it looks more like a Republican convention than Democratic. There is altogether too much harmony. But, as related, there are certain zealots and single-minded persons around the corner, and these persons represent a sentiment which has got to be reckoned with. So the affair may wind up in a real old-fashioned Democratic shindy after all.

As Willmot Lewis, of the London Times has cabled his paper, the Democrats are trying to reconcile God, the flesh and the devil, and they are likely to have a hard time doing it.

BARS POLICE FROM POLITICS

Chief Gerk Tells Them They Mustn't Work for Candidates.

An order reminding policemen that the police force should be nonpolitical in its activities was issued yesterday by Chief Gerk before his departure for Colorado Springs, Colo., to attend the convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

In the order policemen are told that the only political function they may exercise is to vote. They are enjoined by the order from otherwise helping the interests of any candidate.

CHIEF OF INCOME TAX FIELD FORCE WHO RESIGNED, RETURNS

Ernst A. Sudbrink, chief of the field force of the local bureau of the Internal Revenue Department for the investigation of income taxes, who resigned while in Washington Friday returned to St. Louis last night.

Sudbrink, who had been in the revenue service 19 years and in charge of the local office seven years, said he had a dual purpose in quitting his post. He has been in poor health more than a year, he said, and planned to resign because of that in the near future, but when he found on his last trip to Washington that his plans for the conduct of certain cases clashed with the views of his superiors he decided to leave immediately to give them a free hand to enforce some one more in harmony with their policies.

No appointment to fill the vacancy has been announced.

I. T. S. FRANCHISE OPPONENTS RECALL LONG FIGHT OVER DELMAR GRADE CROSSING

Urge Aldermen to Compel Use of Subway or Elevated at Cass Avenue—Threaten to Appeal to Public Service Board.

"Is it posible that after 17 years of bitter fighting to eliminate the Delmar avenue grade crossing, that we have not learned our lesson?"

This is the text of a vigorous warning statement to the Board of Aldermen, sent by the Cass Avenue Bank, which has assumed leadership of North St. Louis opposition to the proposal to grant the Illinois Terminal System a 50-year franchise permitting movement of freight trains across Cass avenue at grade.

Through Albert L. Schmidt, former Associate City Counselor, the bank indicates that, if the Board of Aldermen persists in granting the "obnoxious" franchise, it will appeal to the Public Service Commission to forbid a grade crossing, such as is contemplated, over a busy, east-west throughfare, carying two street car tracks and 4500 automobiles daily during business hours.

As is known, the franchise authorizes the McKinley electric lines to emerge from a subway in the block south of Cass avenue at a point between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, and to cross Cass avenue, Mullanphy and Howard streets at grade before ascending to an elevated structure. When these facilities have been completed, the lectric line is authorize to use them for the movement of freight and passenger trains.

The Bone of Contention.

President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service has said to the Aldermen that it is true, as the company engineers have asserted, that, because of the peculiar topography of Cass avenue at the point of the crossing and because of the presence of a sewer near the street surface, that the subway cannot be carried under Cass and that the subway cannot be made to emerge from the ground so that the crossing at Cass can be mahe on an elevated track.

North St. Louis has retorted that nothing is impossible to engineers and that if any other plan of crossing Cass except at grade is impractical, then the route should be changed to intesect Cass at a point where a subway or elevated crossing is practical.

The Cass Avenue Bank admits its interest is selfish to the extent that the subway will emerge directly in the rear of its handsome new building at Thirteenth and Cass, which it occupied last week. But, the bank points out, the interest of the public at large is much greater by reason of the fact that the sobway entrance is only a few feet from the New Twelfth boulevard traffic artery by which the city proposes to link North and South St. Louis. At that corner the new Twelfth boulevard will strike off at a tangent toward the northwest, creating an intersection of three streets near the subway entrance instead of two as at present.

Recalls Delmar Grade Dispute.

"Are we now going to grant the McKinley system the right to establish this menace and destroy the benefits arising from the opening and widening of the new highway, for which property owners will be required to pay many millions of dollars?" the bank inquires. "The Cass avenue grade crossing, if the company is to benefit the city as greatly as it claims, will see many times as many trains traversing it than crossed Delmar at grade. We must profit by our experience with the Wabash."

"Once this francise is granted," the appeal to the Board of Aldermen continues, "it is beyond the power of the city to correct errors, however grievous they may be.

"There is no haste necessary on the part of the city; it is true that the McKinley system is very much in haste, and threatens to withdraw its request, if it is not granted at once.

"They want a franchise and want it quick, if they can get it, like many other utilities; no attention should be paid to their threat, as they as well as their financial backers, want a franchise to haul freight too badly; a railroad which is no longer making money in its passenger carrying business, and frankly, through its counsel, concedes that they want a freight-carrying franchise to make up millions of dollars in past losses, will not abandon its efforts, so long as there remains a chance to get any franchise at all.

Wants Public Rights Protected.

"The rights of qur own people should be safeguarded first, and until a way can be found to harmonize the best interests of the city with that of the company, no franchise should be extorted from the city under this preposterous threat of the company to cease its efforts for all time, unless the city grants what it wants right now before the Board of Aldermen adjourns for this session.

"Neither engineering difficulties, costs to the company, nor financial considerations of the company, should impel the board to hasty action; further study by our city engineers and in collaboration with the company's, and a sincere desire on the part of the backers of the McKinley system to at least safeguard the rights of our own people, may result in the ultimate grant of a satisfactory franchise.

"The city gets nothing in compensation for the grant: proper safeguards of its own rights and the[illegible] should [illegible] must come first. Nothing less than this should be accepted and if a satisfactory ordinance cannot be passed now, a few months' delay will harm no one."

NEW MADRID AND CAIRO HEARD ON FLOOD PROBLEMS

dition built up, improvidently, we believe, on the other side of the river."

Leaders at the Hearing.

If Congressman Dennison, a powerful factor in waterway legislation, was typical of the Cairo delegation, then Thomas Gallivan, a New Madrid lawyer with galluses, sharp blue eyes, a big shapely head and a twisted necktie, held a like place as representative of the west bank.

"There is a popular impression that the floodway will be under water much more frequently than is the case," Gen. Jadwin told him. "It will be wet only one per cent of the time."

"I wouldn't want to build anything out there if it was wet only once in 10 years," Gallivan responded. "Maybe, if you could tell me which one in 10 years, I could lay off for that year, but that one year in 10 for the farmer breaks him. He is broke already."

"We're in favor of lowering flood levels," he said. "If your plan will lower them any at New Madrid, we're for it. But if you lower the levels at Cairo by this floodway, will it raise the levels here?"

"It is my recollection that it will," Gen. Jadwin answered. "And the levees can and will be raised and strengthened to meet it."

The Spur Across the River.

"Across the river there's a spur that keeps the river from cutting through Bessie Bend," said Gallivan. "If that sur were taken out and the river allowed at flood hmeights to cut across six miles from New Madrid, as it wants to cut through now, we'd feel we were well taken care of.

"We thought you might put a spillway over there, so that when the river reaches 35 feet, as it has now, with danger of great damage, the excess flow might take the one-mile short cut."

"You mean over the Titonville ridge," said Gen. Jadwin. "That had been considered. Both the commission and the army engineers agreed that levees were sufficient to protect this section of the river, but the very thing you suggest has been recommended for further study."

"One think I'd like to ask," Gallivan came back, "is about what amount could the man whose home is taken from him by the floating of the floodway, once in 10 years, expect to collect?"

Lawyers Before and After.

"I'm not a lawyer," Gen. Jadwin answered. "The bill has substantial provisions and was passed by Congress, which includes many lawyers. It was signed by the President, who is a lawyer and has the advice of the Attorney-General, also a lawyer. I suppose the law will have to be tested out by lawyers, probably in a test case before a higher court. Certainly I should have to call in a lawyer if I ever were faced with your question."

"If you ever get in real trouble call on us down here," Gallivan returned. "I've asked you about everything I had on my mind. In conclusion, I do want to say that, if it's in your power, I think it's poor economy to raise levees to heights which are bound to break some time, when at a little greater cost you might lower the levels of the water."

DOCTOR REDDISH GETS YEAR UNDER ANTI-NARCOTIC ACT

Pleads Guilty of Illegal Possession of Drugs; Once Acquitted of Murder Charge.

Dr. Horace Reddish, 913A Franklin avenue, was sentenced yesterday by Federal Judge Faris to a year and a day in Leavenworth penitentiary on a plea of guilty of having violated the Harrison antinarcotic act in the illegal possession of drugs.

He entered the plea May 5, but sentence was deferred pending treatment at City Hospital for the drug habit. He was discharged from the hospital as cured, but a narcotic inspector, directed to watch him, found the doctor 10 days ago injecting morphine into his arm at his office and arrested him, incidentally seizing a lot of drugs.

Several years ago Dr. Reddish was tried for and acquitted of the murder of his wealthy father at Jerseyville, Ill.

Accident Verdict in Child's Death.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday at Belleville in the death of 4-year-old Alice Hassenstab of 508 Centerville avenue, Belleville, who was killed Friday near her home by an automobile driven by Henry Freeman of 123 Exchange avenue, East St. Louis.

AMERICANS HELD FOR RANSOM BY MEXICANS

Federal Troops Ordered to Pursue Bandits Who Kidnaped Mining Men.

MEXICO CITY, June 23.—Federal troops have been ordered out by the Mexican Government to pursue a bandit party which kidnaped W. H. Mitchell and John F. Hooper, American mining men, in the state of Jalisco, and are holding them for ransom under threat of death.

The bandits, said to number 150 men, also raided several towns and ranches, drove off cattle and captured several Mexican workers who later were released.

Mitchell is understood to be the manager of the Mesquital Del Oro mines, property of the Pacific Mining Co., in the Mesquital del Oro camp in the state of Zacatecas. Although Hooper has not been definitely identified, the American Embassy believes that he may be of the same company.

Guadalajara press dispatches say that the bandits demanded 3000 pesos (approximately $1500) for the release of each of the captives, while the American Embassy has received advices from private sources that 18,000 pesos (approximately $9000) have been demanded for both.

The embassy, which has made representations to the Mexican Foreign Office for the safe return of the men, was informed that Mitchell and Hooper were going by automobile from Guadalajara, Jalisco, to the mine Friday morning when the bandits surrounded them and took off the Americans. They sent the Mexican driver back to Guadalajara with a message demanding ransom.

$9000 Demanded for Release of Kidnaped Pair.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The State Department was advised today that W. H. Mitchell and John F. Hooper, American mining engineers, were kidnaped by rebels at Rio Blanco, Mexico, at 10 o'clock on the morning of July 22, while en route to Mezquital Del Oro. Rio Blanco is 15 miles north of Guadalajara.

American Consul, Edward P. Lowry, at Guadalajara, added in his telegram that the captives' chauffeur, returned with a note saying that the rebels wanted 18,000 pesos ($9000), and that "we are all right, but do not know for how long."

Pair Wed 50 Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Monroe J. Ferguson 2740 Hickory street, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last night at the home of their daughter, Mrs. George Firlman, 2609 Caroline street. Ferguson, who is 75 years old, is employed as a city watchman. His wife is 66 years old. They were married in Osage County, Mo. A second daughter, Mrs. Irene Harper, and a son, Edward Ferguson, attended the celebration, at which many friends were present.

CLARK AVENUE VIADUCT SEEMS NEAR REALIZATION

Mayor Suggests Terminal Pay Part of Cost in Return for Permit for Facilities Extensions.

The proposed Clark avenue viaduct, over which the city and the Terminal Association have wrangled since Union Station was built a third of a century ago, may be built at last, through the Terminal's desire to expand the station premises to the west.

Henry Miller, president of the Terminal, visited Mayor Miller and Street Director Brooks yesterday, and renewed the plea for permits to enable the Terminal to carry out its $4,000,000 expansion program of new passenger tracks and express buildings.

The city officials told him, in effect, that if the Terminal would agree to pay $150,000 of the cost of Clark avenue viaduct, it could get the desired permits.

Miller did not commit himself on the viaduct matter, but he said, before leaving the city hall, that a new application for the permit would be filed tomorrow.

The Board of Public Service refused the first application for the permits, June 14, on the adverse report of Director Brooks, who said the matter should be presented in the form of an ordinance. The Terminal's president said yesterday that preparations had been made for letting contracts, and that, as the Board of Aldermen adjourns this week, there would not be time to get ordinances passed.

He pointed out that, while the city is asked to give up the present section of Twentieth street south of Market, to the tracks, it is proposed to open a new section in its place, which will be in line with Twentieth street north of Market, thus eliminating the present jog in the street.

Director Brooks, telling Miller that the permit might be issued if the Terminal would co-operate in the Clark avenue viaduct construction, said the Terminal would have also to pay the additional cost due to extending the viaduct over the vacated section of Twentieth street and the tracks beyond. He estimated the cost of the viaduct at $600,000.

An agreement as to the Clark avenue viaduct was made when the station was constructed in the early nineties. The company has contended that this agreement was abrogated at the time when the Ranken tract matter was settled with the city. Brooks said he could find no record of any such abrogation.

REGISTRATION ADDS 65,889 TO PRESENT POLLING LISTS

Number to Be Struck Off for Deaths and Removals Expected to Exceed Additions.

Thursday's supplemental registration added 65,889 to the precinct polling lists, as figured at the Election Board office yesterday afternoon. The net result of the revision will not be known until after July 3, when the names of persons who have moved or died will be struck from the rolls in their former precincts.

The number to be struck off, it is expected, will exceed Thursday's new registration, which is for the primary of Aug. 7.

A new general registration will take place in September.

EDWARD BUDER LEFT $8500 FOR MISSOURI SCHOLARSHIPS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Jan. 23.—Continuance of the 4-H Club scholarships in the Missouri College of Agriculture is assured by the fund of $8500 provided by the late Edward Buder, former president of the Missouri Bankers' Association, "so long as the Missouri Bankers' Association continues to indorse its present plan for promoting boys' and girls' club work in Missouri and so long as it continues to raise a fund of at least $1600 annually for the same purpose."

Club members who have benefited by attendance at the two-year short course in agriculture as a result of the scholarship fund, are Harry Donovan of DeKalb County, Gerald Harding of Linn County and Carl Bauer of Livingston County. The balance of the money provided by the Missouri Bankers' Association is used to defray the expenses of club members to junior farm and home week, which for club members has become the 4-H club roundup that will be held at the Missouri College of Agriculture the week of Aug. 6.

Turkey Curbs Doings of Officials.

ANGORA, Turkey, June 23.—An anti-foreign tendency is seen in an order of the Turkish Government forbidding all army and navy officials from entering foreign embassies, legations, consulates and the private homes of foreigners. It is also taboo for military officials to invite foreigners to their own homes.

Stolen $200 Ring Found in Sewer.

A $200 diamond ring, stolen last July with several thousand dollars' worth of jewelry from the home of Robert Mathes, 6245 Northwood avenue, was found Friday in a sewer on Maryland avenue by a resident of the district. It was identified as part of the Mathes jewelry when taken to a pawnshop for appraisal by the finder and turned over to the police.

CITY PUSHES FIGHT TO CUT RATE BASE OF GAS COMPANY

Counselor Muench, at Hearing Before Public Service Commission, Insists on Lower Valuation for Firm

URGES $8,000,000 REDUCTION IN FIGURE

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 23.—The city of St. Louis today continued hammering on the valuation of the Laclede Gas Light Co. of St. Louis, and submitted additional testimony in support of its position that the present rate-making base is too high, and the present gas rates high enough, in opposing the company's application to the Public Service Commission for gas rate increases.

City Counselor Muench is building the city's protest around contention that conditions affectnig the valuation have changed to such an extent that the $48,819,000 rate base for the gas property should be reduced to $40,152,800. The city asserts the proposed 18 per cent rate increase, falling heaviest on domestic and commercial consumers, is unnecessary and unfair.

Hearings before the Commission, in progress six days, were adjourned this afternoon until Monday. Submission of the case probably will be completed Monday or Tuesday.

City for $40,152,800 Figure.

Evidence already submitted by the city to be presented next week tends to establish that the valuation of the gas property, for rate making purposes, should be $40,152,800, as of last Dec. 31. In the valuation case, decided in November, 1926, the Commission fixed the valuation of the gas property at $45,600,000 as of Oct. 1, 1925. Net additions and betterments since that time brought the total up to $48,819,000 on last Dec. 31.

The more than $3,000,000 which the city asserts should be trimmed from the valuation includes, $1,485,840 in property that was a part of the plant account when the valuation was fixed, now said to be not in use; a reduction of $2,974,900 in the reproduction value of the gas main system due to lower material prices and construction costs, and a reduction of $3,906,000 in the former going value allowance of $5,818,000.

The valuation of approximately $40,000,000 contended for by the city is virtually the same figure it advanced for the value of the entire Laclede property, including the electric department, in the former valuation case.

Engineer Cites Lower Costs.

William Foley, an engineer in the St. Louis Water Department, testified today concerning sharp declines in the cost of pipe for mains, and economies possible in the laying of mains through use of machinery. It was contended that the cost of reproducing the company's system of mains, which was placed at approximately $12,000,000 in the valuation case, at 1923 prices, now would be approximately $9,000,000 at present-day costs.

John Bauer of New York, economist and public utility expert, testified yesterday for the city that conditions affecting going value, such as lower price levels, labor efficiency and other items affecting construction cost of physical property, were lower and that the tendency of regulatory commissions now was to make smaller going value allowances. He said the going value allowance should not exceed 5 per cent of the physical property. On that basis the city placed the going value for the property at $1,912,000, instead of the $5,818,000 originally allowed by the commission.

Part of Plant Not in Use.

An exhibit prepared by the city shows $1,485,840 in property in the former plant account that is declared to be not in use in present service. It is contended that $727,691 should be deducted for numerous miscellaneous items of building and equipment not in use, $580,000 for that part of the producer gas plant that is not being used; and $198,149 in land at the coke station and stations declared to be not in use in public service.

The city contends the net operating profit of $2,787,954, shown by the company for 1927 in its annual report, and disallowing of the $200,000 fee paid last year to the holding company, the Laclede Gas and Electric Co., for "advisory services," would make available $2,987,954 for return, or the equivalent of a return of 7.4 per cent on the valuation of $40,152,800 contended for by the city. The money paid the holding company for services, the nature of which has not been clearly established, is declared an improper operating charge.

Cross-Examination Not Over.

Cross-examination of the city's witnesses by the company has not been completed. The company's case in support of the rate increase was presented to the commission in hearing last May.

Objections by George Willson, attorney for the company, to any reopening of the question of valuation in the rate case, were overruled by the commission, and the city was permitted to introduce the testimony. Willson declared the valuation fixed by the commission in the former case was conclusive until changed conditions were proved, and that the question of changing the rate base could not be gone into without a formal valuation proceeding and 30 days' notice to the company. He said this had not been given.

The company is seeking the increased rates, which would yield approximately $1,410,000 in additional revenue annually, on the ground the present rates do not yield a fair return on the gas property valuation.

GOTTFRIED GALSTON RETURNS

Piano Teacher, Back From Europe, to Lecture at Washington U.

Gottfried Galston, director of the piano department of the Progressive Series Teachers' College, 4525 Olive street, has returned from Europe, with his wife and two children, and will lecture this summer at Washington University. He went to Berlin last month to close his home there and to bring his family to St. Louis. He is at the Gatesworth Hotel.

Galston made an American tour in 1912-1913, and a year ago returned to America to become connected with the piano studios here. He brought back with him only 500 volumes of his library of 7000 volumes. The others will be sold at auction in Germany next fall.

Accident on Delmar Viaduct.

The first traffic accident on the new Delmar boulevard viaduct over the Wabash railroad tracks was a collision at 12:40 a. m. yesterday between an automobile driven by James F. King, 1419A McCausland avenue and a University street car. King suffered lacerations of the scalp and face. King's automobile was on the wrong side of the road, police said, and hit the east-bound street car head-on.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

THE 1929 ELECTRIC SET that gives you all you ask of fine radio for

$77 (without tubes)

NO NEED to wait till fall for your 1929 electric radio.

Get it now and enjoy it all summer. Tuck it into your car for your vacation. Plug it in wherever there's a lamp socket. Dance to distant music, brought up close. Reserve your living-room seat for the Tunney-Heeney fight. Follow the great airplane adventures. Tour the air tonight—any night—with this surer and simpler and better receiver.

Model 40 proudly steps forth as the 1929 successor of 1928's best seller—the famous Atwater Kent 37, approved by more than 200,000 families. Model 40 marks a decided advance. But the price—because of ever-increasing demand—is still lower—only $77!

Far greater sensitivity—that means a much wider range of stations at your command, more kinds of programs swinging in as you touch the FULL-VISION Dial. The new built-in power unit, sealed against atmospheric action—is smaller and the whole set is five pounds lighter. The improved volume control carries you through every gradation of sound.

The tone is pure—real—faithful to the voice or instrument at the broadcasting station.

Economy of first cost is matched with economy of upkeep. This set uses about as much electricity as a single 40-watt lamp—considerably less than a cent's worth an hour. And into it is built that sturdy lastingness which relieves 1,600,000 Atwater Kent owners from annoyance and service fees. Not only must every set pass 222 factory tests or inspections but it has to be as good as a Master Set with which it is compared. That means your Atwater Kent set is sure to be as good as the other fellow's, no matter where you live.

Twenty-six years of precision manufacturing, including six years of radio, give this simple, beautiful, reliable Model 40 a fineness of quality and performance not to be described in words. See it and try it—to believe. The nearest Atwater Kent dealer offers you a home demonstration. Telephone him, or mail the coupon. Don't miss this great radio summer. The set of 1929 is ready for you Now.

MONCADO TO BE TRIED AGAIN FOR MURDER

State Indicates This When Jury, Deadlocked 7 to 5, Is Dismissed.

Vincent Moncado, whose first trial ended yesterday in a hung jury, will be tried a second time in the autumn for the murder, last Nov. 5, of Vincenzo Vitale, professional bondsman. This was indicated by the State after the jury, in a 7 to 5 stalemate, was discharged by Circuit Judge Rutledge.

Moncado was taken back to jail to await his second trial. Unable to make bond, he has been in jail since his arrest last December.

The grocer's story that he shot and killed Vitale in the bondsman's home, 1319A Blair avenue, during a fight that followed an attempt by Vitale to extort money from him apparently bore weight with some of the jurors. After the first ballot they were divided 7 to 5 to the end. The jurors refused to confirm reports that the majority stood for acquittal.

After the jury had been out 15½ hours, Judge Rutledge summoned it into the courtroom a few minutes after 10 a. m. The foreman, Alex Bertolin, a clerk, of 5646 Kingsbury avenue, reported there was no prospect of a verdict. Whereupon, Judge Rutledge discharged the jurors. In thanking them for their services, he remarked it sometimes happened a jury could not see things "as clearly as some of us."

The Court had given the jury instructions for first and second degree murder, but refused to include an instruction for manslaughter as proposed by the defense. The jury received the case at 6:30 p. m. Friday. Assistant Circuit Attorney Stack asked for a death verdict.

The small, sallow-faced defendant, who conducted a store and saloon at 1510 Wash street, matched his own version of the slaying against that of Vitale's widow, Mrs. Fanny Vitale, the State's chief witness. She said the slaying was unprovoked and denied there was any talk about money before the shooting. The struggle, according to her version, resulted after Moncado fired one shot at her unarmed husband.

Police explained the slaying as growing out of quarrels between Moncado and his wife. Vitale's brother, Nick, police were informed, had befriended Mrs. Moncado, who was acquitted last year of the murder of a Negro woman. Mrs. Moncado was in the courtroom during the trial, but displayed little sympathy for her husband, whom she accused of beating her frequently.

Besides the foreman, members of the jury were: Irwin Hoffman, clerk, 3639 Lierman avenue; H. C. Huckins, machinist, 7000 Smiley avenue; E. H. Knappmeyer, grocer; Charles Murphy, clerk, 212 Elwood street; Lawrence Rueve, sheet metal worker, 5219 Grace avenue; John B. Russell, bookkeeper, 5700 Clemens avenue; Roland Spies, salesman, 4919 Lansdowne avenue; Oliver Veneble, clerk, 2319 South Twelfth street; Arthur Ziegler, clerk, 3245 Knapp street; Claude Grider, clerk, 4465 Forest Park boulevard, and William Schejbal, contractor, 1909 Ann avenue.

NORRIS SAYS U. S. CRIMINAL CODE HAS FALLEN DOWN

Senator Asserts in Reply to Juror Acquittal of Robert W. Stewart Proves Procedure Is Out of Date.

DECLARES LAWYERS USED SIDE ISSUES.

If Oil Man Had Been Laborer, Conviction Would Have Been Sure, Nebraskan States.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Citing the recent acquittal of Col. Robert W. Stewart, millionaire head of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, as a typical case, Senator George W. Norris, independent Republican, (Nebraska), asserted today in a lengthy statement that the criminal procedure in the United States had fallen down. Norris is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Stewart, charged with contempt of the Senate for his refusal to answer questions put to him by the Senate Oil Fraud Investigating Committee, was found not guilty by a Washington jury after a deadlock of 21 hours. Norris declared that his acquittal was accomplished by a shrewd attorney who first deceived the jury and then made an unfounded attack on the Senate of the United States.

"If Mr. Stewart had been a laborer in the streets of Washington, he would have been on his way to jail two hours after the jury was impaneled," Norris declared.

Says Procedure Is Antiquated.

"Our procedure, particularly in our criminal courts, has not kept pace with the advancing civilization of the world. Many of these technicalities, hoary with age, adopted as shields for the innocent, have become loopholes for the escape of the guilty, and the common belief of the layman, founded on a great deal of reason, is that if a man has enough money he cannot be convicted of crime."

Developing this thought later in his statement, the Progressive Nebraskan said: "Millionaire criminals are interested in opposing any change. They want the ancient methods preserved. It offers them an avenue of escape that is denied to the ordinary citizen."

The only questions involved in the Stewart case, said Norris, were: "Had he testified as a witness before the Committee? Were the questions asked him and did he refuse to answer?" There is no dispute about any of these propositions. Mr. Stewart admits and has never denied that the questions were asked him and that he refused to answer.

Asserts Evidence Was Clear.

"The Court held that the questions were pertinent, and, therefore, under the disputed evidence, as far as the evidence was material in the case, the jury had nothing to do except to return a verdict of guilty.

"As a matter of fact, however, this case consumed more than 10 days of the time of the court, the jury, the lawyers, the bailiffs and all the other clerks and supernumeraries of the court. It cost the taxpayers of the country many thousands of dollars.

"The able lawyers for the defense led the jury over unlimited fields of exploration, into various side issues, and turned their minds from the only issue in the case by the introduction of evidence that had no more to do with the case than the flowers that bloom in the springtime.

"A poor man or one who did not have rich friends who were able and willing to employ an array of expensive attorneys would never have been able to make this defense. If Stewart had been a laborer in the streets of Washington he would have been on his way to jail within two hours after the jury was impaneled.

"Verdict a Travesty."

"When a verdict of 'not guilty' was rendered, I said this verdict was a travesty upon justice and was another illustration that under our system of criminal procedure it was impossible to convict a hundred million dollars. For this expression of opinion I was not only severely criticised in the public press, but I was unmercifully condemned and excoriated by the leading attorney for the defense.

"I mention this only to show one of the great difficulties in bringing procedure. Millionaire criminals procedure. Millionaire criminals are interested in opposing any change. They want the ancient methods preserved. It offers them an avenue of escape that is denied to the ordinary citizen.

"This attorney, with the same shrewdness with which he deceived the jury, undertakes to deceive the public by saying that my statement was not only contemptible but was, in effect, a charge against the honesty of the men and women who served on the jury; and, in effect, he charges that all members of the Senate who take any interest in prosecutions are attempting

For this expression of opinion I was not only severely criticised in the public press, but I was unmercifully condemned and excoriated by the leading attorney for the defense.

"I mention this only to show one of the great difficulties in bringing procerude. Millionaire criminals procedure. Millionaire nriminals are interested in opposing any change. They want the ancient methods preserved. It offers them an avenue of escape that is denied to the ordinary citizen.

"This attorney, with the same shrewdness with which he deceived the jury, undertakes to deceive the public by saying that my statement was not only contemptible but was, in effect, a charge against the honesty of the men and women who served on the jury; and, in effect, he charges that all members of the Senate who take any interest in prosecutions are attempting to make puppets of the courts and are entirely out of place in making any comment.

Effect of Money Felt.

"One juryman says that the jury, in its deliberations, gave no consideration to the wealth or the lack of wealth of the defendant. I have never doubted that, and yet it is absolutely true that unless the defendant had the money, or someone supplied him with the money to hire these five or six very able attorneys, he would never have found it possible, through the technicalities of the law, to put befor the jury the vast amount of immaterial aand irrelevant evidence which led them astray.

"This juryman says that no evidence on that subject was offered. Of course not. The defendant himself would have objected to such evidence and the Court would undoubtedly have ruled it out.

"This juryman said, in his newspaper article, the jury found Mr. Stewart not guilty because 'we were impressed by the slipshod methods followed by the Senate Committee and the Senate itself.' In the name of common sense, what had the jury to do with the slipshod methods of the Senate or the slipshod methods of the committee? Did these methods throw any light upon whether Mr. Stewart was sworn as a witness and whether he refused to answer the questions that were submitted?

Doubts Quorum Was Present.

"He says also that the jury did not believe a quorum of the committee was present when these particular questions were asked, and, further, that the examination of Mr. Stewart before the committee could very well have been postponed until after the Sinclair trial where Mr. Stewart was summoned as a witness, and which was given as a reason why Mr. Stewart did refuse to answer the questions submitted by the committee.

"Does anyone who is intelligent believe for a moment that these things had anything to do with the guilt or the innocence of the defendant, who was tried for refusing to answer a question submitted by the Committee, the asking of which and the refusal to answer both being admitted by him?

"As a matter of fact, it could easily be shown that if these objections, which seemed to bring about a verdict of acquittal, were applied generally and were good, it would nullify more than half of all the laws passed by Congress or by any State Legislature in the land.

"Further evidence that the jury decided this case upon improper and immaterial evidence is the published statement of the foreman of the jury that they did not believe that regular minutes of the Committee were kept. This only demonstrates the charge that under our procedure able attorneys can lead the jury astray and deceive them not only as to their duty but as to the issues involved.

"The Stewart trial is only an illustration of many. Unimportant as it is, it illustrates a general rule and no man dare openly or publicly criticise such procedure without being followed, through the means of the public press, with denunciation and condemnation for any suggestion of any reform or any change in our out-of-date system of jurisprudence."

60 FOREIGNERS IN MIDST OF DEFEATED CHINESE FORCES

Isolated at Tangshan; $100,000 Already Paid to Blackmailing Commanders.

By the Associated Press.

TIENTSIN, China, June 23.—An alarming situation has developed at Tangshan on the railroad to Mukden where 60 foreign experts in the Kailan mines and railway workshops are isolated and unprotected in the midst of 50,000 defeated Northern troops which are preying upon villages in that region.

The troops, consisting of Shantung and Chihli forces, are stated to be mutinous and to be eating up all supplies in the district. Messages from the foreigners at Tangshan said their foodstuffs are almost exhausted.

Preparations were being made yesterday to send a relief train guarded by British troops when further information was received that the Chinese commanders were levying blackmail on the Chamber of Commerce and various Chinese and foreign enterprises in Tangshan, threatening to destroy property unless a large amount was handed over. About $100,000 was paid, mostly by the mining company, whereupon the troops engaged in serious altercations over the division of the money.

The dispatch of a British battalion from Weihaiwei is being considered.

CHANGE OF VENUE IN SUIT TO OUST EXECUTOR DENIED

Litigant in Stolhoff Estate Case Alleges Judge Holtcamp Appointed Political Friend.

A change of venue in a suit to oust John S. Stradal and Harry W. Krieger as executors of the estate of Mrs. Kate Stolhoff was sought yesterday on the grounds that Probate Judge Holtcamp and Stradal were political friends, both being Republicans.

Judge Holtcamp denied the motoin, explaining that while he was acquainted with Stradal, he had not seen him for 10 years. He held that a litigant in court who happens to be of the same political faith as the Judge need not expect to enjoy any undue or unfair advantage by reason of that fact.

The motion was made by Christian Hoehle, 4242 Bingham avenue, an uncle of Mrs. Kate Stolhoff. He had sued to oust the executors on the ground that they had presented improper claims against the estate for services alleged to have been rendered to Mrs. Stolhoff before her death. Hoehle and the Rev. E. L. Roschke of Hope Evangelical Church are co-heirs under Mrs. Stolhoff's will. The estate is worth about $20,000.

VARICOSE VEINS REDUCED

Leg Troubles Healed by New Methods

A famous varicose vein specialist has given to the world a new therapy especially for the care and treatment of varicose veins of the leg. You stop the suffering from varicose veins, avoid the aches, pains, cramps, itching and numbness and increase the blood circulation with Viscose Method.

The just reason for providing yourself with this care is to avoid the ultimate ulceration of the leg. Ulceration begins when the diminished blood circulation fails to nourish the leg.

You can heal and prevent these ulcerations of the leg without being laid up.

Bulged or varicose veins of the leg, with or without any of these symptoms, can be reduced quickly and permanently by ambulatory absorption treatment. This is accomplished without hospital surgery. The treatments are ambulant. You continue the hardest work while getting well.

The first Ambulatorium in America for ambulant treatments, was established five years ago in Los Angeles. The demand of friends or relatives of patients who traveled from this district for attention has resulted in the opening of the St. Louis Ambulatorium.

If you have leg trouble, call or write for information. Office hours, 9 to 5. Tuesday and Friday till 8 p. m. Phone CHestnut 2417.

I. C. C. CALLS ON HAYDEN TO QUIT THE COTTON BELT

Holds Rock Island Officer's Permission to Serve as Director Should Be Terminated.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Charles Hayden, chairman of the board of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad has been requested by the Interstate Commerce Commission to show cause as to why his authority to be also a director of the St. Louis-Southwestern Railroad should not be revoked. The action is similar to that taken by the commission in citing L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware & Hudson to show cause why he should not cease to be a director of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Co.

It was said at the commission's office that Hayden's authority to serve on the St. Louis-Southwestern board had been granted several years ago at a time when the Rock Island owned a large block of St. Louis-Southwestern stock. The Rock Island sold this stock. The commission says the permission Hayden held to act as director was contingent upon the Rock Island's acquiring control of the St. Louis-Southwestern.

MARINE MAJOR AND TWO OTHERS KILLED IN PLANE

Fokker Machine Crashes in Virginia Soon After Leaving Washington at Night for Nicaragua.

By the Associated Press.

FILE, Va., June 23.—The Marine Corps lost today its oldest and most colorful aviator in the death of Maj. Charles A. Lutz, when the giant tri-motored Fokker transport plane he was piloting to Nicaragua, crashed here, killing him and two of his crew and injured the third.

Maj. Lutz and Lieut. Howard C. Busby of Washington, relief pilot, were killed instantly, their bodies being thrown more than 50 feet from the plane. Corporal D. C. McChesney of Detroit, Mich. aviation mechanic, also was thrown clear of the wrecked machine, and died of his injuries about two hours later.

Corporal Reeder Nichols of Florence, Ala., radio operator, was seriously injured, and was taken to the home of a Mr. Anderson near Sparta, Va. His recovery is expected.

Crashes Soon After Start.

After little more than an hour's flight from its starting place, the naval air station at Anacostia, near Washington, the large plane passed over File and then returned shortly circling the town apparently to seek a place to land. Coming down close to earth the craft struck the ground with a wing on a turn into the small field. It then plunged into a ditch and somersaulted several times before settling down a wreck.

The flight of Maj. Lutz, a rugged gray-haired veteran of many marine campaigns in the tropics, had been beset with many delays, but, anxious to deliver the craft and take command of the air forces in Nicaragua, he set out from Anacostia at 1:05 o'clock this morning. Piloting the giant plane through the early mists he communicated with the radio station at Anacostia that he was running a true course and proceeding satisfactorily.

Suddenly the radio signals ceased and here in File the citizens were awakened about 2:30 o'clock by the roar of motors above their homes. The residents saw the huge craft circle in the shifting mists, and then turn nose downward to the earth, striking the field of Edward Andrews, and flipping tail over nose, until it rested with its dead and injured strewn about the meadow.

The bodies of the three aviators were removed to the Marine Barracks at Quantico, Va., and from there they will be sent to their relatives.

Major Won Speed Trophy.

Maj. Lutz, who was 47 years old, had recently been in command of the air forces at Quantico. The flyer also recently bested the pick of the Marine Corps' aviators in a race in Washington to win the Curtiss Marine Trophy for speed. His home is in Boise, Idaho, but his widow lives in Washington.

Commissioned in the Marine Corps in 1922, Lieut. Busbey is survived by his widow, Mrs. Rowena Busbey, who lives in Pensacola, Fla. He was 28 years old. Corporal McChesney's home is Detroit, while Corporal Nichols came from Florence, Ala.

Corporal Nichols was praised by Major-General Lejeune, marine commandant, for following his orders to report at once any forced landing.

"Marine plane wrecked at File, Va.," the corporal telegraphed to Washington. "Maj. Lutz, Lieut. Busbey killed. Corporal McChesney, serious condition. Corporal Nichols, very badly injured. Request instructions. Impossible change location for few days. Advise send plane look over situation."

15 INDICTED FOR TERRORISM IN CHICAGO ELECTION

Many Elude Police, but Buddy Jacobson, Already Under $57,500 Bond, Arrested.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Fifteen men were under indictment today on charges of assault and terrorism at the polls on election day as a special grand jury recessed its investigation of primary irregularities over the week-end.

Buddy Jacobson, one-time associate of Hymie Weiss, slain gangster, was arrested today as he entered the Criminal Court Building and was released on his own recognizance after he had promised to provide $20,000 bond Monday. Named in a secret indictment returned Friday, Jacobson was already at liberty under $57,500 bond on charges made previously. Most of the others accused in the true bills were still eluding arrest today.

ALLEN TO HANDLE HOOVER PUBLICITY

Candidate Wants Moses and Good As Eastern and Western Campaign Managers.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Secretary of the Interior, Work, new chairman of the Republican National Committee, and a group of party leaders engaged in a long conference late today to choose the heads for the campaign organization but only made one selection, that of Henry J. Allen, former Governor of Kansas and publisher of the Wicita Beacon, to be the Hoover-Curtis campaign publicity director.

Senator Moses of New Hampshore and former representative James W. Good of Iowa manager of the Hoover pre-convention campaign, were discussed as possible eastern and western division campaign managers, respectively. Their selection, however, it is said depends upon their willingness to give up other affairs and devote their whole time to the campaign.

Hoover who abandoned a contemplated week end river trip to continue his discussions with the party leaders, is understood to to have added his personal persuasion to those of the committee heads in endeavoring to get Moses and good to take the posts.

If, is expected, however, that the selection of men for these posts will be announced early next week.

Participating in the conference with chairman work were Senator edge of New Jercy, John T. Adams of Iowa, former national committee chairman; C. Bascom Slemp National committeeman from virginia, representative Franklin Fort of New Jersy, newly-elected secretary of the committee Moses Good and Allen.

Hoover will receive formal notice of his nomination as the Republican candidate for President at his home at Palto Alto, Cal., between July 25 and Aug. 1. This was announced as definite today by Secretary Work

$500,000 STOLEN FROM REGISTERED MAIL ON LINER

By the Associated Press.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, June 23.—A loss from the mails of negotiable paper and money amounting perhaps to $500,000 was disclosed today when registered parcels carried by the Leviathan from the United States were opened. The Leviathan arrived at this port yesterday.

Scotland Yard, the detective branch of the general post office and insurance investigators have been working on the case for 24 hours, but late today had no information to give out.

It was indicated, however, that there is a strong belief in British detective circles that the robbery took place in the United States before the mail bags were loaded on the Leviathan. This is based on the fact that the seals on the registered packages were intact and that the bags in which these packages were contained were also under seal when the steamer was unloaded here.

So cunningly was the robbery carried out that its existence was not even suspected until the mail reached its destination. Opening of the packages in which the registered letters were sealed disclosed that these letters had been slit open. The seals on the bags and on the packages bore the imprint of the United States post office.

Only contents that were readily negotiable were touched. The robbers took checks, bank drafts, bills of exchange and bank notes. Everything else was left alone.

The Leviathan sailed from New York on June 16.

Judge Graves' Will Filed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 23.—The will of the late Supreme Judge W. W. Graves, who died at his home here last Sundayq, was filed today in the Cole County Probate Court. The bulk of the estate is bequeahed to the widow, Mrs. Alice Ludwick Graves. Pending filing of an inventory, the value of the estate has not been determined Judge Graves made bequests of $100 each to three sons, Ludwick and Waller W. Graves Jr. of Kansas City, and John L. Graves of St. Louis, besides other bequests to servants and friends.

Rescues Two From Lake in Storm.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PEORIA, Ill., June 23.—Willard Reistrick, 14 years old, and Louis Millinger, 46, escaped drowing when a sudden gale struck and capsized their skiff in Peoria Lake. Mel Sorenson, a boat-yard keeper, rescued the pair after fighting the high waves for 30 minutes as the two clung to the bottom of their skiff.

'PENNY SUBWAY' PLAN PROPOSED IN CLEVELAND

So Called Because It Would Be Financed by Taking One Cent of Each Carfare for 35 Years.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., June 23.—An ordinance authorizing the construction of $30,000,000 worth of subways will be introduced in the Cleveland City Council Monday night. The ordinance is sponsored by Raymond Cragin, real estate broker, whose proposal, first broached two years ago, acquired the name of "Penny subways." This name is derived from the method of financing, which is based on the allotment of one cent out of each carfare paid the Cleveland Railway Co. for the next 35 years to create a fund for the payment of 6 per cent interest and retirement charges on a $30,000,000 bond issue.

A limit of $30,000,000 on the amount to be spent for construction is fixed because one cent on each carfare will produce enough to retire this amount in 35 years on the basis of the average number of fares collected by the Cleveland Railway Co. for the last 10 years.

Details of Subway Plan.

Cragin has formed the Cleveland Subway Co., incorporated to build, but not operate, subways. In his ordinance he describes proposed routings, in the order of their importance, but the ordinance also provides that the City Council may substitute new routes for those suggested provided the total cost does not exceed $30,000,000.

The ordinance provides also that the subways shall be equipped and operated by the Cleveland Railway Co.

The profits of the Cleveland Subway Co. are to be derived from two sources—advertising concessions in the subway stations, and the difference between the rate of interest at which it can borrow money and the 6 per cent rate which the car riders are asked to pay.

The financing is assured, according to Cragin, and will be done by the Equitable Trust Co. of New York.

The ordinance provides that all construction is to be completed four years and four months from the date on which the ordinance goes into effect.

Title Vested in Trustee.

Under Ohio law, a municipality is not permitted to own stock in a public service corporation furnishing transportation. If ever this law should be changed, the ordinance provides that the city may then acquire title to the subway. Meantime, the title to the subways is to be vested in a trustee. But when the subways are paid for, they will be the property of the city, and the city may lease them to the railway company or allow the railway company to use them free of charge.

There are also provisions that the city may contribute money from taxation to the funds used for construction of the subways, so that the proposed subway system may be extended as the need arises.

What the Opposition Says.

Opposition to the plan has arisen even before its introduction into the council on the ground that the method of financing would place the entire burden of construction on the car riders and that no part of the cost would be paid by automobile drivers and owners of property especially benefited.

Under the Taylor street railway franchise, the City Council has control of the service of the Cleveland Railway Co. The city guarantees a 6 per cent return on the company's stock and the rate of fare is controlled by the amount of money in the so-called interest fund, which is the balance in the Cleveland Railway treasury after deductions for operating expenses, taxes and interest on bonds and stocks. When the balance in the interest fund drops below $500,000 the fare automatically goes up, and when the balance goes above $1,100,000 the fare automatically goes down. Hence the council could direct the railway company to build the subways and an automatic raise in fare would take care of the interest charges.

PARK DEDICATION JULY 16

Named for Gov. Baker Who Will Speak at Ceremony.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 23.—The Sam A. Baker State Park near Patterson, Wayne County, will be formally opened and dedicated by the State Game Department on July 16. The Missouri Ozarks Chamber of Commerce will co-operate with the Game and Fish Department in the dedication. Addresses will be made by Gov. Baker, for whom the park was named; State Senator Dwight Brown of Poplar Bluff, and others.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Baker, daughter of the Governor, will open the dedication ceremonies by hoisting a flag on a tall flag pole erected on one of the high points in the park. The park site, acquired with funds derived by setting aside part of the proceeds of hunting and fishing licenses for park purposes is 6000 acres in extent and includes a large game preserve.

For the Fourth A Vacation you'll Enjoy, Need and can Afford

"The Land of a Million Smiles"

A VACATION in a region of lazy, friendly mountains where tumbling, clear streams and crystal lakes offer every type of healthful as well as joyous sport; clear, pure and medicinal springs; cool nights that refresh and re-create! Now isn't that the type of vacation you both need and enjoy?
Right close at hand the Ozarks offer you such a period of recreation and rest. There's plenty of opportunity for swimming, fishing, boating, golf, tennis, horse-back riding, exploring, hiking and motoring over beautiful scenic highways. And the cost of such a wonderful vacation in the Ozarks is surprisingly low. Again, remember the saving in transportation for this "Land of a Million Smiles" is just an overday's drive or a short night's ride for the 7 Ado Wash.
Write today for the beautiful new book which describes and pictures in detail a half hundred resorts and resort towns of the Ozarks. It's FREE! Address—
OZARK PLAYGROUNDS ASS'N.

OZARKS
Land of a Million Smiles

A VACATION in a region of lazy, friendly mountains where tumbling, clear streams and crystal lakes offer every type of healthful as well as joyous sport; clear, pure and medicinal springs; cool nights that refresh and re-create! Now isn't that the type of vacation you both need and enjoy?

Right close at hand the Ozarks offer you such a period of recreation and rest. There's plenty of opportunity for swimming, fishing, boating, golf, tennis, horse-back riding, exploring, hiking and motoring over beautiful scenic highways. And the cost of such a wonderful vacation in the Ozarks is surprisingly low. Again, remember the saving in transportation, for this "Land of a Million Smiles" is just an easy day's drive or a short night's ride for the ? "dle-West.

Write today for the beautiful new book which describes and pictures in detail a half hundred resorts and resort towns of the Ozarks. It's FREE!

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 23.—Vast and gay and graceful in its gardened setting, Houston's convention hall, risen almost overnight, awaits the National Democratic Convention.

It is a mighty structure the people of Houston have raised for their guests. Immaculate in its paint and bunting, open to every breeze, redolent with the bracing odor of the forest of new-cut Mississippi pine that went into its making, it is more like a seaside pleasure palace than a hall designed nd built with an eye to the prosaic business of politics.

Flowers Change With Hours.

Just a day ago, it seems, a huddle of tumble-down shacks occupied the ground. Now the wide reaches of the hall, set within its palisade of woven wire and barbed entanglements to meet the attack of gate crashers, stands in landscaped, living gardens amid graveled paths, its windows graced with rows of bright-hued blossoms that come and go with the hours, changing the color scheme by nature's dictum.

Outside, the hall, graced with ornamental towers and arches for scenic effect, is set off with soft cream-colored paint work that shoots back no dazzling sun reflection to blind an abserver. The mighty roof is striped with alternate broad bands of dull red and duller gray as an added sun defense. The building, with its acres of open pavilions, its batteries of radio speakers, which Houston has prepared for unofficial guests who have no tickets to the show, is in keeping in form, coloring and contour with the hall itself. It all looks like a Coney Island pleasure center.

Hall Laid Out in Square.

The arrangements scheme in the hall itself substitutes a square for the conventinal oval layout. The flat, main floor is blocked off with squares of seats for delegates, alternates and invited guests. Along one side runs the platform, the convention control center, barred from the floor by a high, white-painted barrier that has only a single narrow stair of approach from the floor.

Seats for the press, more than 600 of them, stand along the first two levels above the barrier, facing inward toward the high, projecting speakers bridge. Above, rising gently to the second floor balcony level, where the open corridor connecting the network of committee and work rooms is visible, is the National Committee space in the center, flanked on either hand by ingeniously arranged seats for distinguished guests.

Awnings Ready for Shower.

Around the other three sides of the hall are the unreserved seats, going up in gentle slope to the open wire screened sides of the building through which the breezes pour unchecked. Bright striped awnings are available to shut out a chance shower or cut off a low flung glare of sunlight in late afternoon or early morning.

But, aside from the amazing wooden network of bracing that forms the roof with only a double row of slender pillars on either band to support it all or break the view, the most striking innovation of this political tabernacle is the great runway that sweeps across the back of the hall from side to side, above and behind the last row of gallery seats. That is the place where all the world and his wife may come to look in awhile on a national convention in action. Big stairways give access on one side from beyond the wire defenses of the convention proper and let out again on the other side.

Crowd Can See Convention.

All who will may come and go across that bridge, provided only that they keep moving.

Crow's nests for the cameramen, each with a battery of huge lights available to flood the scene below, have been set close against the roof at the top of each of the dozen or so supporting pillars. The main roof span covers a space 126 by 326 feet without cross girder or obstruction of any kind. It is just a single, mighty wooden cave with gently rounded roof above, weird in the strange diamond patterning of the bracing.

Bunting Emblems of Texas.

In the center of each gallery bank is the reservation for a band. Three of them will alternate continuously during the non-business hours in the hall. At various places are set bunting sunbursts made up in semblance of the Lone Star flag of Texas, while in the center over the platform a mighty carved reproduction of the great seal of the United States is set in gold and blue, fringed over the top sector with a score of silken national flags drooping from spear-pointed staffs.

WAR HATE INSCRIPTION BARRED BY POLICE

Louvain Library Rector Opposes Legend on Building Destroyed by German Fury'

By the Associated Press.

LOUVAIN, June 23.—The little war that has been going on over the inscription to be placed over the new Louvain library entered an active phase today when an attempt to place the disputed inscription on the structure was stopped by the police. The police action was directed by Mgr. P. Ladeuze, rector of the university, who is opposed to the inscription which, translated from the Latin reads: "Destroyed by German fury, restored by American generosity."

Whitney Warren, American architect, yesterday prevented the erection of a balcony constructed on the order of Mgr. Ladeuze which did not bear the inscription.

Warren has declared that the inscription was approved by the late Cardinal Mercier and was accepted in the original plans and that as architect of the restored building he would insist that the plans be followed out.

During the entire night three professors devoted to the position of Mgr. Ladeuze that the inscription serves only to revive war hatreds, kept watch at the library to prevent any effort to put the inscription in place.

This morning when vans carrying the stones bearing the inscription arrived and the stones were being taken out, the rector appeared and directed the architects and workers to cease. The sculptor, De Soete, Warren's representative, refused to obey the rector and finally a police officer ordered police on duty to prevent any further handling of the inscription.

De Soete was then requested to go to Police Headquarters for further threshing out of the controversy.

M. de Soete was released after explanations to the Chief of Police.

Warren was completely upset by the turn that the affair has taken and left for B russels. It is stated that his solicitor intends bringing suit for the moral damage he feels has been done him.

CORN FEATURES LATE UPTURN ON THE CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Corn took the lead in a brisk upturn of all grain values during the late transactions today. Report of scarcity of offerings in the corn market, especially corn available for July delivery, did much to bring about general buying. Besides, indications pointed to further unwelcome rains in the wheat harvest region, southwest.

Closing quotations on corn were strong, ⅞c to 1¼c net higher. Wheat finished [illegible] to ⅛c up, oats at ⅛c to ⅜c advance, and provisions varying from 2c decline to a rise of 7c.

Unusual buying for previous speculative sellers of corn, compared other features to the grain pit as the day drew to a close. As a result, July delivery of corn advanced nearly 4c above the previous day's finish and went to 4¼c premium at one time, as compared with September. Country advices showing only scant stocks of corn on hand at various points in Illinois threw a scare into speculators, who have been partial to the bear side of the market, and there was also apprehension about prospective rainy weather.

Warm, dry conditions are at present needed for corn, and this in particular a time when the crop is late. Tightening up of prices for corn future deliveries was also influenced by report of demand for immediate shipping purposes and industrial use. Meanwhile, arrivals of corn at Chicago today totaled only 78 cars, and other centers were reported bidding higher today for a Chicago parity. Many traders, too, were acting on knowledge that Monday is a traditional date to buy corn. The theory is that cute crop conditions usually deteriorate from that time on. Oats followed corn.

Late advances in the wheat market were due in part to corn strength, but also to forecast of stormy weather ahead in Kansas and elsewhere that wheat is ready to cut. Besides, North American wheat exports for the week were shown to be of liberal volume, and a Chicago crop authority was out with a statement that it is highly improbable the United States crop season will raise within 100,000,000 bushels of last year's wheat harvest. Earlier today, however, the wheat market had a downward trend, owing to reports of clearing weather Southwest and [illegible] of lower quotations at Liverpool. Provisions averaged higher, sympathizing with upturns both in the value of hogs and of grain as well.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"A new spirit of quiet confidence in good stocks is beginning to reveal itself here and there in Wall Street again as evidence appears that the necessary market adjustments can be accomplished in orderly fashion. A feeling that prices cannot break has given way to a general conviction that the market must be sobered. It now is evident loans can be reduced through a steady liquidation of weak market positions over a period without the disastrous drop so much feared in any bull market that has attained high levels. With the mid-year settlements only a week away, the financial district anticipates a flurry of 7 or 8 per cent call money before the Fourth of July. This prospect has injected a healthy attitude of conservatism in investment quarters. What is more it has for the time killed the fever of speculation that ran rampant this spring and eventually touched off the downward move still in process.

Possible Future Policy.

"Nobody professes to know how severely the Federal Reserve System will press its firm-money policy in the next six months, but ground can be found for the conclusion that late in the year its policy might be modified. If the higher rates of the next month succeed in quieting speculation it would be logical to expect the reserve officials to turn their attention to the seasonal speculative rates without greatly affecting the charge to industry. Efforts to stiffen money to curb its use in the market would from now on likewise raise the charge to business for funds just at a season when it needs relief. Undoubtedly what the reserve system would like is evidence in the next month that no further exorbitant demand for speculative funds will arise immediately to drain the reservoir set up for the use of business.

Expect Gold Flow Check.

"If the present realization in speculation gives the reserve this evidence doubtless future months will bring some modifications of the firm money policy. This week's stiffening in rates for commercial paper, bankers' acceptances and time money show pretty plainly that the rapid rise in discounts to $1,000,000,000 has brought the money market under control. It threatens dear money with the advent of the crop movement period. Any change in the reserve policy to avoid it would be recognized by a cessation of its programme to sell Government securities or still more by its purchase of securities. Another important sign on the horizon to watch for is any variation in the gold movement. It seems a reasonable presumption that France now has contracted for the major portion of gold need in stabilization of the franc. Demands for metal from that quarter have accounted in a large way for the heavy 1928 losses here. French stabilization possibly will tend to dissipate the gold export flow.

Tight Money Effects Felt.

"Whatever relief to the money situation these developments inspire they do not indicate a downward drift in rates for the rest of the year so much as a check to the rise now under way. A reversal in Federal reserve policy if it comes, and even a temporary turn in the gold tide would be highly interesting moves, but it should be remembered that a heavy pressure for funds always comes in the last six months of the year. To a degree these seasonal demands would offset other easing influences. Meanwhile the bond market as well as the stock market is feeling the effects of tighter money and still is drifting gently downward. New issues have not been taken as readily as desired. With most investment houses now holding down their volume of new offerings the belief is that any serious glut can be avoided. Already the financial district is beginning to anticipate the flow of investment funds that comes into the market after the payment of July dividends and coupons.

LOWER DRIFT TO STOCK PRICES IN DULL SESSION

Violent Advances in Few Specialties—Laclede Gas Soars 30 1-4 Points to 250 1-4 as Compared With Low of 207 Earlier in Week.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 23.—A stock market was again in the doldrums today. Prices generally drifted downward on selling influenced largely by a further sharp break in Bancitaly Corporation common stock on the New York curb market. Extreme declines in the active issues ranged from 1 to 6 points, with final quotations showing only partial recoveries. Violent advances took place in a few specialties.

The ticker, which had fallen half an hour or more behind the market in the half-holiday sessions last month, kept abreast of the market all day today. So small was the volume of trading that many quotations were printed in full instead of the abbreviated form. The day's sales aggregated 664,300 shares, the smallest of any session this year.

Nothing in News.

There was nothing in the day's news to influence the price movement. Such earnings reports as came to hand were mixed in character, and the week-end trade reviews reported further irregularity. Inasmuch as Friday's call money rate always carried over the week-end, money was not a factor today. In view of approaching mid-year settlements, a firm money market is expected next week, although some difference of opinion exists as to whether call loans will again go to 7 per cent.

Laclede Gas up Sharply.

Laclede Gas was the spectacular individual feature, soaring 30 1-4 points to 250 1-4, as compared with a low of 207 earlier in the week. Pierce Arrow preferred jumped 7 points to a new high at 62 1-4 in expectation of a favorable announcement on merger plans by the studebaker directors at their metting next week.

Radio was again a target for selling pressure, closing 3 3-4 points lower at 170 1-4 after having dipped to 167 3-4. New low prices for the year, or longer, were recorded by Collins & Aikman, Colorado fuel, Bethlehem steel preferred, Botany "A" Chicago pneumatic Tool Lorillard preferred, and U. S. Rubber first preferred. The airplane issues also were heavy.

Tobacco "B" Higher.

American Tobacco "B" and Tobacco products "A" recorded substantial gains. Indian refinning preferred soared 19 points to a high at 158.

Rails drifted lower with the industrials although Pittsburg and West Virginia continued to show independent strength. Texas & Pacific dropped 3 points and New York central, Sourthern Railway Western Maryland and a few others yielded a point or so.

Foreign Exchanges moved with in narrow and irregular limits. Sterling cables ruled steady around $4.87 13-16 and Canadian dollars ruled slightly higher around 99.75 cents.

BOND TRADE IS LIGHT AND PRICES IRREGULAR

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Prices moved irregularly within narrow limits in light trading on the bond market today. Some rails, public utilities and industrials were a bit firmer, but other rails lost the strength shown during the past few days. Observers apparently were awaiting next week's developments in the money market, although no extensive easing in rates is expected, and total sales were less than $5,000,000.

A gain of more than a point by Pierce Arrow 8s, which moved to a new top for the year at 104⅛, although the price later slumped to 103½, was outstanding in the industrial group.

Anaconda Copper 6s, Sinclair Consolidated Oil 7s, Crown Cork & Seal 6s, Armour & Co. 5½s and Bethlehem Steel 5s also improved. North American Cement 6½s went down nearly 4 points. Announcement that merger negotiations with Penn-Dixie have been broken off, was made this week.

Seaboard Air Line 5s eased off another point on selling influenced by the action of the directors regarding interest payment, and the St. Paul issues, Lehigh Valley 6s, and Erie 7s registered smaller losses. Chicago & Eastern Illinois 5s and International Great Northern First 5s B, with gains of more than a point each, and B. & O. convertible 4½s, Chicago & Northwestern 5s and Atchison 4s were prominent among rails to seek higher levels.

The foreign list was steady.

Third and Fourth Liberty 4¼s closed were active among U. S. Government obligations. Both closed 1-32 lower.

BANCITALY SELLS DOWN TO 100, THEN CLOSES AT 104

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 23.—A 10-point break in Bancitaly, carrying the issue to a new low for the year at 100, unsettled trading on the curb market today and the general list closed lower.

A block of 20,000 shares of Bancitaly was dumped on the market at the opening, sending the price down to 100⅝. It recovered to 102⅝, again sagged to an even 100 and closed at 104, off 7¼ points from Selling was attributed to further liquidation by Pacific Coast account. Quotations for sellers' seven-day options declined to 98⅜, but recovered toward the close.

Melville Shoe, which made wide gains in the past few days, went down sales in eight points and Safe-T-Stat Baking, Niles Bement Pond, Bohn Aluminum, Palmolive and Southern Stores closed one to six points lower. American Solvents & Chemical, International Shoe, Walgreen and Anglo-Chilean Nitrate closed higher.

Some utilities were under pressure. Buffalo, Niagara & Eastern, Southern New England Telephone and one or two others registered gains on small turnovers.

Galena Signal Oil showed further losses and most other oils closed lower.

FURTHER PRICE READJUSTMENT IN STOCK LIST

Marked Recession in Speculative Activity and Further Stiffening of Money Rates Among Developments of Week.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 23.—A marked recession in speculative activity in the stock market, a further stiffening of money rates and a general easing of European and Canadian foreign exchange rates were the distinguishing characteristic of this week's financial markets.

Trading in the stock market, which had been maintained for nearly three months at a daily pace of 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 shares, fell this week to the lowest level since last July. Friday's sales were less than 1,500,000 shares. Prices drifted downward although sporadic rallies gave the market an appearance of irregularity most of the time. Many of the leading railroad and industrial shares fell to new low prices for the year, while several of the high-priced specialties reached levels 25 to 100 points below the year's peak prices reached in most cases, only about a month ago.

Bond prices also lost ground. New offerings of $62,000,000 were about double those of last week, but well below those of the corresponding week last year.

Gold Exports Reach $600,000,000.

Further exports of gold to Italy and France this week brought the outflow since last September to nearly $600,000,000. In view of the fact that interest rates here are higher than those in Paris and London, hope is held out in some quarters of an early reversal of the gold movement. France, however, still has enormous holdings of dollar bills which could be sold to keep French francs above the "gold import" point.

A sharp rally in cotton as the week closed, based on unfavorable weather reports, was the only development of consequence in the commodity markets.

Decrease in Loans.

Credit conditions stiffened somewhat with little hope of any amelioration before the early part of next month. A further decline of $158,100,000 in brokers' loans reported by the New York Federal Reserve banks was accompanied by the first decrease in rediscounts since last March. Although brokers' borrowings have declined nearly $300,000,000 in the last two weeks they are still more than a billion dollars above the total a year ago, and a further substantial reduction is looked for during the next few weeks.

Selling of the steel shares earlier in the week probably was influenced in part by the cut in the crucible steel dividend.

Formation of a joint export association by the Bethlehem and United States Steel corporations was consumed during week.

Motors were mixed. General Motors ran into selling despite reports of record-breaking may sales and reporte dindications of another extra didivend disbursement at the August meeting of directors. Pierce Arrow preferred ran up sharply yesterday.

Developments of Week.

Inauguration of dividends on Willys Overland common at the rate of $1.20 annually was announced.

Price movements in the oils also lacked uniformity. Refining was in brisk demand at one time. The Fisher Brothers denied that they were seeking to acquire the Rockefeller holdings in that company.

The decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission granting the Pittsburg & West Virginia permission to build a short line near Connellsville, Pa., was announced during week.

WEEK'S METAL MARKET REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 23.—While there was little change in the steel market during the week, the future apparently was the increase in demand for structural qualities. So far only moderate contracts have actually been placed, but in the Eastern and Chicago districts estimates were that contemplated projects would require eventually 400,000 tons. Pittsburg reported the best business in line-pipe in a long while has been placed, this amounting to 50,000 net tons. Mills again reported moderate specifications against contracts and little consuming interest in third-quarter requirements. Pig iron was steady.

Demand for copper from both domestic and foreign consumers tapered off toward the close of the week. Consumers were thought to be fairly well covered for July requirements and part of August, and are showing more disposition to await developments in view of reports of increasing production. Producers, however, are apparently satisfied with sales already made and are holding steady at 14¾ cents for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut valley.

Lead prices declined sharply to the low level of the year. Weakness abroad and reports of offers here brought about the break. Consuming demand on the setback was fair.

Tin remained steady. There was a fair consuming demand again, principally for prompt and nearby shipment. World's production was reduced during May.

Consuming inquiry for zinc was better, with orders mainly for nearby shipment. The rise during May was at a slightly slowed daily rate than the previous month.

Antimony steadied toward the close of the week with no pressure on the part of sellers. Consuming demand was dull.

St. Louis Metals.

Lead was quoted at 5.15 per 100 lbs. in St. Louis today. Slab zinc was quoted at 6.15 per 100 lbs.

HACK WILSON AND HARTNETT HIT HOMERS; RHEM FAILS

CHICAGO, June 23.

CHARLES FLINT RHEM, Cardinal pitcher, departed for St. Louis tonight to have his throat examined. He has been bothered by an inflamed tonsil for the past week.

By J. Roy Stockton
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Hack Wilson and Gabby Hartnett punched Flint Rhem for two homers which netted four runs this afternoon and the Cardinals, playing like the married men at a yokels' picnic, lost the final game of the series to the Cubs, 8 to 4. In addition to making four errors in the field, the men of Bill McKechnie ran the bases as if striving for the dumb-bell championship of the world, thus nullifying their 11 hits off Guy Bush.

Chicago drives which landed outside the playing field produced four runs before the Cardinals could solve Bush for a tally, but even when runs thus had become very valuable and necessary in clusters, the Cardinals declined to exercise ordinary judgment on the sacks.

Hack Wilson hit his home run to start the second inning and a bit of effective thinking was done by the Cardinals in the same frame. Stephenson followed the home run by drawing a walk and Grimm doubled to left, putting Stephenson on third. Rhem walked Hartnett, filling the bases to get at the weak-hitting English, and the shortstop dropped to eighth place in the batting order because of his lack of attacking power, justified the move by bouncing to Rhem for a double play. Bush then grounded out and the inning, including a home run, two walks and a double, had produced only one Chicago run.

Cubs a Bit Lucky.

In the fourth, with one out, Stephenson walked and went to third on Grimm's single, and this time, with first base occupied, it was not orthodox strategy, of course, to walk Hartnett. It would have been a good thing to do, however, as the catcher hit a high fly to right, the wind carrying the ball over the bleacher screen for a home run, Gabby scoring behind Stephenson and Grimm.

To continue the story of the Cub scoring through to the very bitter end, the enemy added three unearned runs in the sixth. With one out, Hartnett reached first on Maranville's low throw and English bunted a single to right, sending Hartnett to third. Bush hit a grounder down the first base line and Bottomley raced in with such reckless abandon and awkwardness that he fell sprawling, his glove flying off his hand. Hartnett scored on this error and Bush reached first. Beck then singled to right, scoring English and, after Hald relieved Rhem, Maguire singled to left, scoring Bush. Webb then walked to fill the bases, but Hack Wilson hit into a double play.

Hald retired for a pinch hitter in the eighth and Littlejohn and Andy High made errors in the inning to give the Cubs their eighth run. With one out, High made a low throw of Beck's grounder and Maguire singled to left, Beck stopping at second. Maranville was in his regular position at short and Frisch was where he belonged, far from second, but Littlejohn wheeled and threw right over second base. Beck romped home on the silly error but Douthit recovered the ball and threw out Maguire, who tried to reach third. That was all the Cub scoring and now we will take up the Cardinal attack.

How Cardinals Scored.

The score was one to nothing when Jimmy Wilson led off in the third inning with a double to right.

RHEM COMES HOME FOR EXAMINATION OF INFLAMED TONSIL

CHICAGO, June 23. CHARLES FLINT RHEM, Cardinal pitcher, departed for St. Louis tonight to have his throat examined. He has been bothered by an inflamed tonsil for the past week.

By J. Roy Stockton

Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Hack Wilson and Gabby Hartnett punched Flint Rhem for two homers which netted four runs this afternoon and the Cardinals, playing like the married men at a yokels' picnic, lost the final game of the series to the Cubs, 8 to 4. In addition to making four errors in the field, the men of Bill McKechnie ran the bases as if striving for the dumb-bell championship of the world, thus nullifying their 11 hits off Guy Bush.

Chicago drives which landed outside the playing field produced four runs before the Cardinals could solve Bush for a tally, but even when runs thus had become very valuable and necessary in clusters, the Cardinals declined to exercise ordinary judgment on the sacks.

Hack Wilson hit his home run to start the second inning and a bit of effective thinking was done by the Cardinals in the same frame. Stephenson followed the home run by drawing a walk and Grimm doubled to left, putting Stephenson on third. Rhem walked Hartnett, filling the bases to get at the weak-hitting English, and the shortstop, dropped to eighth place in the batting order because of his lack of attacking power, justified the move by bouncing to Rhem for a double play. Bush then grounded out and the inning, including a home run, two walks and a double, had produced only one Chicago run.

Cubs a Bit Lucky.

In the fourth, with one out, Stephenson walked and went to third on Grimm's single, and this time, with first base occupied, it was not orthodox strategy, of course, to walk Hartnett. It would have been a good thing to do, however, as the catcher hit a high fly to right, the wind carrying the ball over the bleacher screen for a home run, Gabby scoring behind Stephenson and Grimm.

To continue the story of the Cub scoring through to the very bitter end, the enemy added three unearned runs in the sixth. JONES AND FARRELL TIE AT 294 IN U. S. OPEN

Playoff of Deadlock Will Be Held Today; Hancock a Surprise

By Alan J. Gould

Associated Press Sports Editor.

CHICAGO, June 23.—The greatest amateur of them all, Bobby Jones of Atlanta, and the country's best dressed professional star, Johnny Farrell of New York, finished today in a tie for the open golf championship of the United States in the tournament at Olympia Field.

Each completed the regulation 72-hole competition wtih totals of 294, Farrell with rounds of 77—74—71—72 and Jones with cards of 73—71—73—77. In the fourth playoff in six years and the third in which Jones has participated, they will meet tomorrow at 36 holes, to decide the champion and successor to the Black Scot, Tommy Armour of Washington.

The play-off, first ever scheduled for 36 holes, will start at 10 a. m. (Central daylight time) with the second round at 2 p. m. If they are still tied at the end of that route, the match will go over to Monday.

Jones and Farrell finished deadlocked at the top of the big international field after a surprising and dramatic finish in which the third central figure and "dark horse," Roland Hancock of Wilmington, N. C., blew up on the last two holes with the championship and all its gold and glory in his grasp. He finished third, one stroke away, with 295.

Hancock's Sad Finish.

Hancock, with only two holes to go and needing only par to beat his rivals by two strokes, heard the crowd yell "three cheers for the new champion," as he sank his par three on the sixteenth and went to the seventeenth tee. Whether this echoing shout or the delay taxed his nerves on the seventeenth tee or the swirling rush of the big gallery unnerved him, Hancock's game collapsed and he took a brace of 6s on the last two holes, where par was 4 and 5, to see the title slip from him in a tragic crash.

At that only six inches, the distance by which he missed his last putt on the final hole, stood between Hancock and a tie that would have made it a triple play-off. The 200-pound Southerner wound up with scores of 74-77-72-72—295.

Hancock's finish left the two bigger stars of the golfing firmament out in front—Farrell, after a sensational comeback with rounds of 71-72 and Jones, the pace-setter for two previous rounds after a final tour of the No. 4 links that nearly blasted his chances of having anything to say about the championship.

Jones Slips But Recovers.

Never before in championship competition has Jones skidded or slumped to the extent he did today. Two strokes ahead of the field at the half way mark yesterday, he held this advantage at the close of the 54-hole mark as he shot a 73, marred by only one bad hole. He was seven strokes ahead of Farrell as they started the final day's play.

Farrell was the first to finish and put up the mark to shoot at but Jones saw his big lead dwindle steadily as he encountered all sorts of trouble, particularly over one stretch of five holes—the sixth to tenth, inclusive—where Bobby dropped the unheard of total for him, of seven strokes to old man par.

But he yanked himself back from the brink in masterly fashion to shoot the next five holes in one under par.

The Best Shot of the Meet.

Needing par 5 at the eighteenth to tie Farrell, Jones hooked his tee shot wildly to the woods and put his second in the deep grass of a ditch crossing the fairway, 150 yards from the green. Here Jones made the most heroic and sensational shot he has fired in many a day. With fully 10,000 spectators looking on, Bobby coolly tossed his cigarette away, waded in with a mashie niblick and brought a mighty cheer as he hit the ball straight and true to the green. It was 25 feet from the pin and still the chance of a birdie

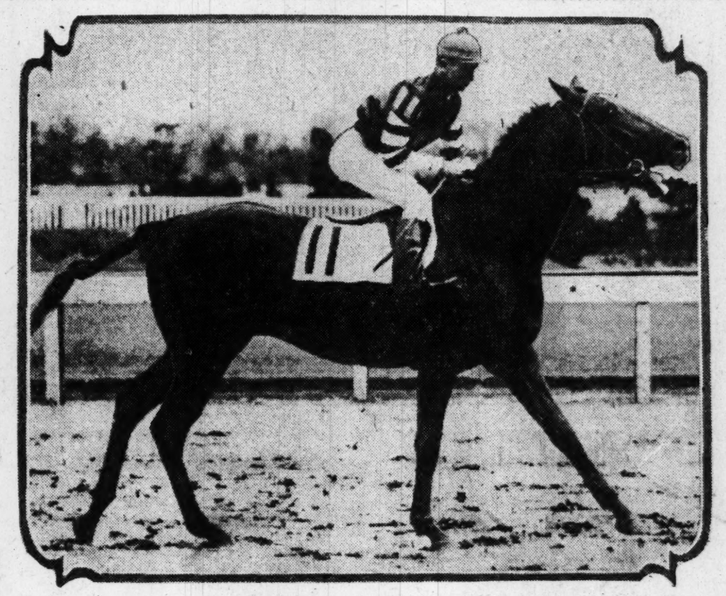
Won His Second $25,000 Derby at Latonia



TORO

McLean's great horse showed real class over the full derby route. In four derby starts he has finished first twice, second once and third once.

Toro, With Misstep Out, Romps Home First in Latonia Derby

By the Associated Press.

LATONIA, June 23.—E. B. McLean's Toro won the forty-fifth renewal of the Latonia Derby here today. P. Reuter's Galahad was second and H. P. Headley's Pigeon Hole third. The time was 2:41 1-5.

Toro led throughout the mile and a half and beat Galahad by eight lengths. A length and a half back of Galahad came Pigeon Hole, to take the show money. Pigeon Hole was a length and a half in front of Audley Farm's Bobashela.

Misstep, winner of the Fairmount Derby, Toro's greatest rival, was scratched before post time. Leo J. Marks, his owner, saying that the track would not suit his entry.

Toro was the overwhelming favorite. He paid $3.10 for a $2 ticket and netted his owner $22,250 for his share of the purse.

By his victory today Toro steps out in front of the 3-year-olds of the Middle West, with two Derby victories to his credit—the American and the Latonia. In his other two starts Toro finished third and second, respectively.

C. W. Riedinger's Reenie was the victor in the sixth race, which was for 2-year-olds. This was a sprint of five and one-half furlongs. Roy was second and Lord Braedalbane third. Reenie and Roy engaged in a long stretch duel and there was doubt about who had won until the numbers were hung up.

aAudley Farm entry.

Toro began rapidly, made the pace for the first mile under strong restraint then took a long lead with a rush on the stretch turn and continuing strongly won easing up. Gallahad dropped back after moving up fast in first half-mile, then came again after a mile and outlasted Pigeon Hole. Latter was rated a good distance out of it to final four furlongs where he moved up menacingly and tired in last furlong. Bobashela was much used forcing the early pace and tired badly after a mile. Easter Stockings outrun after the first three-quarters, was eased when beaten.

$2 mutuels paid: Toro, win $3.10, place $2.64, show out; Galahad, place $4.10, show out; Pigeon Hole, show out.

Wray Brown Wins Iowa Net Title

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 23.—Wray Brown, St. Louis candidate for the United States Davis Cup team, today won the men's singles tennis championship of Iowa by defeating Harris Coggeshall, local star, in a stirring three-set final, 6—1, 6—1, 6—2.

Miss Marjorie Gladman of Santa Monica, Cal., the national girls' champion, added another title to her list by defeating Ruth Bailey of St. Louis for the women's single tennis championship of Iowa at the Wakonda courts in straight sets. The scores were 6—0, 6—1.

Miss Gladman had too much class fo rthe Missouri player, who was unable to match strokes with those displayed by the California player.

John Doeg of Santa Monica, Cal., and George O'Connell of Chicago carried off the men's doubles title, taking a hard-fought four-set struggle from Brown and Ted Eggman of East St. Louis, 6—2, 5—7, 7—5, 6—3. Doeg's smashing service was broken only once, that when Brown and Eggman cracked it to take the second set. O'Connell's quick volleys and Doeg's ramming drives undid the St. Louis pair.

Watts Gunn Wins Southern Title

By the Associated Press.

BROOK HOLLOW GOLF CLUB, Dallas, Tex., June 23.—Watts Gunn of Atlanta, Ga., won the Southern Amateur Golf championship here today by defeating Ossie Carlton of Houston, Tex., in the 36-hole final round. The score was 7 up and 6 to play.

The victory rewarded one of Gunn's greatest ambitions, the right to have his name inscribed on the gigantic Adair cup, emblematic of the Southern championship, along with those of Bobby Jones and Perry Adair, his fellow townsmen.

Harvard Defeats Yale Nine, 2 to 1

MISS PAYSON IS VICTOR IN GOLF TOURNAMENT

PITTSBURG, June 23.—Miss Helen Payson of Portland, Me., today won the annual women's invitation golf tournament of the Allegheny Country Club here, scoring 165 for the 36 holes. She added 183 to her 82 score yesterday in the first 18 holes.

Virginia Van Wie, Chicago, finished second with a score of 87-82—169, and Fritzi Stifel, of Wheeling, W. Va., was third with 89-86—175. Louise Fordyce, of Youngstown, O., the defending champion, finished fourth with a score of 85-92—175.

Dr. Wolling Wins Title

PORTLAND, Ore., June 23. — Dr. O. F. Willing, veteran Portland golfer, won the Pacific Northwest golf championship title here today when he defeated Don Moe, 18-year-old Oregon State champion, 8 and 6.

ENGLISH WIN ONLY ONE MATCH IN DAVIS CUP PLAY SEMIFINAL

FELIXSTOWE, England, June 23.—The English Davis cup team salvaged one match out of the five played in the European zone semifinal against Italy by breaking even in the two final singles matches yesterday. Italy already had clinched the victory by winning the first three encounters.

In yesterday's matches, Edward Higgs, first ranking British player, scored England's only victory by defeating De Stefani of Italy in a thrilling five-set battle. The scores were 6—1, 3—6, 6—2, 5—7, 6—2. Baron H. L. de Morphurgo, ambidextrous Italian star, brought the final count up to 4 to 1 for Italy by winning the last singles match from J. C. Gregory of England with the loss of only three games. De Morpurgo won by 6—0, 6—1, 6—2.

By Jack Alexander.

Socrates, looking mournfully across the kitchen table at Xantippe or a public utilities publicity man facing the Federal Trade Commission, had more mental privacy than did Garland Buckeye and Emil Levsen, two visiting firemen from Cleveland who tried to make monkeys out of our Browns yesterday at Sportsman's Park.

Previous sweethearts and personal correspondence were not exposed to public view, but the fact that Garland and Emil had little on the ball except what some selling plater contributed in a South Side packing house was so skillfully brought out that it was apparent even to the superheated radio announcers. The subtle manner in which this was delineated consisted of knocking the ball all around inside the ball yard and once outside it for a grand total of 19 hits. The score was 10 to 3.

They Looked Like Champs.

It was rather a sorry display for the visitors, but the Browns looked like champions. Naturally they would beside such a collection of pants pressers, but Howley's men really did show class, not only at the plate, as the box score shows, but in the field, where they shone with the polish of a big league club.

Where these boys are going is not quite certain. Yesterday's victory was the seventeenth in 24 games played since the Browns returned home from destructive wars in the East. Next week they go on another crusade, and that invasion of the territory of the Goths and Huns will determine largely where the team will plop for the season.

Two Homers for Joe Sewell.

Sam Gray's pitching yesterday was good enough to win a closer game than this massacre proved to be. It was Sam's fourth victory over Cleveland this season. Only Joe Sewell, chunky shortstop who graduated from Alabama U. when Waite Hoyt was a schoolboy in Brooklyn, was able to do much with Gray, and all he did was hit two homers.

What a trifle in these days, when high explosives have invaded the ball parks. None of the others did anything and Joe gave up trying to win single-handed after his first two trips to the plate, the occasions of his homers.

The Brownies, on the other hand, could not miss the ball, so enticingly did Buckeye and Levsen serve up their offerings.

Runs in Seven Innings.

In every one of the eight innings they batted, the Brownies scored and hit except the seventh. Fred Schulte, who has been getting razzed lately for failing to hit, got four out of four, including a double and triple, and Heine Manush, who was not good enough for the Cadillac Square boys, socked four out of five and the fifth one almost knocked Buckeye's teeth out. Heinie drove in two runs, as did Schulte, his hits including a triple and a home run. A couple of double plays busted up two nice chances for runs, too, or the score would have been larger.

Buckeye was an easy mark from the first pitch. McNeely and Melillo singled in the first inning and Manush slammed one at the box that had "single" stamped on it, but Buckeye, defending himself with his glove, snagged the drive and doubled Melillo off first. McNeely scoring on Schulte's single.

Blue opened the second with a single and was forced by Bettencourt. After Schang had walked, Gray singled Bettencourt across, but Schang was trying for third, McNeely got another single before the inning was over but the scoring had stopped.

The Blasting of Buckeye.

The third inning was also opened with a single, this time by Manush and Schulte followed it with another, putting Manush on second. They advanced on a sacrifice by Kress, and Manush was out at the plate on Blue's grounder to Morgan. But Bettencourt came through with a single to score Schulte, and Schang performed a similar favor for Blue. Then Buckeye was taken out and Levsen went in.

Levsen ended the inning by fanning Gray and, when he retired the first two batters in the fourth, it appeared that a Brownie killer had gone to the mound. That is, until Manush tripled to right and Schulte came through with another three-bagger, scoring Heine. Schulte's fly appeared to land inside the pavilion and bounce out, but the umpires ruled that it had hit the wall and that stood, Schulte dying on third.

Levsen Gets Larruped.

Blue scored when Bettencourt sent Jamieson to the fence to get his fly. With one out in the sixth, Levsen passed Melillo and Manush leaned into a fast one and lifted it into the right-field seats for a home run. Then Schulte doubled and scored on Kress' single. Blue walked.

And then a funny thing happened. Bettencourt sent a fly to deep right and Kress had crossed the plate before Summa caught the ball. It was then too late for Ralph to get back to second and the double play stopped the scoring.

The seventh was scoreless, but Manush started the eighth with a single and advanced on a passed ball. He went to third on Schulte's sacrifice fly to Jamieson and scored

AMERICAN DAVIS CUP PLAYERS MAKE CLEAN SWEEP IN ENGLISH EVENT

TEAM MATCH AND LONDON TENNIS TITLES CAPTURED BY U. S. DAVIS CUP PLAYERS

Czecho-Slovakia Wins Place In European Zone Tennis Final

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia, June 23.

By the Associated Press.

SPLITTING even in the last two singles matches with Holland's Davis cup team, Czecho-Slovakia today advanced to the final round of European zone competition.

Czecho-Slovakia now meets Italy in the finals to determine which shall face the United States, American zone finalists, for the right to challenge France, present holder of the trophy.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 23.—America's Davis Cup Players were sweepingly victorious in British matches today, a two-man team consisting of John Hennessey and George Lott winning an international contest with England at Eastbourne, William T. Tilden taking the London singles championship and Tilden and Francis T. Hunter carrying off the doubles title.

Tilden, in rare form, defeated his doubles partner, Hunter, in the final of the London tournament, 6—3, 6—2, 6—1, then paired with him to down the strong Australian combination of Hopman and Crawford and capture the doubles title after a five-set struggle, 4—6, 6—1, 8—6, 6—8 6—4.

Meanwhile Lott and Hennessey, younger members of the United States Davis Cup team, were emerging victorious in their team match with some of England's promising players, breaking even today with one victory and one defeat in singles after taking a 2 to 1 lead by taking the doubles yesterday. The Americans won by three matches to two.

Briton Wins Five-Set Match.

H. W. Austin, Cambridge University tennis captain, who defeated Lott on Thursday in four sets, conquered Hennessey today in five by scores of 6—3, 3—6, 6—2, 1—6, 6—2, but Lott carried the deciding match against N. Sharpe, 6—3, 5—7, 6—2, 6—3.

Perhaps the best match of the day to watch was that between Tilden and Hunter, winners of the Wimbledon doubles crown a year ago, and the strong Australian combination of Hopman and Crawford. With the Australians putting up a splendid exhibition of co-ordinated team play, the outcome of the match was in doubt until the last two games.

Americans Win Uphill Match.

Tilden and Hunter started out carelessly and the Australians playing faultless tennis, took the first set. The Americans recovered and won the second easily with Tilden playing at top speed, but they won the third with difficulty, 8—6, as Hunter lapsed, and lost the fourth by the same score inverted. With the sets even, Tilden and Hunter then exerted themselves to the utmost to pull the match out of the fire, 6—4.

Tilden's win over Hunter was less spectacular. Tilden taking three straight sets although Hunter put up a better game than the score seems to indicate.

This pair won the doubles final and were opponents in the singles final, Tilden defeating his countryman in the singles, in straight sets.

MRS. STETSON DEFEATS MRS. HURD, 2 AND 1, IN INVITATION MEET

SHAWNEE - ON - DELAWARE, June 23.—Mrs. G. H. Stetson, of Huntingdon Valley, Philadelphia, shooting the same consistent golf that two years ago carried her to the national championship, today defeated Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, of Merion, also a former national champion, 2 and 1, in the final round of the Shawnee Country Club women's invitation tournament. The course was heavy from rain.

FIFTY COMPETE IN WOMEN'S GOLF PLAY

Fifty women golfers ompeted for prizes in the district association's weekly meeting at the St. Clair Country Club. Mrs. C. C. Crossman and Mrs. A. F. Eisenbeiss had the low net scores for the first and second flights and Mrs. C. E. Hill and Mrs. H. Bancroft were low in the third and fourth flights.

Prizes for the nine-hole gross scores in the third and fourth flights went to Mrs. C. P. Renner and Mrs. G. C. Otrich. The blind hole was won by Mrs. R. J. Kohn and Miss Isabelle Fulton.

WHITBREAD GETS HOLE-IN-ONE IN T-M PRACTICE

DES MOINES, Ia., June 23.—Scouting expeditions, composed of 125 early entrants seeking advance practice for the annual trans-Mississippi golf tournament here next week, today pursued par on the Wakonda Club course, on which the championship battles will be staged.

Reinforcements tomorrow are expected to bring the final entry to near 200 golfers, comprising many of the best shots between the east bank of the Mississippi and the continental divide. Qualifying rounds are scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, with the match play to get under way Wednesday morning with the 32 scorers paired in the championship bracket. The final is scheduled for Saturday.

Among those who today tested Wakonda's fairways and greens was the diminutive Johnny Goodman of Omaha, youthful star who "bummed" to Colorado Springs for the 1927 tournament and returned home with the trans-Mississippi championship.

What might be interpreted as a good omen for Elliott Whitbread of St. Louis, Missouri champion, was his hole-in-one this morning on the short 140-yard ninth hole. Jimmy Manion, St. Louis district titleholder, who was playing with him, turned in a card of 78 for the course. Par is 74.

CHICAGO SCORES FIVE RUNS IN ONE INNING TO BEAT TIGERS, 6-4

DETROIT, Mich., June 23.—One big inning in which they bunched hits to score five runs gave Chicago a 6 to 4 victory over Detroit in the opening game of the series today. Charley Gehringer, Tiger second baseman, got two home runs off Faber, but no one was on base on either occasion. A Detroit rally in the eighth inning fell short with three runs when two more were needed to tie the count.

Karl Hodge, Triple A player, defeated Harry Schaberg, O'Fallon Park star, in the opening match of the Missouri Valley tennis championship at the Triple A Club yesterday afternoon. The contest was a second-round affair, each having drawn a bye in the first round. Hodge surprised by winning so decisively, the score being 6—0, 6—2.

Only two other matches were played. William Bascom, local junior star, defeated H. D. Smith, Triple A, 6—2, 6—3, and Ray Epstein advanced through the default of Walter Finger in the third set. Finger won the first set, 6—1, but Epstein took the second, 6—4, and was leading, 1—0, when Finger defaulted.

All first and second round singles matches between local players entered in the men's singles and junior singles must be completed today, according to Dr. Frank Diekneite, official referee. A number of out-of-town players are expected today, although not required ot report until tomorrow.

The men's singles entries contain the names of 94 players from 23 cities. Of this number, 45 are visiting players. A total of 41 players will compete in the junior singles event, which opens this morning.

Grandstands seating 200 persons have been erected on two sides of the championship courts. An admission charge of 50 cents for west stand seats and 25 cents for east stand seats will be made today and continue for the next four days. Beginning Friday, the admission will be $1 and 50 cents. Series tickets costing $3.30 will be available until Tuesday night. They may be purchased at the grounds or at 921 Locust street.

Eddie Roush Quits New York Giants; Says He's Through

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Eddie Roush has jumped the Giants. The brilliant center feldier, long one of the stars of the National League, yesterday picked up his glove and shoes, walked out of the Giants' clubhouse and told Roger Bresnahan, "acting manager" in place of the injured McGraw, who is not with the club: "I am through; you can go to thunder." He walked through the Philly dressing room muttering: "I will never stand that abuse. I have been trying to quit for five years, and now is the time."

It is said that the Giants' board of managers accused Eddie of not keeping in condition.

Roush's desertion of the club is the first sputtering of a volcano of discontent which has the Giant machine on its hip and threatens to destroy the morale of the New Yorkers.

According to well-posted men traveling with the club, an open insurrection against the arbitrary, pussy-footing tactics of those in charge of the New York club at present is likely to break out any day.

"Demand For Liver Harasses the Butcher."

'TIS the voice of the butcher I hear him complain:
"Alas! I am all out of liver again!
Those liver addicts who are crashing the mart
Insist upon liver and won't have a heart.

"I offer them sweetbreads and kidneys and tripe
And say for what ails 'em those things are a pipe.
This shortage of liver would pester the Saints.
I'm tired of hearing their liver complaints."

"Those doctors have certainly get me in bad;
My business is ruined because of a fad.
They ought to eat sirloin and chicken by rights

Looks Like F. D.

Babe Ruth says it wouldn't surprise him to see the Browns finish in first division. Babe is nothing if not conservative.

On the other fist fans of St. Louis would be greatly surprised if they finished anywhere else.

And with the Babe himself in person playing in the outfield they'd just about win the pennant.

Babe further displays his conservatism by saying that there isn't a man on the Yankee club who thinks they'll breeze in. Demonstrating that the Bam is not without a subtle sense of humor that he keeps concealed in the keys of somebody's typewriter.

Is This Justice?

Hack Wilson was fined $100 by President Heydler for punching a fan while the fan who invited the assault by hurling epithets at Hack was fined $1 by the Judge. Demonstrating that it is cheaper to receive than to give.

However, Hack refused to follow through and press the suit, otherwise the receiving end of the battery might have fared worse. Magnanimous we calls it.

Jim Bottomley had a home run washed out in the seventh inning in Chicago. Now Jim knows how Babe Ruth felt on a similar occasion recently.

Judging by the attention paid in Chicago to the referee's opinion as to the merits of the fight, we take it he is there simply to preserve order in the ring. Ask Ace Hudkins, he knows.

CUHEL SETS NEW WORLD'S RECORD IN WINNING 400-METER HURDLES

VICTORIAN WINS GOING AWAY IN BROOKDALE RACE

By the Associated Press.

AQUEDUCT, N. Y., June 23.—Harry Payne Whitney's Victorian, with Ray Workman in the saddle, scored an easy victory in the thirty-seventh running of the $5000 added Brookdale Handicap here this afternoon. The fast son of Whisk Broom II carried 117 pounds easily and won galloping from Wheatley Stable's Diavolo. Sepoy, an outsider, was third.

Victorian, held at 4 to 5 in the betting, ran the mile and one-eighth over a difficult track in 1:50. The race was worth $7850.

There was not much to the race. Workman sent his mount to the front at the rise of the barrier and rated him along evenly. The colt increased his lead at every stride, and when coming into the stretch had a four-length lead over Diavolo. Diavolo tired slightly, and Victorian drew away to six lengths as the field flashed under the wire. Diavolo easily took second place by four lengths from Sepoy.

Soul of Honor Wins.

The Audley Farm's Soul of Honor, perfectly ridden by George Fields, won the Great American Stakes of $13,800, leading home a crack field of juveniles. The colt carried 115 pounds, followed the pace and stood a long drive. G. D. Widener's Jack High was second, with H. P. Whitney's Zoom third. Click was fourth.

The five furlongs were run in the splendid time of :59 2-5. Click, carrying 125 pounds, broke running and quickly ran into a long lead. He swung into the stretch by a wide margin and appeared to have plenty, but in the next furlong he curled up like a jackknife and stopped badly. Meanwhile, Fields was riding Soul of Honor hard, and closing gamely, won by a nose. Jack High took the place, a length and a half from Zoom.

Fire Watch Wins in Drive.

The Fair Stables' Fire Watch, with Fields up, won the first race by a head from Omar's Double, with the favorite, Galantry, third. Fire Watch ran a great race. He was in close quarters to the final furlong, where he finally got through, closed gamely and won by a head. Omar's Double took the place by a length and a half.

Fredden Rock, favorite, was an easy winner of the steeplechase run over the two-mile course. Devil Kin was second and Sarostat third.

Ritzy, with E. Watters in the saddle, scored a nose victory in the fifth when she defeated the heavily played good thing Ready, with Florinassa third. It was a close finish and Ritzy just got up to win.

Larock won the sixth, which was a mile and five-sixteenths gallop. Alita Allen was second and Effie third. Larock made all the pace and won by a length and a half. Alita Allen was second by four lengths.

The last race was won by Ruby Keller with Sam Beau second and Sonata third.

LEE FOHL NAMED DES MOINES PILOT

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 23.—Lee Fohl, veteran major league manager, today was appointed pilot of the Des Moines Western League baseball club by President E. Lee Keyser. He will join the local team, now trailing in the race, at Tulsa tomorrow.

Fohl, who spent 13 years in the American League as manager, successively of the Cleveland, St. Louis and Boston clubs, started in organized baseball with the Des Moines team 25 years ago.

COCKRELL, ST. LOUIS, BREAKS MIDWEST 100-METER MARK IN QUALIFYING OLYMPIC TRIALS

Headlight A. C. to Send Seven Athletes to Olympic Trials

THE Headlight Athletic Club will have seven candidates for the Olympic track team in the final trials early in July. Three men—Aubrey Cockrell, Rufus Haggard and Robert Leffler—who qualified yesterday at Iowa City, and four women will compete.

The women's team will include Catherine Maguire, national high jump champion, who will also compete in the broad jump and shot put; Dee Boeckmann and Olga Becker who will run in the 800-meter event, and Florence Wright, competing in the 200-meter dash.

The national trials for women will be held at Newark, N. J., July 4, and the men's trials at Cambridge on July 7. The Headlight team, accompanied by Coach Harry Riddick, (will leave for New York next Saturday.

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., June 23.—Two University of Iowa Athletes showing championship form dominated the field of Olympic team possibilities who qualified for next week's final trials at the mid-western tryouts today.

Frank Cuhel of Cedar Rapids turned in a remarkable performance to excel the world's record in the 400-meter hurdles by four-tenths of a second. Taking the sticks in 53.4 seconds, Cuhel bettered the official world record of 53.8, made in 1925, by S. Petterson of Sweden.

George Baird, big ten indoor record holder in the 440-yard dash, brought the 3000 spectators to their feet again when he did the 440-meter trial in 47.9 seconds, five-tenths of a second slower than the world record. Baird's performance eclipsed the American record of 48.1, made in 1924, and also the Midwestern record of E. C. Wilson of Iowa in 1924.

Conger Wins 1500-Meter.

Ray Conger, one of America's bright hopes in the 800 or 1500 meter races, qualified for the finals in the latter by winning a thrilling duel from Winston Hooper, Southern Methodist flash, in 4:05, to beat the Midwest mark of 4:05.1 made by G. E. Nolis in 1924.

Conger also showed his class in the 800-meter race by winning by a yard over Joe Gunn, Iowa University, in 1:58.3. Conger came from behind to win in the last 50 yards.

Two of the eight Midwestern A. A. U. records which fell were victims of the skill of St. Louis athletes. Aubrey Cockrell, former University of Texas star, wearing the colors of the Headlight A. C. of St. Louis, covered the 100-meter dash in 10.8 seconds, to lower the old Midwestern record, held by Paul of Oskaloosa, Ia., since 1924, by one-fifth of a second. The St. Louis phantom also captured the 200-meter sprint in :21 7-10.

Haggard Takes High Jump.

Cockrell's teammate, R. W. Haggard, skimmed over the bamboo at 6 feet, 2½ inches, in the high jump, beating the old Mid-Western mark by 1½ inches. The previous record was held by Lyons of Omaha A. C., since 1923. Eugene Leffler of St. Louis, also wearing the colors of the Headlight A. C., but competing unattached, broke into the scoring column in two events. He qualified for the final Olympic trials in the 200-meter dash by placing second to Cockrell and also landed fourth place in the 100-meter sprint. Wayne Jones of Neath, Mo., the high school youth who won both sprints in the junior Olympics at St. Louis, likewise was among the finishers in both dashes, taking third in the 100-meter event and fourth in the longer distance. Gerald Murchison, of St. Louis, brother of the famous Loren Murchison also was entered in the two-days events but despite treatments from the Iowa Athletic Department medical staff during the last four days, was unable to recover from a pulled muscle in his leg, sustained at St. Louis last week, so he did not start in either race.

In the 400-meter dash, which Baird of Iowa, won in 47 9-10, a new American record, Ben Daily of Westminster College, Fulton Mo., took second tied the old American record of 48 1-10 seconds.

One other Missouri man was among those to place. Elton O. Smith, unattached, of Springfield, Mo., with three others for fourth place in the high jump, with a leap of 6 feet, 7¾ inches.

HUBBARD WINS BROAD JUMP BUT OLD ANKLE INJURY BOTHERS HIM

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., June 23.—Nineteen athletes of the Allegheny region of the A. A. U. qualified today to compete with athletes from other sections of the United States in the National Olympic tryouts at Harvard, July 6 and 7.

Dehart Hubbard, Cincinnati Negro jumping ace, flung his ebony legs through the air 23 feet, 1 inch.

Hubbard failed to approach his world record of 25 feet, 10⅝ inches, made in the national collegiate meet of 1925, but outclassed the best jumpers of Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, Virginia and Western Pennsylvania. He forced Pete Anson, Ohio State, who qualified for the Harvard finals by placing in the western conference championships, to take second place today with a leap of 22 feet, 2 inches.

Hubbard's Ankle Hurt.

Hubbard did not extend himself. He experienced new trouble with an old ankle sprain of a year ago and dropped out of the competition in the hop, step and jump. The committee of judges, however, said they believed he would be permitted to compete in this event at Boston also should his ankle sufficiently improve.

Tom Sharkey, former dash man of Miami University, clipped off the 200 meters in 21 4-5 seconds, one-fifth of a second slower than the Olympic record set by Hahn in 1904.

Other qualifiers were:

100 meters, R. F. Bowen, Pittsburg A. C., Howard Kriss, Ohio State University.

200-meter run, Tom Sharkey, Dayton; Kenneth Wibecan, unattached, Cincinnati.

800-meter run, William Gess, University of Kentucky.

400-meter hurdles, Dwight Kane, Ohio Wesleyan; Charles Coulter, Cleveland.

High jump, Edgar Ramsey, Dayton; C. W. Anson, Ohio State University; Harold Dixon, North Central High School, Columbus;; Ceola Bramea, Dayton, and J. A. Abernathy, St. Xavier College.

Sixteen-pound shotput, John Anderson, Glendale, O.; George Vossler, Miami University.

Discus—Pete Rasmus, Ohio State University.

Javelin—Charles Stone, E. G. Justis, William and Mary College.

Bad for the Outdoor Boys.

A SEVERE cutting of guarantees for journeyman ring luminaries may be expected, ere long. Everywhere we read tales of promotional grief suffered by the men who put on the big stuff outdors.

Gene Straus tried it here and was lucky to break even after two postponements. Signor Humberto Fugazy, the Tex Rickard of Brooklyn has twice postponed the Risko-Godfrey affair due to bad weather conditions, and faces a deficit. Jim Mullen took in $125,000 in gate receipts at Chicago but lost $15,000 on the Walker-Hudkins struggle.

The hazards of the weather and the enormous guarantees asked by fighters today have just about exhausted the red ink supply. The time is not distant when the fighter will have to sign his name to an agreement to box for a PERCENTAGE, and not a guarantee—and that is as it should be.

A boxer is worth what he can attract to the ticket office; and should share, with the promoter, the risks that go with the game. If not boxing will pass out from lack of promoters. Only a few game enough to take a big chance are still in the field.

Gloomy in Rickardville.

THE outlook for this year's title show is gloomier than Mudville the day that "Mighty Casey" shattered the atmosphere. Practically no ballyhoo has been nicely, keeping with the field until he reached the half-way mark and then began to draw away with a powerful stroke to win by a yard and a half from Paul Wyatt of Uniontown, Pa., and clip two seconds from the world's standard.

The finish was the most spectacular of the meet thus far, as four other entries bettered the former time. Tauffer, David Young and George Fissler of the New York Athletic Club, and Richard Hinch of the Naval Academy, trailed the two leaders in that order and they finished inches apart.

Mickey Riley of the Los Angeles Athletic Club assumed the diving title held by Des Jardine when he beat the former champion by two points. Al White of San Francisco finished third in the diving trials.

Two additional swimmers were given berths in a special 200 meter race to decide the personnel of the relay team. The first four finishers in the 100 meter free style Friday were selected and the other three swam it out to decide the two vacancies.

Paul Samson, former University of Michigan captain, was the first to gain the honor, when he splashed his way over the route in 2:23 2-5. Harry Clancy of the Penn Athletic Club, Philadelphia, gained the other position, when he defeated Albert Swartz of Northwestern University in a swim off after both had tied in their respective heats. Each of them had finished a preliminary in the morning in 2:24, but when the final test came, Swartz was unequal to the task.

Lester Crabbe of the Outrigger Canoe Club, Honolulu, won the 1500 free style race, finishing in 20:49 3-5, 35 yards ahead of Ray Ruddy, 16-year-old member of the New York A. C. Austin Clapp, Hollywood, Cal., high school star, was third, 30 yards behind Ruddy. By their performances, all three qualified to represent the United States in the events.

Summaries:

1500-METER FREE-STYLE OLYMPIC FINAL—Won by Lester Crabbe (Outrigger Canoe Club, Honolulu); second, Raymont Ruddy (New York A. C.); third Austin Clapp (Hollywood A. C.); fourth, Frank Pritchard (Buffalo Y. M. C. A.). Time, 20:49 3-5.

100-METER BACK-STROKE OLYMPIC FINAL—Won by George Kojac (New York Boys' Club); second, Paul Wyatt (Uniontown, Pa.); third, Walter Laufer (Lake Shore A. C., Chicago); fourth, David Young (New York A. C.); fifth, Richard Hinch (U. S. Naval Academy). Time, :09 3-5 (betters world's record).

NATIONAL A. A. U. 10-FOOT SPRINGBOARD DIVING CHAMPIONSHIP—Won by Mickel Reilly (Los Angeles A. C.), 145.80; second, Peter Desjardines (Miami Beach Pool), 143.36; third, Al White (Athens R. C., San Francisco), 139.81; fourth, Harold Smith (Los Angeles A. C.), 135.18; fifth, Walter Colbath, Northwestern University), 126.25; Sixth, Walter Grandy (Detroit Athletic Club), 123.75.

Yale Victor in Polo Tourney

By the Associated Press.

RYE, N. Y., June 23.—Yale won its third inter-collegiate polo championship this afternoon at the Westchester Biltmore Club field by defeating the Pennsylvania Military College in the final round of the title tournament by a score of 11 to 5.

In the third chukker the Chester, Pa., player gave Yale a big scare when Bower came through with 2 goals, tying the score. Captain Balwin, playing his last game for Yale, was the star for his team, scoring four times. Jones of P. M. C. also played well. Bower made four out of five goals for his team.

WORLD RECORD SET IN OLYMPIC SWIM TRYOUTS

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., June 23.—Establishment of a new world's record by George Kojac for the 100 meter backstroke and the dethroning of Pete Desjardines as national spring board diving champion, a title he has had for three years, featured the Olympic swimming trials here today.

Kojac, who forced Johnny Weismuller to a new mark in the national meet several weeks ago on the Pacific Coast, shattered the record of 1:11 3-5 established by Walter Laufer of Chicago at Berlin in 1926. He rated his pace

More Bad Base-running

Maranville's double and Douthit's single in the eighth produced the second Cardinal run and then, in the ninth, with the Cubs still well in the lead, the Cardinals once more gummed up a rally by silly base running.

Bottomley walked to start the inning and stopped at third wisely on Hafey's double against the left field wall. Roettger singled to right, scoring Bottomley and Hafey, and then, when Jimmy Wilson singled to right, Roettger madly dashed for third. He was as well off on second as he would have been on third, as several more hits were necessary. Roettger was carrying only one of four runs the Cardinals needed to tie the score, but he overlooked this fact and was thrown out by Webb. That pulled Bush out of a bad spot and Maranville hit into a double play to end the game.

The defeat was the sixth of the trip for the Cardinals, who have won 19 games since leaving home almost a month ago. With the Reds losing again to the Pirates, the Cardinals retained their first place lead of four and one-half games over Cincinnati.

Grover Cleveland Alexander will pitch against the Reds tomorrow afternoon in the first game of a series of two, which will conclude the Cardinals' long road campaign. Jess Haines is due to work Monday. Pete Donohue probably will work for the Reds in the first game.

McKechnie's men will stop off at Indianapolis Tuesday and at Bloomington, Ill., Wednesday for exhibition games. They will arrive in St. Louis Wednesday night and open a series with the Pirates at Sportsman's Park, Thursday.

The weather again was threatening for the final with the Cubs and a poor Saturday crowd of 8000 attended.

Jimmy Wilson will welcome the two open dates. He has caught every game for the Cardinals, in fact every inning, since he was obtained from the Phillies, May 11. Wilson also caught every game but one while with the Phils, the one exception being Johnny Schuite day in St. Louis. He is entitled to a rest and Gus Mancuso will catch the exhibition games at Indianapolis and Bloomington.

The Great Road Record.

The victory gave the Cubs the honor of being the second team to win two games from the Cardinals on their long trip.

McKechnie's men defeated the Pirates in three of four games, took two from the Phils, broke even in four with the Giants, won three from the Dodgers, four from the Braves, two of three at Cincinnati and three of five from the Cubs.

There were a few brilliant plays mixed in with the Cardinal blunders. Maranville raced in fast for a barehand stop of Stephenson's bounder over Haid's head in the seventh and flipped to Bottomley for the putout.

Cuyler Benched.

After losing three out of four to the Cardinals, Manager McCarthy rearranged his battle front. He benched Cuyler for Earl Webb, sent Maguire to second base in place of McMillan and dropped English from second to eighth place in the batting order.

Rhem has pitched only two complete games on the trip. He went the route beating the Pirates, 7 to 1, May 29, and lost to the Giants, 4 to 3, June 7. He was knocked out in Philadelphia and failed to finish against the Braves, Reds and Cubs.

but Maranville struck out. Rhem sent a grounder to Maguire which would have scored Wilson from third but it merely moved him to the far corner, and Jimmy was stranded there when Douthit walked and was forced by High. Thus a chance to tie the score was overlooked.

Frisch started the fourth with a single to right but Bottomley fouled out and Hafey hit into a double play to end the inning.

The fifth inning saw more Cardinal blunders. Roettger led off with a single to right and went to third on Jimmy Wilson's single to center. Maranville then sent a short single to right, scoring Roettger, but Wilson tried for third and was thrown out. Webb to Beck. This was bad base running, as the Cubs had four runs and when the enemy has such a lead it is well to play for more than one run. Had Wilson stopped at second, a pinch hitter could have batted for Rhem and probably would have been sent in, but with one out and a man on first, Flint was allowed to bat and hit into a double play.

SWIMMING MEET AT NEW COLISEUM

The first of a series of swimming meets, to be held by the New Coliseum A. C. at the New Coliseum pool, will take place Wednesday evening. Five events, three for women and two for men, are carded. The program will begin at 7 o'clock.

The events for women are: 100-yard free style, 50-yard breast stroke and low board diving. Men will compete in the 100-yard free style and 100-yard breast stroke.

Entries should be filed with the New Coliseum A. CS.

Not Interested.

THE lackadaisical playing of the Detroit Tigers and their nonchalant attitude caused some wonder on the part of St. Louis fans.

Apparently the Tigers have a deep-seated belief that the Detroit club is a social institution designed for their entertainment and benefit.

A St. Louis fan who saw a recent game in Detroit, with the Tigers playing before a large home attendance, was amazed to note that the Detroit "not interested" attitude was maintained at home as well as abroad.

He declared that the fans apparently turned out for the main purpose of razzing the players and the players responded in kind. If a player made a good stop, the crowd shouted "accident!" at him. When Wingo missed a play, the crowd jeered and he turned and doffed his cap to the stands in mock appreciation. Once the first baseman thumbed his nose at grandstand critics.

"In all my life I have never seen a team so treated by fans, or fans so treated by ball players. There seemed an absolute lack of sympathy and understanding," was one observer's comment.

What a contrast to the hustling, snappy work of the Browns.

George Moriarty is finding out, we take it from this, that a manager's lot, like the policeman's, is "not a happy one."

There is some very fine material on the Detroit team and it is too bad that it is going to seed.

A Real Wrestling Match.

TWO wrestlers, Gus Kallio and Charley Fisher, candidate for middleweight honors now held by Johnny Meyers, will wrestle in private at the Chicago Athletic Association for $500 a side and the right to meet the champion for the title.

One explanation of this unusual method of settling a mat argument is that Chicago promoters thought so little of the matches that they would not even make a bid for the event.

Another view was that the match was arranged to be held in private so that the Chicago fans could not get a chance to see what a REAL wrestling match was like.

That last we esteem a dirty dig—only it doesn't dig deep enough.

COFFMAN AND GRANT DUE TO PITCH TODAY

Dick Coffman for the Browns and George Grant for the Indians are the probable pitchers for this afternoon's game.

Kress made a nice stop of Morgan's grounder near second in the first inning and Blue scooped his low throw off the dirt nicely.

Melllo had to go into right center for Fonseca's fly in the second and caught it with his back to the infield.

Lu Blue turned around and batted right-handed in the Browns' second and slashed a mean single over third.

Buckeye was lucky in the first when, with two men on and none out, Manush slammed a drive into his glove and gave him an easy double play on Melllo at first. But in the second, McNeely's smash at the box was a mean hopper and the big boy could only deflect it. It went for a single.

Schang Nips Jamieson.

"I wonder how good Wallie Schang's arm is," mused Jamieson, as he dashed for second in the Indians' third. It was about 15 feet better than Jamieson's legs.

After the Browns had nicked him for ten hits in two and two-third innings, Buckeye shagged his 200 and upwards pounds to the dressing room and sobbed out his troubles on the trainer's shoulder.

Levsen represented no improvement, the locals socking him all over the lot, but Manager Peckinpaugh refused to risk the reputation of another pitcher.

The Browns scored in every inning but the seventh, when the best they could get was a walk.

12,000 CROWD AT FAIRMOUNT GETS REAL THRILL WHEN FIRST STARTER GOES OVER IN OPENER

By Dent McSkimming

Thousands of otherwise normal persons were converted into long-shot disciples yesterday afternoon when they witnessed the victory of Joe Engel at odds of 141 to 1 in the first race at Fairmount Park. Cool, calculating bettors, who religiously support short-priced favorites, tore up the dope sheets and resolved never more to bet on anything but a 50-to-1 shot.

The fantastic, fairy story refund of $285.20 for $2 was made possible when one of the favorites, Eatonden, stumbled while running in a contending position, thus dropping far behind, and another, Sambo G., failed to get going. Both Eatonden and Sambo G. were heavily played at odds of 8 to 5 by the crowd of 12,000.

As a subject of discussion, the dramatic long shot overshadowed the victory of Port Harlem in the $5000 Illinois Stake, feature event of the very interesting card.

Five in Row for Filly.

In winning her fifth straight race her sixth victory in her last seven starts, Port Harlem gains recognition as one of the outstanding fillies of the year. She carried top weight of 119 pounds, conceding six pounds to That's It of the Three D's Stock Farm, her most dangerous rival in the field of six starters.

Lee Hardy had That's It in front immediately after the rise of the barrier and he set a furious pace, trying to shake loose from all contenders. Port Harlem held gamely to her task of overtaking That's It and at the stretch turn cut the intervening space to half a length. At the sixteenth pole they were noses apart and in the last 70 yards, Port Harlem pulled away to win by a full length.

The time was 1:06 3-5, a full second behind the record, but the track was some degrees slower than lightning fast.

Attracted by Port Harlem's record, the crowd poured in money on her, and the refund on a winning ticket was only $3.24, or 67 cents profit on a dollar, making the other extreme in the matter of price.

Dunmore Close to Record.

Dunmore was within two-fifths of a second of the track record for the mile in beating Smiling Gus a length in the secondary feature. The fifth race on the card.

Flying Torch set a dizzy pace for half a mile, was caught at the half mile pole by Smiling Gus and the two ran as a team for another furlong. D. Smith made an effort to get Meknes through at the stretch turn, but Lauscher sent Dunmore up at the same moment and there were four horses in a line as they thundered into the last furlong. Under Lauscher's urging, Dunmore popped through to take the lead. Then Smiling Gus made another effort and Meknes, too, improved his pace. Fifty yards from the finish, each of the three had a chance to win and Dunmore settled the question only in the last few strides. The three were favorites in the betting.

The Lucky Stiffs!

As may be assumed, there were few holders of winning tickets on Joe Engel. Only one bettor risked $10 on his "nose." There was only one $5 ticket sold and 40 of the $2 variety. Among the fortunate few were two women, each of whom cashed a $2 combination ticket, the refund on which was $329.40. S. S. Gilmartin, manager of the mutuel department, announced that only $95 was bet on the horse to win.

Strange things happen when 2-year-old maidens are grouped in a race. The favorite may be left at the post, or he may run to the barn. Eatonden, of the Three D's Stable, does even stranger stunts. When the field reached the end of the back stretch, Oakland was leading and Eatondon was in fifth place, free of all interference and apparently ready to move up.

Suddenly, horse and rider bounded into the air, as if taking a hurdle. Lee Hardy gave further proof of his alertness and good horsemanship when he held his seat. He even got Eatonden back in his stride, but the horse was completely eliminated as a contender.

That was all the good racing luck Joe Engel needed. J.. Berry slipped his horse through on the rail at the head of the stretch and when he was clear of the others he pulled away to win easily, apparently with lots in reserve.

A First Starter.

Joe Engel had never before gone to the post. With virtually nothing in the way of racing history to guide them, the bettors refused to back him. There are some followers of the game who always have a ticket on a first starter, and probably many of the lucky collectors yesterday were of this sort.

Eatonden's wild leap into the air at the turn is unexplainable. C. E. Durnell, in charge of the Three D's Stable, told the stewards he was unable to account for the horse's actions, since he appears sound and trains well. The condition is the more striking since Eatonden went through a similar jumping act in his last start here ten days ago, when he was pulled up by Jockey L. Morris.

Victorian Again.

HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY'S Victorian, Preakness winner, added another purse to his already long list when he easily won the thirty-sixth running of the Brookdale Handicap on a muddy track at Aqueduct yesterday afternoon. Victorian, home-bred son of Whisk Broom II—Prudery, defeated a fine field to win by six lengths, well in hand. Victorian's next engagement will be in the Dwyer Stakes, a gallop of one mile and one-half, to be run next Saturday at Aqueduct. Victorian is in fine shape and if he holds his present form will have no trouble in annexing the purse. His victory yesterday was his third straight.

Toro stamped himself as the second best 3-year-old in the Middle West by taking the mile and one-half Latonia Derby yesterday. Toro showed good speed in the muddy going and won with ease over the imported colt Galahad. Misstep, owned by Leo J. Marks, winner of the Fairmount Derby, was the only horse withdrawn. Marks took the colt out because of the uncertain track.

Hal Price Headley, winner of last year's Derby, entered Pigeon Hole in this year's running in an effort to again take down first money. He did not win but he finished third, defeating such stars as Easter Stockings, Pink Lily and Bobashela.

Mad Play Entered.

MAD PLAY, 7-year-old son of Fair Play—Madcap, will make his second start of the season tomorrow in the Cincinnati Club Purse at Latonia. Mad Play was entered in the Hotel Havlin Purse yesterday, but the race was declared off. He is owned by Hal Price Headley and a few years back was one of the best horses in the country. He will meet a fair band of thoroughbreds in the Cincinnati Club race. Mad Play is assigned 114 pounds and will compete with Tannic, Retort, Chumbonivan and Forest Nymph.

M'KECHNIE EXPLAINS RECENT DISREGARD OF SACRIFICE

BATTERS MISSED SIGNAL TWICE, CARD LEADER SAYS; OUTLINES POLICY ON PLAY

Alexander Criticizes Attitude Of the Modern Ballplayer

By a Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO.

GROVER CLEVELAND ALEXANDER, in an interview in Boston, took a shot at the nonchalant ball players of today.

"In the old days a player who made a costly error or pulled a stupid play that helped lose a game, was afraid to enter the clubhouse after the contest," said Old Pete. "Nowadays the boy who boots one in the pinch sings merrily as he takes his shower, as though he had hit a home run with the bases filled.

"I don't know what it is, but the athlete of today doesn't take his baseball seriously. In the old days victory meant more than the financial reward. We didn't mind losing our money if we won the game, but the cash reward never cheered us up after a defeat. Perhaps it is the college influence which enables the young men to use psychology to see the bright side of things. Or more likely it is the realization that the game now is more a business than a sport.

"The young college player wants a share in the profits and an ironclad contract, with a substantial bonus for signing. When I broke in the young fellow was tickled to death to put on a big league or a minor league uniform and the last question he asked was about the money. Of course the game has improved, perhaps, but give me the old spirit."

By J. Roy Stockton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Bill McKechnie, who was criticised frequently while the Cardinals were playing their last stand at home because batters failed to sacrifice in close games when it appeared that it might be smart baseball to play for one run, was asked by the Post-Dispatch correspondent whether he favored that style of play.

"I know what you mean," McKechnie replied immediately. "You have in mind several games at home when batters didn't bunt when it looked like the proper play. I took the criticism without any objection because criticism never hurts you. But in two games in particular batters missed signals and thought they had been ordered to hit straightaway.

"Yes, I believe in the sacrifice. Of course in the early innings of a game it is better to try to get a flock of runs. But after the fifth or sixth inning, in a close contest, the sacrifice, the play for one run is absolutely the only thing to do. We have a good hitting team and in the early innings it is not wise to stifle this hitting power by sacrificing a batter's chance to get an extra base hit. But when a pitcher goes along for five innings without giving any bunches of hits and you are a run behind or a run ahead, sound baseball demands that you use the little strategies to get another run or two.

Guessed Right This Time.

"Occasionally conditions and the men who are due to bat will make it necessary to depart from the usual procedure. For instance in the June 7 game at New York we were trailing 3 to 2 in the ninth inning when Harper led off with a single. I decided that Roettger was hitting Benton pretty hard and that it was a good bet to let him swing.

"He did and his single to right put Martin, running for Harper, on third base. Wilson's sacrifice fly scored Martin and as it happened we would not have scored in that inning if we had sacrificed, as the two men following Wilson went out. But you don't notice those things unless they win or lose a ball game."

Parallel Cases of Kaufmann and Pruett.

Tony Kaufmann, sent to Rochester on option, once was one of the best pitchers in the game. He always was especially effective against the Cardinals and the Giants, and that is why the Cardinals grabbed him from the Phillies when he was offered last year for the waiver price.

Kaufmann's arm felt strong this spring. He was under a doctor's care all last winter and thought he had recovered from his sore arm. The wing continued to be strong until he began to throw curves. After a couple of curves the arm tightened and Kaufmann lost all his control and all his stuff. He is still a young man and that makes it all the more unfortunate.

Hubert Pruett had a similar experience, but he has come back. He developed a sore shoulder pitching for the Browns in 1922, and, trying to protect the shoulder, he developed another sore spot in his elbow. Hubert tried all sorts of treatments, but the arm continued to be sore and when the Browns released him to the Coast League it appeared that the little southpaw, who had gained so much fame by striking out Babe Ruth 11 out of 12 times, was through with baseball.

How Pruett Saved His Arm.

"I hooked a big electric bulb from a clubhouse," Pruett said, in telling of his comeback, "and used it at home to bake the arm every night. Then I took exercises every morning and every evening. A doctor friend of mine taped up the shoulder when I went to the coast and I kept it on until after I had pitched several games. Finally I took it off and the sore spots had disappeared. My arm bothered me for a short time again last season when I was throwing too many screw balls, but this spring it felt fine and it has not bothered me at any time."

Pruett has pitched some excellent games for the Phils. It is hard to win, however, for the tail-enders. He lost to the Giants, 2 to 1 and the Cardinals beat him, 1 to 0.

The Trials of the Pirates.

Pittsburg correspondents believe the Pirates will be harder to beat during the rest of the season, but they say there are so many good teams in the race that it is not likely that the champions of 1927 will ever reach a contending position this year.

The pitchers are improving. Meadows, who, it was feared, had pitched his last game, is recovering the use of his arm and has been working in batting practice and probably will appear in a game soon.

Grimes, Hill, Kremer and Miljus are ready to go nine innings and the injured and sick Pirates, with the exception of Grantham and Scott, are back in uniform and fit to play. Grantham suffered a broken finger and Scott's wrist was injured when a throw from Pie Traynor hit it, a base runner shutting off Scott's view of the ball.

Avoid Rigidity in Golf.

I HAVE just finished reading a dissertation upon instruction methods. The chief point made by the author is that it is a mistake to discourage the pupil by telling him of the difficulties of the game. The writer points out that golf is no more difficult than any other game, hence the pupils should be led to approach confidently, rather than with fear and trembling, the task in hand.

I quite agree that the difficulty of merely hitting a golf ball has been exaggerated. I agree also that a person with a natural sense rhythm can in a very short while acquire the ability to drive quite a good distance and to play passably well on occasions. But, after all, to play well on occasions is not the aim of even the rankest neophyte. What we all want to do is to play well today, tomorrow, and a month from today. An occasional good score satisfies no one. I cannot agree that consistency in golf is easy of attainment.

It seems to me that about every two or three weeks I have to iron out some kink in my game that has arisen when apparently everything was going as smoothly as possible. So often it is exactly the same trouble I had corrected a few months or weeks before, and yet it is just as hard to find the fourth or fifth time as it was the first. I remarked to a friend recently that it seemed I had to learn the same thing four times a year and would forget it five times in the same period.

Use Body Action.

I SUPPOSE the most subtle part of the golf stroke—the hardest to keep an eye upon—is the body action, with relation to which the arms must swing. Too many players, I think, are inclined to use the arms almost exclusively, omitting or restricting the turn of shoulders and hips. It all comes down to timing, or rhythm, or tenseness, or whatever you choose to call it. There cannot be any freedom or power in the swing that works around a stationary body.

That is one reason why I favor taking the club back close to the ground, dragging it back in the manner many have described. If the club is swung back in this way it is necessary that the body turn away from the ball in order to make way for the hands to pass. That does not mean that the swing is flat, but merely that there will be no inclination to raise the club simply by means of the hands and arms and to leave the body still.

Pivot Is Necessary.

THE last is exactly the trouble which descended upon me last week when I had begun to be pleased with the way my game was progressing. I had made some changes in my way of handling the club at impact, and although I felt I was right in that respect, I began to be suspicious when I started to hook every iron shot. Finally, however, I found that I was taking the club high and too nearly around my head. A decisive hit from there brought the club upon the ball with the face "hooded" and caused an outlanding hook.

The best advice anyone can give to a golfer is to avoid at any cost the tenseness of any muscle. A failure to turn or pivot is caused only by a rigidity in the muscles of the body which will not allow it to follow the natural course.

Champions Enter Speedboat Races

Present titleholders in every division of competition are included in the partial list of entries for the national speedboat races here July 3, 4 and 5.

J. E. Sellman's S. M. will defend its title in the 725 class, the 60-miles-an-hour division. In the 510 hydroplane class, Miss Houston, owned by F. H. Robertson of Houston, Tex., will try for its fourth title in that class.

Miss St. Louis, driven by Walter Kastrup, is also entered in the 725 hydroplane class, where a mile-a-minute pace is necessary to keep in the running.

The entries to date:

725 class (60-mile-an-hour division)—S-M, J. E. Sellman, Harrisburg, Tex.; Pal, Russell Dowers, Rising Sun, Ind.; Dixie Baby, J. A. Mitchell, Houston, Tex.; Miss St. Louis, Kastrup and Huellinghorst; Terrible Edith II, Gail B. Mansell, Corpus Christi, Tex.; Guy, Guy Simmons, Fort Thomas, Ky. (Lazgitt); C. Bettr, Henry Frank Jr., Anchorage, Ky. (510 supercharged and 151 class also eligible.)

510 class, hdyroplanes (55-mile division)—Miss Houston IV, F. H. Robertson, Houston, Tex.; Miss Fern Creek, E. H. Stout, Fern Creek, Ky.; Miss Kemah, Henry Falk, Houston, Tex. (Limited 151 class also eligible.)

Carter, Danville, Ill.; Princess Eileen, Bernard Schauder, Dayton, O.

Many entries are being received for the outboard events, in which some of the most notable drivers in the country are entering: Charles P. Hanley of Muscatine, Ia.; Willard Waugh, Peoria, Ill., and Tom Hoppner of Louisville, Ky., as well as many others long known in the hydroplane racing game.

CENTURY CLUB TO HOLD OUTBOARD BOAT AND ROWING RACES TODAY

Three outboard motorboat races and three rowing events are included in the program of the Century Boat Club's regatta this afternoon. All events will finish at the club's landing. The first race is scheduled to start at 3 p. m.

The outboard races have drawn a large entry snice many owners are taking the opportunity to test their craft for the national regatta here July 3, 4 and 5. The motorboat races will be run over a triangular one-mile course. The events include three-mile class B, five-mile class C, and 10-mile free-for-all races.

Ludington-Weld Wedding Ceremony In a Garden Setting

Jane E. Parsons Becomes Bride of William A. Gill at Ceremony Performed by Bishop F. F. Johnson.

A QUAINT old-fashioned garden, abloom with colorful perennials of another generation gave a charming setting for the wedding, late yesterday, of Miss Florence Ludington, daughter of Mr. Elliot K. Ludington of New York and Willaim George Weld, at the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson L. Lambert, Ladue and Price roads, with whom she resided. The mellow tones of an organ combined with those of a stringed orchestra in the wedding music as the bridal party left the house and walked across the lawn through an aisle of satin-wrapped posts garlanded together with smilax. They passed under an arched gateway covered with climbing crimson ramblers to the center of the fenced enclosure, where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Faelig of Brentwood. The Rev. Dr. Ashby Jones of the Third Baptist Church pronounced the benediction at the conclusion of the ceremony.

At either side of the wedding party metal garden cupids held great bowls of valley lilies, and between them was a satin Prie Dieu. Back of the garden crimson ramblers over a second archway gave a deeper color note to the background.

The bride, one of this season's attractive buds, was given away by her father. She wore heavy white satin made with a close fitting bodice joined to a full skirt by rose point lace. A rose point bertha adorned the bodice and edged the close fitting satin sleeves. She wore Mrs. Lambert's wedding train, of duchess satin attached to her gown at the waistline. It was banded in point applique lace and elaborately embroidered with crystals and pearls in a basket design. Her full tulle veil, worn over her face, fell from a bandeau of valley lilies to the end of her train. She carried lilies of the valley and wore as her only jewelry a diamond and platinum pin, the gift of the bridegroom.

The gowns of the bride's attendants were of filmy tulle. Mrs. Lambert, the matron of honor, and Miss Catherine Ashbrook of Wilmington, Del., the maid of honor, were in blue, and the bride's maids, Miss Elizabeth Clark, Miss Margaret Brown of Dallas, Tex.; Miss Susie Singleton, Miss Katherine Smith and Mrs. Francis Ludington of Pelham, N. Y., in delicate peach, with slippers to match. Fashioned over silk slips, the frocks

Langenbergs Give Garden Dinner

ONE of the most delightful parties of the early summer was the garden dinner and dance given Thursday night by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Langenberg at their home in the St. Louis Country Club grounds in honor of Mrs. Langenberg's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. Caperton of Louisville, who have been their guests the past week.

After greeting their hosts the guests were invited to the formal garden for hors d'oeuvres, and later dinner was served at eight tables, each seating 12 guests, placed in a circle in a beautiful spot on the lawn surrounded by trees and shrubbery and shielded from the drive by a lattice covered with pink rambler roses. Each table was covered with gossamer green over white, with center pieces of spring flowers, and was lighted by tall white candles in two branched silver candelabra.

In the center of the circle was the dance floor, its pillars entwined with crimson ramblers forming a canopy over the heads of the dancers, and the flooring bordered with growing plants. The scene was lighted by hundreds of colorful lanterns, and electric lights gleamed from the trees. Concealed in a bower of fernery an orchestra played and during the dinner a girl soloist sang melodies.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. John T. Davis Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Kauffman, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Werner, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Wendling, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brookings Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. Knox Taussig, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hunt Zeibig, Mr. and Mrs. Theron Catlin, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Filley Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bascom, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Tiffany, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Langenberg, Mr. and Mrs. L. Ray Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver J. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Wooster Lambert, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gillette Hotchkiss, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Cushman, Mr. and Mrs. Gates Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence Mauran, Mrs. Claire Macbeth Secord, Mrs. Webster Tilton, Miss Georgia Elliot, A. F. M. Greig, Andrew McCreery, Taylor Stickney, William D. Crowell and Walter McKittrick.

Charlotte Coombe to Wed W. S. Howell

OF MUCH interest socially is the approaching marriage of Miss Charlotte Coombe, daughter of Mrs. Western Bascome Coombe of 5432 Clemens avenue, and Wilbur Samuel Howell of Ithaca, N. Y., to take place at 5:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother, Bishop Frederick Foote Johnson officiating. No announcement had been made of the engagment.

The wedding arrangements will be simple, and the guests, relatives and close friends of the families. The bride is to wear a summery white chiffon frock, and Miss Mary Louisa Coombe, the bride's sister, who will attend her as maid of honor, will be gowned in pink chiffon. George Stout will be best man.

Miss Coombe is a graduate of Washington University, and is National Secretary of the Mortar Board, honorary college senior society.

Mr. Howell is a graduate of Cornell University and is now a member of the faculty of that University. After a wedding trip he will take his bride to Ithaca to reside.

MR. AND MRS. ELLIOT KINGMAN LUDINGTON JR. (MARY ELISE LAMMERT) photographed in the garden after their wedding Wednesday afternoon. The young women of the wedding party are: Miss Ruth Curby, Mrs. Martin Lammert III, Mrs. William Donaldson Hemenway Jr., Mrs. Donaldson L. Lambert, Miss Mary Francis Fiske, Mrs. John Wyer of Evanston, Miss Elise Morely of Bloomfield Hills, Mich., Miss Mary Cowling of Milwaukee, and Miss Florence Ludington. The men include Francis Ludington of New York, Warren and Martin Lammert, Robert Smith, Robert Hawes, Shapleigh Boyd, Samuel D. Capen Jr., Donaldson L. Lambert and D. D. Hemenway Jr. —Schweig.

Elizabeth Thomas Becomes Bride of George F. Appel

Christ Church Cathedral Is Scene of Ceremony; Reception at St. Louis Country Club Follows.

AN ATTRACTIVE summer wedding of social importance was solemnized late Friday afternoon at Christ Church Cathedral when Miss Elizabeth Mepham Thomas, niece of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Mepham of 4957 Westminster place, became the bride of George F. Baer Appel of Philadephia, Pa., son of Judge and Mrs. William Nevin Appel of Lancaster, Pa. The marriage service was read by Dean William Scarlett in the presence of a large and fashionable gathering.

Tall cathedral candles shed a soft glow over great clusters of Easter lilies that adorned the altar and the chancel was banked in palms and vases of the lilies. A profusion of these blossoms was effectively arranged about the altar rail and the front pews were marked by white satin ribbons caught with bouquets of lilies.

The bride was attended by Miss Rachel Appel of Lancaster, Pa., a sister of the bridegroom, as maid of honor; Miss Louise Goddard and Miss Anne Sipple of St. Louis, Miss Alice Rodes of Bowling Green, Ky., and Miss Marie Louise Hanson of Philadelphia as bridesmaids. William Lusk of New York served as best man for Mr. Appel and the following were groomsmen: Edmond G. Thomas, brother of the bride; T. Frederick D. Haines of New York; Charles M. Spofford of Evansston, Ill.; William N. Mallory of Memphis, Tenn., John Locke of Dayton, O.; C. Morton Stewart Jr. of Baltimore, Md.; Owen J. Wister and Zacheus Gordon of Philadelphia and Dwight Armstrong of Lancaster.

The youthfulness of the bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Mepham, was emphasized by her gown of shimmering white satin made after a modified princess mode, with a yoke of rose point lace cut to a V at the front and long tight sleeves of the satin finished with more of the lace. Tiers of tulle starting just below the hipline adorned the skirt of the gown and swept into a train. Her long tulle veil revealing her lovely dark hair was arranged from a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and brides roses.

Ludington-Weld Wedding Ceremony

were made with long waisted sleeveless bodices with cape backs, and the skirts in layers of tulle rose petals edged with a deeper tone. Each gown had a sash of blue taffeta fastened with a huge bow at the back, with streamers below the hem. They carried spring flowers with blue delphinium predominating tied with blue.

The bride's small nephew, Donaldson Lambert Jr., carried the wedding ring. Garneau Weld was his brother's best man, and the groomsmen were Mr. Lambert, Francis Ludington, brother of the bride, of Pelham, N. Y.; Shapleigh Boyd, Noel Carpenter, Herbert Condie, Benjamin Clark, John Franciscus, Fielding Childress and David D. Walker III.

After the ceremony an al fresco reception was held, with the guests served at small tables under hundreds of Japanese lanterns swung in the trees, while an orchestra concealed in a screen of palms, played soft music. The bridal table for 22 guests, laid in the dining room of the Lambert home, was adorned with lilies of the valley, blue delphinium and baby breath and lighted with tapers in crystal candelabra. Vases of spring flowers decorated the reception rooms of the house.

Mr. and Mrs. Weld have departed for a wedding trip in the West. They will occupy an apartment at 10 North Kingshighway on their return.

Mr. Weld gave his attendants belts with silver buckles, and the bride gave the young women of the party silver picture frames.

Mrs. Weld is a graduate of Mary Institute and Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn. After completing her studies she spent a year in Europe. She made her debut at a ball given by her father last fall at the St. Louis Country Club. Mr. Weld was educated at Yale, and is a member of the St. Louis Country and University clubs.

BENEATH a canopy of Easter lillies shading a lovely garden lattice covered with climbing pink roses, Miss Jane Eleanor Parsons, daughter of Mrs. John B. Denvir Jr., became the bride Wednesday afternoon at the Denvir home, 15 Washington terrace, to William A. Gill of Cleveland, in one of the outsanding weddings of the year.

The guests were seated under a canvas marquee festooned with smilax, which partially protected the garden, while to the east in the open were dozens of small tables with center decorations of butterfly roses and bridal wreath with pink candles for the reception which followed.

The bridal party descended the steps from the house and walked down a church-like aisle of the seated guests to the flowering lattice where the ceremony was performed by Bishop Frederick Foote Johnson.

The young women of the wedding party wore summery frocks of modeleine orange organdie combined with maize chiffon. There were maize hairbraid banded in orange velvet looped over the brim at one side. In keeping with the garden arrangements they carried garlands of feathery asparagus ferns and shasta daisies.

The bride was beautifully gowned in silver gauze, trimmed with old rose point lace belonging to her great-grandmother. The bodice was finished with a deep berthe of the lace low over the shoulders, and more of the lace edged the mousquetaire sleeves. The skirt was of layers of the gauze drawn to the left side and falling in an uneven hem line to the floor, and there was a deep girdle of rose point. Embroidered silver gauze, veiling white satin, was used in fashioning the court train, cut to a deep oval to shaw the back of her gown, and weighted with clusters of orange blossoms. Her veil was held in place by a cloche arrangement of rose point lace with orange blossoms across the back of her hair to complete the crown. She carried lilies of the valley and gardenias, and wore a diamond circlet, the gift of her husband.

Miss Marie Taylor was maid of honor and Mrs. James Ward Thorne of Chicago, Mrs. Samuel Fitzhugh Gordon, Mrs. Neil O'Day, Miss Elizabeth Tupper, Miss Elizabeth Hobiltzelle and Miss Katherine Sipple, bridesmaids. John Gill of Cleveland was his brother's best man, and the groomsmen were Edward Rogers and David Burton of Cleveland; Churchill Knapp, Carleton Cook, Samuel Fitzhugh Gordon and Neil O'Day.

The bridal dinner was served in the dining room of the house and afterwards Mr. and Mrs. Gill departed for a wedding trip to Virginia. They will make their home in Cleveland.

The bride gave her attendants traveling clocks in colored leather cases.

The bride was educated at Mary Institute and one of the eastern finishing schools. She was a debutante of several seasons ago and is a member of the Junior League. Mr. Gill is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania.

Among the out-of-town guests here for the wedding were the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. K. L. Gill of Cleveland, and their daughter, Mrs. Amelia Gill Hamilton; Mrs. Denvir's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Tritle of Mansfield, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hobiltzelle of Dallas, Tex.; Clarence Hobiltzelle of New York and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Kiekhefer of Milwaukee, Wis.

MISS MILDRED FORD

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Ford of Independence, Mo., to J. Eugene Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Baker of the Usona Hotel. —Ashen-Brenner,

Elizabeth Thomas Bride Of George F. Appel

The maid of honor was in blue and the bridesmaids were in frocks of delicate pink, green, yellow and orchid, made similarly. The long, close-fitting sleeveless bodices were designed with a round neckline finished with berthes that terminated into short capes at the back and the skirts were of petal-like layers of the organdie and dipped almost to the floor. With these pretty summer costumes they wore drooping hairbraid hats to match, trimmed with a flat bow of satin ribbon, and carried arm bouquets of roses, delphiniums and daisies.

Mrs. Mepham wore a becoming gown of poudre blue lace, draped at the side and caught by a silver ornament. Her hat was of blue lace to match her gown.

Following the ceremony a reception for 200 guests was held at the St. Louis Country Club. Smilax, Dorothy Perkins roses and red ramblers were used with charming effect in decorating the clubhouse. The receiving line stood before a bower of the roses and smilax and the same flowers made an attractive background for the card room in which the bridal dinner was spread. The table was decorated in white roses, white peonies and clusters of white phlox. Twenty-eight were seated with the bride and bridegroom. A buffet supper was served on the terrace at small tables.

Among the guests were the following from out of town: Judge and Mrs. William Nevin Appel of Lancaster, Pa., parents of the bridegroom; his brothers-in-law and sisters, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Armstrong of Lancaster, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hartley of Germantown, Pa., and Miss Rachel and Miss Emily Appel of Lancaster, all of whom departed for their homes yesterday.

The bride, who was to have made her debut this winter, is a graduate of John Burroughs School and Miss Wright's School at Byrn Mawr, Pa. She is a sister of Mrs. Archie Lee of St. Louis and Mrs. Oliver J. Keller, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Appel is a graduate of Yale, class of 1924, and the law school of the University of Pennsylvania. He is the legal secretary of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Mr. Appel and his bride will spend their honeymoon at Lake Louise and Banff and other resorts of the Northwest and will make their home in Philadelphia.

Dr. and Mrs. Leo Gregory McKellops of 4649 Delmar boulevard have returned after a month's sojourn in California, where they visited Dr. McKellop's sister, Mrs. Josephine McK. Bouvier, in San Francisco, and Mrs. McKellop's brother, Paul H. Bowman and his family of Los Angeles, formerly of St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Bradley of Pershing avenue and their family departed last week for their summer home in Loveland, Colo. They were accompanied by Miss Louise Leach who will be the guest of their daughter, Miss Anita Bradley.

Series of Art Talks Scheduled at Museum

The City Art Museum in Forest Park has inaugurated its summer series of informal talks for adults and children. These talks, based on the collections, are illustrated by the objects on view in the galleries where the talks are given.

The talks for adults are held Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock and repeated on Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock. They have been planned to cover 10 weeks of the summer, beginning June 19 and ending Aug. 24. This enables the stay-at-home to spend an hour in the galleries once a week at his choice. The subjects chosen are varied without idea of sequence. There will be 20 talks on 10 subjects. The program follows: June 26 and 29, glass; July 3 and 6, miniatures; July 10 and 13, special exhibition; July 17 and 20, old chinaware; July 24 and 27, old silverware; July 31 and Aug. 3, portraits; Aug. 7 and 10, special exhibition; Aug. 14 and 17, figure paintings; Aug. 21 and 24, landscapes.

Talks for children are announced as Story Hours. These, too, are in a series of 10 held twice each week, from June 20 to Aug. 25, on Wednesday afternoons at 3 o'clock and Saturday mornings at 10:30 o'clock. The program follows: June 27 and 30, stories of the Indians; July 5 and 7, museum games; July 11 and 14, "A Greek Hero;" July 18 and 21, summer sketching; July 25 and 28, "A visit to the Land of Mummies;" Aug. 1 and 4, "A Trip to China;" Aug. 8 and 11, "In Fair Japan;" Aug. 15 and 18, "Locks and Keys;" Aug. 22 and 25, "A Treasure Chest." Children who come early will be permitted to draw in the galleries and take part in museum games.

The summer programs are in charge of Miss Mary Powell, supervisor of education at the Museum, and are free to the public.

Rosy Complexion

"I HAD a bad spell of sickness which left me very weak and depressed," says Mrs. G. T. Wharton, 309 Hinton Street, Petersburg, Va. "I could not begin to get my strength back. I spent hours in bed, and was scarcely able to lift my hand to take a glass of water.

"This went on for some time until I decided to try Cardui for it. I took several bottles, after which I noticed a decided improvement in myself. I grew stronger and felt well.

"I was greatly pleased with the results. My color was better and my complexion clear and rosy. My friends remarked about the improvement in my health. I told them I was taking Cardui. I gained in weight and my general health was fine.

"Since that time, on several occasions when I have been run-down, I have taken Cardui, and always have felt better afterwards."

WHY—

Nestle Circuline Alone Assures a Wave as Loose or Tight as You Desire

YOU can have exactly the size wave which suits you best—if you have a Nestle Circuline Permanent Wave. Your Nestle Circuline hairdresser shows you in advance by waving three test curls on the side of your head. Then you select—loose, medium or tight—whichever you prefer.

But remember only Nestle Circuline offers you this choice. For only Nestle Circuline is adaptive to all sizes of waves.

Remember, too, that only Nestle Circuline waves your hair according to its individual requirements. It is the one method having ten waving lotions—a different strength for each of the ten classifications of hair texture.

But to be sure of a true Nestle Circuline Wave, insist on your hairdresser using genuine Circulines. Read below how you may be certain of genuine Circulines.

GENUINE Nestle Circulines are little cigarette-like tubes wrapped in glassine paper and stamped with the name "Nestle Circuline," and its number.

You will see your hair-dresser unwrap them—one for each curl—in a beaker of clear, fresh water. She will be glad to explain to you exactly the reasons "why."

NESTLE Circuline PERMANENT WAVE

Women will soon read more about the Tex-o-meter, a brilliant new invention for testing hair. Created by Mr. C. Nestle, originator of permanent waving. Both the Tex-o-meter and Nestle Circuline are approved by the Society for the Advancement of Hair and Beauty Science.

Corns Now Needless

Prove It Overnight!

Why keep "treating" corns, when the first drop of Freezone stops all sensation of pain, and a few drops soon end the corn?

The most painful corn, even one sensitive to touch of stocking, can't throb ten seconds after Freezone comes in contact. All that's left to do, is lift the corn right off and it's gone. Isn't that better than surgery!

Feet that are "sights" from corns can grow back to normal, unblemished condition through the use of Freezone. Meantime, no pain—none at all—and no awkward pads or plasters to cause shoes to pinch and cultivate corns in other places.

The Freezone process is scientific and certain. The hardest corn that ever formed can't resist it—nor the soft corns between the toes where nothing has ever helped. A tiny bottle of Freezone copes with the worst condition of corns. Freezone has made it folly to have any corns at all, for any length of time.

For your own comfort, investigate Freezone. Every druggist has it, and the cost is a few cents!

JACOB'S ALTAR, JEWS' OLDEST RITUAL OBJECT, EXCAVATED

German Archeologist Identifies Slab Discovered in Ruined City of Shechem.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 23.—The oldest Jewish ritual object known is reported here to have been unearthed at Shechem by Prof. Ernst Sellin, German theologian and archeologist, who has been conducting excavations in the Holy Land for more than 20 years.

It is the stone which Jacob erected as an altar and called it El-Elohe-Israel, after buying "for an hundred pieces of money" a parcel of land from the children of Hamor, Shechem's father, as described in Genesis 33:19 and 20. This is thought by Sellin to be the same sone set up by Joshua "under the oak that was by the sanctuary of the Lord" as a sign of the covenant Joshua made with the people of Shechem, as related in the Book of Joshua, 24:25 and 26.

Abimelech, King of Israel in the twelfth centry B. C., destroyed the Temple of Shechem when he "slew the people therein and beat down the city and sowed it with salt," according to Judges 9:45.

Sellin has been engaged since last March in excavating the site of the devastated city. He laid bare remains of the ancient walls and discovered the pillars at the entrance of Jehovah's Temple, but as his greatest achievement he declares that a great flat stone, east of the altar site, was the one set up first by Jacob the patriarch 34 centuries ago and which was subsequently used for religious purposes as described in the Old Testament.

Alpha Chi Omega Convention.

The nineteenth biennial convention of the Alpha Chi Omega Sorority will be held from June 25 to 30, at the Grand Hotel, Mackinac Island, Mich. The delegates from the active chapters at Washington University are Miss Ethel Murch and Miss Edna Crucius. Miss Louise Butler and Mrs. Robert Kinsey will represent the St. Louis Alumnae Chapter. Others going from St. Louis include Miss Louise Quellmalz, Miss Dorothea Comfort, Mrs. Oliver Kriege, Mrs. A. D. Carr, Miss Grace Koch, Miss Elinor Lewald and Miss Eleanor Marston.

Fatally Stricken Playing Bridge.

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 23.—Stricken with an acute heart attack when playing bridge with friends, William J. Loughridge, 72 years old, retired banker, died at his home here last night. He was vice president of the Bluegrass Tobacco Co.

120,000 VOICES TO SING TRIBUTE TO SCHUBERT

Austria Plans Great Celebration in Memory of Composer.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, June 23.—Singers from all over the world are gathering in Vienna to commemorate the hundredth anniversary of the death of Franz Peter Schubert, composer of some of the world's finest classical songs. It was in November, 1828, that Schubert died in Vienna, but the celebrations in honor of his memory and genius begin many months in advance of that date and will last throughout the year.

The principal feature of the celebration will be a monster congregation of Austrian, German, Polish, American and other singers from July 19 to 23. No less than 70,000 choralists will crowd into the vast concert hall in the environs of Vienna, which has been specially built for the occasion, while an additional 50,000 choristers will gather outside the hall to participate in the tribue of song. Several hundred singing societies in the United States will send delegates.

Big Concert Hall Built.

Dieing in poverty and obscurity at the age of 32, Schubert's genius remained unrecognized for half a century. The Austrian Government and Austrian musical societies decided therefore to make this year's anniversary of the death of "The King of Song" one of the most impressive in modern times. With funds supplied partly by the Vienna Municipal Government and partly by Austrian singing societies, an immense structure of wood has been erected in one of the public parks, which will seat 70,000 singers.

The festival will open with the singing by 120,000 voices of Schubert's famous hymn, beginning with the words "Oh, God Almighty, hear our prayers." Special phonograph-recording apparatus will preserve this example of community singing. The radio will carry the chorus virtually to every corner of the world.

The exercises will be followed by a parade through the streets of Vienna of half a million persons to do homage to the man whose life was one of struggle and hardship, but whose contribution to mankind was 600 songs. Led by minstrels, troubadours, bards and meistersingers, dressed in ancient medieval and modern costume, the half-million paraders will march down the Ringstrasse chanting hymns.

Germany to Furnish Trains.

To bring such a throng of visitors to Vienna the Government called on Germany, Poland and other neighboring countries for assistance. The German Government will furnish 120 special nonstop trains to bring Germany's 60,000 guests to the Austrian capital. The German War Office will supply 60,000 bedsteads, mattresses and linen, 100 complete army field kitchens and dishes, knives, forks and table linen for 75,000 persons.

Of the 120,000 visiting singers, 60,000 will be quartered in private houses, 40,000 in public buildings and the rest in hotels and inns of nine towns. It has required the entire time of 400 committeemen and four years' work to complete arrangements for the ceremonies. The printing of the music for the singing required 14 months' incessant labor in the Government printing plant.

To commemorate the Schubert centennial further, the Government will issue special silver coins, paper money, postage stamps, post cards and other memorials. Reduced railroad and steamship fares will be made throughout Austria to attract visitors to the celebrations.

Engagement Announced.

Mrs. Emilie Wurtenburg was hostess at a luncheon given at the Coronado Hotel Saturday afternoon, June 16, at which she announced the engagement of her cousin, Miss Virginia Flaugher of 5858 Plymouth avenue, to William B. Prose of St. Louis. The guests present were: Miss Claire Collins, Miss Viola Riek, Miss Mattie Ekey, Miss Georgiana Schwenk, Miss Lydia Kick, Miss Virginia Cecil, Miss Bernice McCracken, Miss Marie Meyer and Miss Emma Sucher.

FAVORS TAX IN AID OF TUBERCULOSIS WORK

J. C. Tobin President of Local Society Discusses Its Activities.

Anti-tuberculosis work should be carried on by taxation under Federal, State, County or city governments, John C. Tobin, president of the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis, declared yesterday, following the semi-annual meeting of the society. So far this year, he said, the society had spent more than $50,000 on health activities.

Demonstration work, which included health projects begun by the society in the hope that they would be absorbed by public agencies and permanently functioned, formed an important part of the half year's work.

"The first demonstration activity occurred in 1904 when the society started clinics and nursing service for tuberculosis cases," Tobin said. "It continued to finance them until 1915, when the city recognized their value and took them over. Since then the society has demonstrated the need for open air schools, health education in schools on a par with other studies, a full time health department in the county, a municipal sanitarium, school physicians and nurses.

"The society still has a large part in open air school work and is paying the salary of the dentist in charge of the dental demonstration inaugurated two years ago. The society also pays the salaries of two nurses in St. Louis County and maintains the Night and Day Health Camp at a cost of $1500 a month. Educational activities, especially as to Negro health work, have been much increased this year."

HEARING ON APPLICATION FOR UNION ELECTRIC AUDIT DELAYED

Postponed From Monday Until July 6 by Public Service Commission.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 23.—The first hearing on the application of the city of St. Louis for an audit of the books of the Union Electric Light and Power Co. to determine whether the company should make further reductions in rates, has been postponed by the State Public Service Commission from Monday until July 6.

The postponement was requested by the Union Electric's attorneys, and was agreed to by City Counselor Muench.

The rate reduction made by the company effective June 1, last, estimated at approximately $700,000 a year, with residence consumers getting no cut, was attacked as insufficient by the city, which contended the company could have made a reduction of $1,418,000 and still earn a return of 7 per cent on its rate-making valuation. The city contended the depreciation allowance of the company was excessive, and, if adjusted to the proper basis, would enable further reductions up to $2,000,000 a year.

ST. LOUIS RETIRES $3,400,000 OF BONDS

Pays Off $2,965,000 Voted in 1908 and Part of 1924 Issue.

The first bonds sold of the $87,372,500 issue authorized for improvements by popular vote in 1923 are being retired. They amount to $435,000 and were for street projects and hospitals. They were issued July 1, 1924.

At the same time, the city is retiring $2,965,000 of bonds voted in 1908 for institutions and development of Kingshighway. A check for the total, $3,400,000, was sent to the city's fiscal agent, the National Bank of Commerce of New York, yesterday.

Following this retirement, the city will have $48,031,000 in bonds outstanding, including $37,950,000 of the issue of 1923. Its limit for bonded indebtedness, under the law, is approximately $120,000,000. Of the 1923 issue, $49,422,500 remains to be sold.

Moose to Hear Speaker.

Members of Missouri and Illinois chapters of the Loyal Order of Moose will attend a meeting tomorrow night at Moose Hall, 3830 Olive street, to hear Miss Katherine Smith, grand recorder of the women of Mooseheart Legion. Miss Smith is a former member of the Republican National Committee.

PAROLE HEARINGS SET FOR 20 CONVICTS

Seven, Including William Schollmeyer, From This City —Dates July 9 and 10.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 23.—Twenty convicts in the State penitentiary will be given hearings before the State Penal Board on July 9 and 10, on their application for paroles, the board announced today. Seven convicts from St. Louis are on the list, among them William Schollmeyer, former saloon keeper and clerk for the St. Louis Board of Education, who is serving a 15-year sentence for burglary.

As told in the Post-Dispatch, recommendations that Schollmeyer be paroled have been made to the penal board by "Jelly Roll" Hogan, former head of the Hogan gang in St. Louis, and Ben Weidle, president of the St. Louis Board of Education. Schollmeyer is a brother of Louis Schollmeyer, member of the Board of Education. He has served three years and five months of his sentence for theft of rugs and furniture valued at $15,000 from the shop of A. S. Asadorian of St. Louis.

Other St. Louis convicts who will be heard are:

Harold Pointer, four years from May 9, 1927, for burglary and larceny.

Henry Thomas, 15 years from Jan. 17, 1922, for second degree murder.

William H. Smith, six years from Jan. 6, 1927, for statutory offense.

William Lavender, 20 years from Nov. 16, 1920, for second degree murder.

Charles James, 20 years from Jan. 5, 1925, for second degree murder.

Elmer Henk, five years from June 10, 1927, for robbery, two counts.

Five Kansas City convicts on the list are Elijah Flournoy, 30 years for murder; C. A. Stosberg, 25 years for statutory offense; John King, five years for robbery; Thomas Deveny, 25 years for robbery, and James Archer, two years for automobile theft.

Others on the list are W. M. acobs of Joplin, 15 years for robbery; Glen Harmon, Joplin, 15 years, robbery; John James, Pemiscot County, two years for transporting whisky; Alex Hick, Ozark County, two years for manufacturing whisky; Frank Klupsick, Bates County, two years, manufacturing whisky; Peter Thomas, Pemiscot County, 10 years for murder; Edward Hall, Lincoln County, 16 years for murder, and Arthur Walker, Lewis County, two years for stealing chickens.

FIVE ICE DEALERS FINED FOR HAVING UNINSPECTED SCALES

Seven Others Arrested on Similar Charges to Be Tried June 27.

Upon admitting that they used scales not bearing inspection labels of Inspector of Weights and Measures Healy, five ice dealers were fined $10 and costs yesterday in police court. As it was their first offense, the fines were stayed on payment of costs.

With the approach of warm weather inspectors of the Department of Weights and Measures have given special attention during the past week to any apparent violations of the ordinances pertaining to ice deliveries in the residence districts. As a result 12 dealers were arrested.

Those who paid costs yesterday are: William Klee, 5339 Neosho; J. Grinus, 2717 Chippewa; Andrew Leber, 1222 Sidney; Grover Kelley, 1510 Biddle, and Winston Ayers, 4920 Nottingham. Others who were arrested on like charges had their cases continued to June 27.

PAVING ON NORTH SIDE OF OLIVE STREET NEARLY DONE

Thoroughfare Will Be Open to Traffic Tomorrow From Jefferson to Channing.

Work is progressing rapidly on the paving on the north side of widened Olive street, following completion of the south side a number of weeks ago. By tomorrow night the street will be finished and available to traffic, between Jefferson and Channing avenues.

Between Jefferson avenue and Eighteenth street preparations for laying the concrete foundation are being rushed and between Eighteenth street and Twelfth boulevard the foundation awaits surfacing. It is expected that the entire project will be completed by July 4.

SPIRITUAL LEADERSHIP MEETING AT ST. LOUIS U. AUG. 17-19

One thousand Catholic students and faculty members are expected to attend the first student spiritual leadership convention at St. Louis University, Aug. 17 to 19.

The convention is the outgrowth of a meeting of local Catholic students at St. Louis University last October to discuss spiritual life and leadership. The success of that meeting, which was followed by similar meetings throughout the country, resulted in the Sodality of Our Lady, an international organization, calling the convention. The Rev. Daniel A. Lord, director of the Sodality of Our Lady in America, will preside.

Friends of Gov. Smith also have dallied a of seeking abandonment of the rule. As the st has grown, however, their interest in bringing diminished. Smith has been represented as nomination is to be worth his while, it must time-honored way.

The position has been generally taken that if the two-thirds rule is abrogated, the unit rule also must go. The unit rule is that which permits the majority of a state delegation to control its whole vote, if the delegation is under instructions from its state convention to vote as a unit. Though of different origin from the two-thirds rule, the unit rule must be regarded as really a part of it.

G. O. P. States Could Rule.

If the two-thirds rule should be scrapped and the unit rule retained, it would be possible for a few large delegations, operating under the unit rule, to nominate a candidate against the wishes of a large majority of the convention. Tables have been prepared showing that in the coming convention, if only a plain majority were required for nomination, 15 states, none of which gave any electoral votes for the Democratic ticket in 1924, could dictate the nomination with 291 votes, or 26 per cent of the total in the convention. This estimate assumes that each of these states, having a total of 552 delegates, or one more than a majority, would vote under the unit rule (as they would have to do if so instructed by their respective state conventions) and that in each case the vote of the whole delegation would be controlled by a majority of one for the successful candidate.

The two-thirds rule dates back to the first national convention of the Democratic party, which was held at Baltimore in 1832. It was devised by the "kitchen cabinet" of President Andrew Jackson as a means of preventing the renomination of John C. Calhoun as Vice President and of putting Martin Van Buren on the ticket in his stead.

Calhoun had broken with the President over the nullification issue. He had strong support for renomination among Southern Democrats, but it was clear that he could not reach a two-thirds majority. In this situation the Rules Committee, which was under the control of the President, brought in the rule to which every subsequent Democratic convention, with the probable exception of that of 1840, has adhered.

Van Buren First to Profit.

President Jackson was renominated by a unanimous vote. On the first ballot for the selection of his running mate, Van Buren received 208 out of 283 votes cast, or 20 more than were required. Jackson and Van Buren were elected over Henry Clay and John Sergeant, the candidates of the Whigs. Thus, under the first use of the two-thirds rule, the aspirations of Calhoun were wrecked and Van Buren was placed in the direct line of succession to the presidency.

The rule was first applied only to the choice of the vice presidential nominee, but in the next convention, that of 1835 at Baltimore, it was made to govern the presidential nomination as well. The rule was reported to the convention by Gen. Saunders of North Carolina, who defended it on the ground that "more impo country. History of Two-Thirds Rule Maintained Nearly a Century By Democratic Conventions

Device of Jackson's "Kitchen Cabinet" in 1832 Has Withstood Repeated Attempts to Abrogate It.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

THE Democratic National Convention at Houston will be governed by the ancient rule of the party requiring a two-thirds majority for the nomination of presidential and vice presidential candidates.

Two years ago, with the avowed object of minimizing the chance of another such deadlock as that of 1924, some of the supporters of William G. McAdoo started a movement for abolishment of the rule, but the only effect was to revive a controversy that has raged intermittently ever since the rule was first put into operation nearly a century ago.

Friends of Gov. Smith also have dallied at times with the idea of seeking abandonment of the rule. As the strength of Gov. Smith has grown, however, their interest in bringing about a change has diminished. Smith has been represented as believing that if the nomination is to be worth his while, it must come to him in the time-honored way.

The position has been generally taken that if the two-thirds rule is abrogated, the unit rule also must go. The unit rule is that which permits the majority of a state delegation to control its whole vote, if the delegation is under instructions from its state convention to vote as a unit. Though of different origin from the two-thirds rule, the unit rule must be regarded as really a part of it.

President Jackson was renominated by a unanimous vote. On the first ballot for the selection of his running mate, Van Buren received 208 out of 283 votes cast, or 20 more than were required. Jackson and Van Buren were elected over Henry Clay and John Sergeant, the candidates of the Whigs. Thus, under the first use of the two-thirds rule, the aspirations of Calhoun were wrecked and Van Buren was placed in the direct line of succession to the presidency.

The rule was first applied only to the choice of the vice presidential nominee, but in the next convention, that of 1835 at Baltimore, it was made to govern the presidential nomination as well. The rule was reported to the convention by Gen. Saunders of North Carolina, who defended it on the ground that it would create a "more imposing effect" on the country. Delegate Moore of Massachusetts declared that a nomination by a simple majority would be more in accord with democratic principles, and this remains today the chief argument against the two-thirds rule. The Saunders rule was vigorously fought in the convention and was adopted with a majority of only 21 votes.

There is some dispute as to whether the two-thirds rule was used in the convention of 1840. Woodburn, in his "Political Parties and Party Problems in the United States," says that it was not, though other historians assert that the rule has been continuously applied since 1832. The question is of slight interest, since Van Buren was made the unanimous choice of the convention for the Presidency and no candidate was chosen for Vice President. The ensuing campaign resulted in the election of William Henry Harrison and John Tyler.

Van Buren Defeated.

In 1844, the two-thirds rule had the effect of defeating for the nomination—and, as it happened, the presidency also—the man in whose interest it had been originally formulated. On the first ballot in that year, Martin Van Buren, again a candidate for the Presidency, received a majority of 26 votes, but fell short of the required two-thirds. A resolution was offered to have Van Buren declared the nominee of the convention because he had received a majority of the votes. The presiding officer ruled the resolution out of order on the ground that it conflicted with one of the standing rules of the convention—the two-thirds rule—and at the end of a stormy debate an appeal from the decision of the chair was withdrawn.

James K. Polk of Tennessee was brought forward and the convention was stampeded to him on the ninth ballot. Polk was the first successful dark-horse candidate. He was elected President in the subsequent campaign.

Arguments for and against the two-thirds rule were fully developed in the debate of 1844. Supporters of the rule maintained that its wisdom had been demonstrated by the success of the party candidates nominated under it in 1832 and 1835; that it had become the settled usage of the party, and to abandon it would be to risk disaster at the polls. What hope had a candidate of being elected, it was asked, if he could not command the support of two-thirds of the nominating convention? Adoption of a majority rule, it was argued, would permit the candidate to be named by a few states with a large representation in the convention, and thus the candidate might in fact be the choice of only a small minority of the party.

Plea of Rule's Attackers.

Those favoring the abolishment of the two-thirds rule asserted that it contravened a fundamental principle of Jeffersonian democracy—the principle of rule by a majority. The two-thirds rule, it was declared, could be so applied as to allow a small minority to force its will on the majority.

The two-thirds rule was attacked in a number of subsequent conventions, but without effective result. In 1912, at Baltimore, it cost Champ Clark the nomination and probably the presidency. Clark reached 556 votes, or 11 more than a plain majority, on the tenth ballot. This was his maximum strength, but he held his majority up to and including the seventeenth ballot. His vote then began to fall off, and Wilson forged to the front. Wilson attained a majority on the forty-third ballot and was nominated on the forty-sixth.

It is interesting to recall that after Clark had received a majority in 1912, the late Senator William J. Stone, chairman of the Missouri delegation, sent a telegram to Wilson and the other candidates asking them to withdraw in favor of the Missourian.

"For 70 years," said Stone in this message, "the practice has been established of giving the nomination to the candidate who receives a majority. We ask you in the interest of the party and in vindication of the Democratic principle of majority rule to assist in making his nomination unanimous by announcing the withdrawal of your candidacy."

Fight on Rule Fails.

Stone also tried to bring about an abrogation of the two-thirds rule in the convention. All his efforts failed. Clark suffered the same fate that had been visited upon Van Buren in 1844. He never quite lost the bitterness with which he saw the prize slip from his grasp.

In the New York convention of 1924 neither of the leading candidates ever received a plain majority. McAdoo at the peak of his strength had 530 votes, or 20 short of a majority, while the highest total for Smith was 368, or 182 short. Extraordinary measures were proposed to end the deadlock between the two, but nothing came of them. The struggle lasted till the 103d ballot, when John W. Davis was nominated.

"The two-thirds rule," says Prof. E. M. Salt in his "American Parties and Elections," "whatever reason prompted its adoption nearly a century ago, came to be regarded as the palladium of the slave-holding interest in the South. The Southern states, possessed an effective veto and could prevent the nomination of any candidate who owas antagonistic to their 'domestic institution.' Times have changed. The South has no vital interest at stake. Nothing but the inertia of tradition perpetuates the two-thirds rule."

While there is no doubt that the Southern states did come to regard the rule as a protection to their special interests, the statement that ti is supported today by nothing more substantial than "the intertia of tradition" is open to serious question. The Democratic party draws its support from elements that in many re-

Refusal of Revised Prayer Book Proves Britain Protestant, Says Lloyd George

Next Parliament Will Be Even More Definitely Opposed to Change, for People Are Resolved Against Restoration of Priestcraft, Ex-Premier Asserts.

Interest Revives in Religious Matters Over Nation as a Whole and Particularly Among Younger Generation, Although Church Attendance Declines.

BY DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
LONDON, June 23.

GREAT BRITAIN today presents the paradox of a country which is losing interest and might almost be said to have lost interest in organized religion whilst simultaneously manifesting renewed and deep concern for vital spiritual matters.

It had been generally assumed that the horrors of war and especially the constant presence of death would have sobered nations and turned the thoughts of their peoples to things beyond the veil. War had exactly the opposite effect on the minds of the young who passed through it. They came to the not unnatural conclusion that a religion which permitted and seemed to encourage such an outbreak of savagery was an exposed sham.

The revolt or rather the sulkiness of youth is the most serious problem with which churches are confronted. Young people are not being recruited to the churches of their fathers—there is even a falling off among those who used to attend. A religious weekly which from time to time has for nearly a generation conducted a census of attendance at the places of worship of the various denominations in London, at the last return disclosed a sensational diminution in numbers at both morning and evening services.

Worshipers of Nature Stop Going to Church.

This experience could be repeated in probably every city and town throughout the land. There is a marked decline in Sunday School attendance. Charabancs in their stimulation of a new wanderlust have a large share of responsibility for this state of things. Petrol has declared war on the Popate and for the moment it is winning. The preacher sees his armies decimated before his eyes and he is finding increasing difficulty in obtaining recruits to fill up the gaps. The crowd around the altars of priesthood is visibly thinning. Meanwhile the shrines of nature are thronging with adorers every Sunday. Sunshine—verdure—the pure reviving air of country are joyous and invigorating realities which give life to the weary multitudes.

At a time when there is a sense of gloomy disappointment with a religion that fails to prevent war, even if it ever tried, these allurements are proving disastrous to our churches. So far there has been no serious attempt made to reconcile the conflicting appeals of church and charabancs, so the former continues to wane and the latter to thrive.

Interest in Founder of Church Increases.

That is one side of the picture. Now for the other. Side by side with this wilting of churchdom is a striking revival of interest in all that concerns the founder of Christianity and the mysteries of the hereafter. As might be expected, the popular press affords the most genuine reflection of this attitude in mind. An able writer reviewing Emil Ludwig's striking life of Christ says: "If the churches have fallen on evil days it is otherwise with their Founder. Religious observance is on the decline, hierarchies are discredited but He is a figure of lasting significance. He attracts where they repel."

The latter phase of the new spiritual awakening made itself manifest soon after the war in the desire to know what had happened to those who had fallen and the tense eagerness to communicate with them.

THE RIGHT REVEREND RANDELL DAVIDSON, Archbishop of Canterbury.

One Sunday newspaper established its circulation—which is now a very large one—by a series of articles written by clergymen of the Church of England on this subject. A famous daily paper of considerable standing, formerly edited by Charles Dickens, has published a series of able articles written by some of the leading scientists and theologians of today on the subject of life after death. These articles have aroused considerable interest and controversy. In these contributions both sides of the question have been argued and are still being argued with complete frankness.

Religious Matters Get Space in Newspapers.

Another popular daily, which has in recent years displayed an uncanny interest for "the thing that interests" has for some time been devoting a good deal of space to religious questions. The Times has been giving some of its most prominent columns to the controversy in the Church of England over the prayer book.

In the opinion of the press, politics is a dull and uninviting dish. The approach of a general election may and probably will quicken public interest in political controversy, but the newspapers are convinced that today people are more concerned about things of the soul. And yet they will not go to the churches to seek the answer. This may be a temporary phase which will pass away; it can hardly be abiding. Sooner or later every genuine need finds expression in some organized form.

The church which during the years immediately following the war seemed to suffer the least from religious reaction was the Church of Rome. During the war its churches were crowded with anxious mothers and wives supplicating for their beloved ones in peril.

After the war, attendance at Catholic churches on the Continent compared favorably with the pre-war period. My information is that this improvement has not been altogether maintained, but there can be no doubt that the action of Roman priests of Continental armies in fighting side by side with poilus and the devoted tenderness of nuns in hospitals made a deep impression on the hearts of young soldiers and their relatives, and rallied new adherence to Roman Catholic altars.

Anglo-Catholics Think Ritual Holds Appeal.

Anglo-Catholics missed the point of the Roman revival and attributed it to the appeal made to the young by the impressive Catholic ritual and to the influence exerted by the priest through his sacramental powers. Hence the renewed efforts made by this powerful section of the Anglican Church to secure official sanction for their sacramental theories. That is the true inwardness of the revised prayer book.

Minor alterations effected in the language of the old prayer book were little more than an inadequate cover for the real change that was being attempted in the fundamental attitude of Protestantism toward communion. It took the Nation some time to realize the importance of the maneuver. The clergy on the whole favored the change; it enhanced their consequence. If accomplished it would restore to them as the priesthood the immense power they exerted in pre-Reformation days. The Bench of Bishops was first of all captured by the Sacerdotalists. The Episcopal authority dominated the Church Assembly. The House of Lords then fell, but the House of Commons stood firm.

The first assault on the representative assembly failed; the second attack has been repelled by a larger majority. The British people are resolved against the restoration of priestcraft. The effort will not be renewed in the lifetime of the present Parliament and it is safe to predict that the next Parliament will be more definitely hostile to the contemplated change. The nation as a whole is definitely and radically Protestant. But the excitement aroused by discussion is significant of renewed interest in religious matters.

Says Pomp Has No Lure For Younger Generation.

It signifies more than the stubbornness of Protestant tradition. It means that the post-war generation is rebelling against involutions and subtleties of doctrine, that it has ceased to be awed or attracted by pomp of ritual and is harking back to the simple and searching appeal of the Human Teacher. This is borne out by the character of comments in the independent papers.

One of the week-end papers with an enormous circulation amongst the middle class and well-to-do artisans has a remarkable article headed "Back to the Carpenter." Its tone is indicative of the drift of British opinion on religion, as the following extract proves:

"When the book offers us collects taken from the Roman Mariolatry the modern Briton is not impressed. He follows the preacher who inspires him rather than forms a ritual of worship. He warms to the man who knows human problems and places them, he prefers the minister who acts the simple gospel of the Carpenter rather than the one who seeks to impress him by mystic ceremonial. We cannot go back to medievalism and we are not likely to. Even in his rejection the layman has testified to his deep spiritual sense and, one may add, to his common sense. And the church would require real merit if it duly accepted the position and the emphatic rebuke administered to it with an enlightened humility."

Another great Sunday paper publishes an article in similar terms. Once more "The Galilean Has Conquered."

Ludendorff Tells Europe Only Way to Peace Is to Shed U. S. Financial Yoke

Finds Disarmament Conference 'Shameless' While Conditions of 'Versailles Dictation' Exist.

By Field Marshal Eric von Ludendorff.
BERLIN, June 23.

THE present-day disconsolate political and economic position in Europe is externally based on the dictations of peace which terminated the World War, but which politically created impossible conditions—for example, the destruction of European equilibrium, the enslavement and degradation of the German Nation and the defenselessness of the German State. This position is further aggravated by the elimination of Russia from the comity of Europe and the striving for power of Wall street. The latter's effort is based on the bid for power by the United States and, in a very real sense, on its accumulation and control of the gold stock of the entire world, and is aimed at controlling the economic life of Europe.

These external processes, however, only attain their full significance owing to the fact that behind Wall street there are, in addition, certain specialized forces at work in Europe, which, under the guise of religion or other persuasions for promoting human welfare, have formed themselves into powerful associations.

These bodies wish to deprive the peoples of Europe of their consciousness of blood relationship and of their political, cultural and economic independence. Pan-Europe is to arise under the supervision of the League of Nations, which is, at the expense of the sovereignty of states, to be equipped with far-reaching governing powers and to have its own army and its own police. In this Pan-Europe the present sovereign states are to be only self-governing economic provinces. Out of the pure-bred nations a mass of slaves of mixed blood is to arise. Indeed, these forces go still farther; these nations are to be deprived of their mother tongue and are to be given the same faith as is based on the laws of Noah.

Urges Enlightenment.

It may safely be said that everything is being turned topsy-turvy in Europe, much of it visibly, but still more invisibly. The press ventures in few cases to call anything by its proper name, although it should be its duty to enlighten the peoples. The fulfillment of this duty is the first essential condition for the pacification and welfare of Europe.

Before the World War, every statesman conscious of his responsibility had an aversion for the so-called disarmament conferences, because they suffered from obvious insincerity and deep immorality. It is immoral to prescribe for a Nation what it may undertake for its own defense; that can be determined only by each nation itself. In this, for instance, lies a part of the immense immorality of the Versailles dictation. Nothing illustrates this better than the fact that the so-called victor States do not in the least honestly envisage disarmament, although they bound themselves to do so.

Nothing is more unworthy and more shameless than the disarmament comedy at Geneva. Not in the armaments is the cause of the unrest in Europe to be sought, but in the immorality in politics which I here briefly summarize in one single instance; morality in politics is the first and foremost condition precedent to the pacification and welfare of Europe.

Need of Blood Ties.

It is immoral to deprive Nations of their specific innate qualities and their National characteristics and personality. Respect for the peculiarities of race and of nationality is an essential condition for the pacification and welfare of Europe. Suppression of the call of blood relationship is sure to bring about unrest and decay. The endeavor of Wall street to be guided simply by economic conditions, while casting aside the more generous and ennobling impulse, will result ultimately in the rule of those of lower race over refined and highly civilized peoples and must arouse anger and bitter antagonism.

Perhaps a brief glance at the economic conditions of Europe may make other things still clearer. The Russian nation has sunk into the catalepsy of the grave; it is not answerable for the actions of these in whose power it lies impotent; its teeming millions are merely a mass of torpidly living slaves. It supplies nothing more to Europe and needs nothing more from it. The peoples of Europe should indeed reflect on the question as to who was really responsible for the collapse of Russia and to what extent Wall street supported Trotzky. The Russian experiment was not entirely successful; the national life of a people of one blood has certainly been destroyed, but the enslaved mass has been made too apathetic and is lacking in desire.

Says Standards Fall.

Germany, and with it German Austria, has met with a similar fate, but by a bloodless path. The money of Wall street and the people behind it are laying hold of the industrials' undertakings in Germany, of its land and resources and wealth of every description; the middle class is dying out and the standard of life of all workers is falling. But the German still works and still needs something.

Marxism and Communism, a pliant government, and an un-German representation of the people have less assisted in the work of enslavement. Every minute of the day and night Germany has to pay 5000 gold marks in reparations. It is well to remember that Germany already is the best-paying province of the Wall street Pan-Europe which is coming into existence.

What advantage will accrue from all this to the other European nations — for instance, the English and French? I think not the slightest. They, too, will proceed along the same path of barren "bolshevism" sooner or later. It is clear in any case that as long as the populations of Russia and Germany live under such conditions there can be no question of European well-being. This can only be achieved if the nations of Europe again lead their own individual economic lives and work for themselves.

Wants Freedom From U. S.

The economic welfare of Europe demands freedom from American financial methods—as will be acknowledged by everyone, even though many have not been able to gain so deep an insight into conditions as my life experience has enabled me to do.

It is my firm conviction, therefore, that the external and internal forces which stand in the way of the pacification of Europe, such as the Versailles dictation and the methods of Wall street, must be eliminated. The desire to eliminate these factors is taking stronger hold every hour. It cannot be suppressed and will be the more decisive the more the nations, in all their acts, harken to the divine call of blood and morality and become conscious of the task allocated to them by destiny, with the full feeling of responsibility to their neighboring states.

Along this path only runs the way which will lead the peoples of Europe out of the mire of unrest and economic destruction to permanent peace and lasting welfare, such as they have not enjoyed for a long time. In this way they will once more become, as they were thousands of years ago, the preceptors of the culture to the entire world.

Whose Government Is This?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WILLIAM CABELL BRUCE, United States Senator from Maryland, renegade Democrat, abettor of Republican policies, little brother of the trusts, tribune of the hydro-electric power trust of America. This is the man who always runs away from the Democratic party when it means something substantial for the people and runs toward it when he wants any special favor for himself. This is the peculiar defect in his political character. Why he was ever sent to the United States Senate to represent anybody on earth is a mystery.

Mr. Bruce, it seems, is dreadfully opposed to the Government of the United States owning and operating anything that has profit in it. He much prefers that private capitalists get the profit rather than the people. He really objects to that. And he puts forth the plea that the Government of this great country is impotent to operate great enterprises, although it does own and operate the postoffice, the Panama Canal, railroads in Alaska, the army and navy and other undertakings. Although the Government built and owns Muscle Shoals, costing over $100,000,000 he thinks the whole works ought to be handed over to the special privilege gentlemen, so that they may charge any price and make what profit they please out of the Southern people. Under Government operation hydro-electric power could be manufactured and sold to the entire Southland at cost, with the creation of a reserve each year as payment upon the original outlay.

Naturally Mr. Bruce would be in opposition to that great enterprise, the Panama Canal, now on a splendidly paying basis, Government-owned and operated. It is also logical to presume that he would be in opposition to the projected Nicaragua canal route as an additional outlet to the Pacific. He is fiercely against that empire building project, the Boulder Dam upon the Colorado River, a magnificent enterprise benefiting seven states and 10,000,000 of people, which will help upbuild and populate the Pacific states of this Union. If there were no profit in this enterprise, Mr. Bruce would not interpose, neither would the hydro-electric power trust of America. But Mr. Bruce, being little brother of the big interests, which of course should include Mr. Andy Mellon's interests, must see to it that no profit gets away from his particular crowd. The people of the United States? Shucks!

In the Senate of the United States, Mr. Bruce said (referring to Boulder Dam): "I am against this bill more than any other legislation in Congress and I object to any sort of an agreement," meaning first position for the bill in the December session of the Senate. "I believe that when a man has been whipped (meaning Senator Johnson of California) he ought to be given ONE LAST BLOW." The galleries hissed. People will hiss a man who wants to kick another man when he is down. It's brutal, so folks who have a sense of fair play naturally will hiss such a cowardly statement. It is unsportsmanlike. The Hon. Jack Dempsey, famous prize fighter, would not so outclass himself as even to want to hit a man when he is down. It is against the rules of the game.

The men who oppose Government ownership and operation of natural monopolies that by right belong to all the people, are not in opposition to any proposal because it is owned and operated by the Government for the people, but they oppose any and all Government schemes that have profit in them. It is only that thing "profit" they are after. They are not worried over principles. And this was clearly shown when a failing private enterprise, the Cape Cod Ship Canal, that could not be profitably operated by private capital, was foisted upon the Government recently, the Government buying it outright at the instance of the very people who shout the loudest against Government ownership of big projects. And the Government paid a much higher price than would have been received had the Cape Cod Canal been sold under the hammer. Government money paid for that failure. The bill went sliding through Congress and the unctuous Mr. Coolidge, who says the Government ought to keep out of the people's business, signed the measure. Private capital must be preserved though it takes the people's money to do it.

Whose Government is this, anyway?

W. E. BEVERIDGE.

Will the Democratic Convention Act With Sincerity and Courage?

The Republican convention at Kansas City has offered the Democratic convention at Houston good ground for an opposition cause in the presidential campaign. It has adopted policies which the Democratic party can turn into definite vital national issues.

On three points the Republicans set an example of courage for their Democratic opponents.

In their platform they accepted a plank on Federal prohibition satisfactory to the Anti-Saloon League. However meaningless the word "enforcement" may have become in the light of experience, the substance of the plank adopted by the Republican convention, dictated by Senator Borah, approves the eighteenth amendment as a permanent part of the Constitution, not to be repealed or questioned. The party has given a pledge to enforce the Volstead act.

The Republicans deliberately, after full hearing and debate, rejected the demands of the farm delegates. They refused to approve the equalization fee and adopted a plank in accordance with the policy of farm relief outlined by Mr. Coolidge.

The Republicans approved and praised without measure the plutocratic policies practiced by the Government under the Harding and Coolidge administrations. They frankly accepted privilege and paternalism as principles of government. They indorsed high protection as essential and beneficent to the general welfare. They promised more protection to industries. One of the remedies for agricultural depression was protection for farm products, which has hitherto proved a farce.

We might mention as another act of courage of the Republican party the practical ignoring of the revelation of official corruption and connivance at corruption; the ignoring of the issue of political corruption raised by the exposure of the expenditure of vast sums in senatorial primaries and elections.

Whatever the people may think of its platform, the Republican party, in standing pat and taking well-defined positions in accordance with the party policies, despite minority protests, has at least earned public respect for its courage. The people know where it stands.

What will the national Democratic convention do? The whole country is awaiting its action at Houston to find out whether its opposition to the dominant party will be sincere and courageous or evasive and cowardly. Whether, in short, it will appeal to the country on well-defined principles or on a sham, vote-getting platform.

There is much talk among the Democratic politicians on the necessity of unity. If the unity aimed at is the unity of politicasters, that is to say, a unity obtained by a sacrifice of principle, in an effort to please everybody, through meaningless phrases, unity will be valueless. Unity of that kind will not win the support of men of convictions and intelligence, but will earn their contempt.

How can the Democrats meet the challenge of the Republican party on Federal prohibition otherwise than by condemning the eighteenth amendment and all its tyrannical and destructive work? The Democrats profess to stand on Jeffersonian principles. What are these principles? The restriction of Federal power to the grants of the Constitution. The preservation of the rights, powers and functions of the states reserved in the Constitution. The preservation of individual liberty and the rights of citizens guaranteed by the Constitution. Jefferson recognized these rights as inherent. They were not created by the Constitution, but were recognized and protected by it. The eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act are directly contrary to these principles and destructive of constitutional rights.

We grant that Federal prohibition does not represent the only invasion of the rights and powers of the states, the only expansion of the Federal power beyond the confines set by the original Constitution. But it is the worst. It is the deepest cut in all the whittling down of state rights and powers, individual rights and liberties, and local self-government. So long as it stands it lends approval and encouragement for Federal Congress, Federal Courts, government executives and administrators, to extend Federal jurisdiction, Federal control and the tyranny of Federal bureaucracy.

If the Democratic party is to stand against any of these encroachments, it must stand first of all against the greatest and worst encroachment. If it be true to Jeffersonian principles it must strike at all phases of the march towards Federal empire, particularly this worst of all, which is a deadly blow to rights and liberties and local self-government.

The two leading Democratic candidates for the presidency, Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York and Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, whose combined delegates represent more than two-thirds of the Democratic convention, are recognized leaders of the anti-prohibitionists. They are both anti-Federal expansionists. They are both professed Jeffersonians in principle, on all the questions we have touched upon. How can either one be nominated on an evasive, meaningless platform in betrayal of Jeffersonian principles, without a confession of insincerity and cowardice?

The leading candidate, Gov. Smith, who now has admittedly the support of nearly two-thirds of the convention, is an avowed opponent of Federal prohibition. He has won his support in an amazing demonstration of his popularity with the voters in nearly every part of the country. The voters who supported his presidential candidacy knew his attitude on Federal prohibition. They supported him not only on his great record as Governor of New York but on account of his principles. How can the Democratic convention nominate Gov. Smith, an avowed anti-prohibitionist, elected as a standard bearer on account of his record and principles and popular confidence in his sincerity and courage, on a platform either denying or evading his principles and views? If the Democrats are going to adopt a cowardly and evasive pronouncement on Federal prohibition, it ought to nominate a politicaster, not Gov. Smith.

The Republicans risked a revolt of the Republican agricultural states to stand by their convictions on agricultural relief. Surely the Democrats can risk a revolt of the followers of the Anti-Saloon League and the Ku Klux Klan to stand by the principles and convictions of an overwhelming majority of the party.

If the Democratic party has a chance for victory, that chance lies not in surrender to a few intolerants, not by alliance with the Anti-Saloon League and the Ku Klux Klan, but by a sincere and courageous appeal to the intelligence and the honest convictions of the people of the whole country. It must win the support of the independent and the liberal voters of the East, the border states, the North by a frank and honest declaration of sound principles and policies. It cannot win these voters by cowardice and evasion.

The fighting ground of Democracy is not in the solid South. That is assuredly solid. It is in the Republican East, North and West. It is among the liberal adherents of sound governmental principles everywhere.

What we say of the need of honesty and sincerity on the part of the Democratic party in regard to prohibition must be applied to the other issues presented by the Republican record and Republican platform. It must honestly and courageously declare for sound principles and an honest administration, in dealing with all governmental problems.

Sound Democratic principle does not require that any legitimate business be injured, but it does require that all legitimate business be protected from illegitimate business, and from meddlesome and tyrannical governmental interference. The party must stand firm against excessive tariffs and multiplied bureaus.

The Democratic convention cannot yield to clamor on the question of farm relief. It cannot promise the farmers unconstitutional measures and illegitimate privileges. It must protect them from illegitimate privileges and advantages on the part of other interests. It must assure them of equity in the conduct of the Government and of all the legitimate cooperation and relief that lies within the constitutional power of the Federal Government. The revival of prosperity in agriculture constitutes one of the greatest problems in this country and the solution of the problem must be worked out with honesty and intelligence. It will never be worked out with the Government in control of the industrial and financial magnates and used by them to promote their own selfish interests regardless of all other interests.

The issue of official corruption and connivance in it is clear and well defined. So is the issue of the expenditure of vast sums to buy Senate seats and other offices.

There is another issue, well defined by the Republican administration. That is our interference in Nicaragua and the policy of imperialism towards our southern neighbors which it represents. There ought to be no doubt in Democratic councils as to where the party stands on the use of the armed forces of the United States to control elections in neighboring states and to displace or set up governments there. Nor ought there to be any doubt on the kindred subject of the liberal part the United States should play in promoting international justice and peace. The Permanent Court of International Justice is in accord with national ideals and Democratic ideals. The party ought to declare emphatically for participation in that court and for full co-operation with all the legitimate agencies for international peace.

In dealing with all these issues the path of sincerity and courage is the only path by which the Democratic party can win popular respect, confidence and support from the elements which will decide the contest in November.

The real test of sincerity and courage will come on the biggest issue—the issue of Federal prohibition. That involves the preservation of the whole structure of constitutional government. It involves constitutional guarantees of rights and liberties. It involves law and order. It involves fundamental Jeffersonian principles. Action on this issue will measure the fidelity of the Democratic party to Democratic principles.

Condemnation of the eighteenth amendment, with all sumptuary legislation, would square the Democratic party with its principles. It would prove both its courage and capacity.

Over in Ohio a hen laid an egg with the letter C on the shell. The owner believed it was an omen for Coolidge, but the convention proved otherwise. If we wait long enough we may hear of a Rhode Island Red laying an egg with a C on it for the Communist party.

What a state government we have under Baker! Attorney-General Gentry, who has been a failure in that office, has been promoted by the Governor to a place on the Supreme bench.

WHETHER this book is a fair statement of the socialist position, whether it is sound economics and political good sense, may be matter for argument. I think it is all that, with some minor reservations and disagreements. Of this I am certain: it is sound literature. Considered as writing, as an example of the art of exposition, it is the finest thing on its subject and pertinent subjects since Morris' "News From Nowhere," and in content, of course, it is far richer and more modern. It is clearer than any of the German authorities from Marx down (I know them only in English translation), clear as the lens of a telescope. The manner is persuasive, urbane, civilized, and, as we should expect, salted with humor. Much serious matter is conveyed with a smile; a closely organized page of argument is relieved by just the right touch of fooling. Shaw's words are as simple as the subject will allow. He uses very little of the lingo of socialism which we borrowed from Germany; if "economic determinism" appears at all, I overlooked it. And there is nothing of the soap-box harangue which makes many socialist writers, Upton Sinclair, for example, unendurably wearisome and drives one to join the Calvin Coolidge Club forthwith. (To make the attitude of this review clear I will say that I have been a socialist for 20 years.)

Since exposition and argument are very largely a matter of definition of terms, a late chapter, the excellent one on Current Confusions, might well be read first as a sort of dictionary. It may be especially recommended to writers for the capitalist (grrrrr!) press, many of whom, as the late William D. Haywood said, do not know the difference between anarchism and arnica. Shaw's own vocabulary is fresh and vivacious. Old economic propositions that one has heard a hundred times until they have become lifeless are revived as if by a transfusion of blood. And the whole discourse twinkles with the happy device of making an imaginary woman the audience and woman the generic third person. It is usually "he's" who do and think. Here a capitalist invests her money; she earns an extra loaf of bread; she finds her rent raised. There is the delightful implication that men are too stupid to be worth talking to: Shaw says that politically American men are "futile gossips."

The heart of the argument which beats on every page is that socialism means equality of income. Any future state or political program or ism, however admirable, which is not based on equality of income is not socialism. All economic and social evils are rooted in inequality of income, and from those root-evils spring most of the remediable sufferings of humanity. Mankind, a nation first and then perhaps all the world, is to become a vast joint-stock company in which everybody is shareholder, everybody draws his dividend, and every ablebodied person does his share of the necessary work. Since all useful work is of social value and one kind cannot be done without another on which it depends—the engineer of a bridge and the mason working on the pier cannot do a stroke—one without the other—then all work must be declared equally useful and be equally rewarded. The worst crime is idleness, which means that one person lives by the labor of another or others. Parasitism is the primary social disease, resulting in two kinds of waste: the loss of the potential ability of the parasite to contribute to the total national income and the waste of health and life due to poverty.

The way to the realization of the socialist state is the gradual nationalization of the land and of all the great basic industries. This can be accomplished only when most people want such a change and are ready to elect and organize a government to bring it about and manage the total national property. Socialism means the complete abolition of private ownership in the things on which our common life depends. That is, the fundamental, productive, wealth-making materials—wealth-making when labor is applied to them. Pace! The state is not going to own your watch or your typewriter, but it will own the typewriter factory and the watch factory and the gold mine from which the gold in the watch came and the iron mine and the coal mine from which came the steel in the typewriter. When people want this change—that is important. Shaw is a Fabian and amusingly points out that it was gentlemen with a classical education and not proletarians who invented that word. Revolutions by violence accomplish nothing or very little; the class struggle gets nowhere; a majority of intelligent people of all kinds, including Madam the Intelligent Woman, must will socialism and drill for it. It must be a growth from what is now, a fulfillment of the visible and ever-developing present. Already many things are communized—roads, bridges, the postoffice, and other public services. Already the confiscation of wealth is accepted as a matter of course in taxes. And nobody in his senses, properly educated, would object to giving up his privileges if he knew that he was to have a fair deal.

That is the heart of the argument. There are other organs and limbs to this articulate and organic book. Indeed, it is more than a socialist argument. It is a study of human nature, of humane society. What is money? What is wealth? What is "spare money"? What is a savings bank account? What is a national debt? How does a stock exchange work? What are rent, interest, taxes? All that is hard economics, here admirably clarified with little of the conventional dialect of the textbooks. But, more important, what is education, what are social distinctions, what really are common honesty, decency, human dignity? What is liberty? These concern the soul of man after his stomach has been filled and his back covered.

The peroration alone is worth the price of admission (since this book has much to say of prices); it is a beautiful essay. Shaw calls this work his last will and testament and says that it took six years to write and cost more labor than his plays. I am glad that he took the time off from what he modestly calls his "lucrative talent," and hope that he may add codicils to his will in the form of more essays on socialism and life and at least six more plays.

What Is Worth Doing at All

Is worth doing well. Such always has been our attitude toward the big things of life. We never did consider winding a watch to be one of the big things. But live and learn, as the Senator questioning the oil witness a second time discovered. Winding a watch not only is one of the big things of life, but it may be the big thing. "Fame and fortune were his, for he always wound his watch," may tell some simple story of success. Our watch began to miss a beat now and then. One time, it would be 10 minutes fast; another, five minutes slow. Still, we were not conscious of having mistreated the watch. We wound it occasionally, and left it on almost any flat surface when we took it off, but that is not the right way to treat a watch. A watch has its foibles, and the owner must study them. "How often," questioned the jeweler, "do you wind the watch?" "Twice a day," we answered. "Don't," he said. But that was not all he said. Winding a watch twice a day makes it nervous. When we said winding it once a day might make it stop, he assured us he had some watches that went for a week without winding. "Some watches!" we speculated. Watches, we now know, are sensitive things. We could not follow the entire regimen mapped out for our watch. We have other things to do. But we have adopted a new attitude toward life and watches from having met a jeweler who lives, breathes and thinks fine watches, a man who hates to see even another's watch handled with less than reverence. But if the barber prescribes a diet or something like that for our hair, we shall tell him to have his watch fixed. At present, our watch takes up all our time.

"What do we call the time when we study public utilities?" "Oh, that," said little Johnny, brightly, "is our kilowatt hour."

We do not know if it is a commentary on civilization or not, but you never see an abandoned filling station.

We have our depressed moments, when we feel that whoever said, "Familiarity breeds contempt," was thinking of some popular songs.

Somehow or other, the instructions in the book never quite thoroughly cover what to do with the cards you have in your hand.

Sometimes a man knows there is much to be said on both sides of a question because he has been on both sides.

OVE TO DRESS P AND CONTROL MERAMEC RIVER

OULEVARD ON EACH SIDE IS FAVORED

evelopment of St. Louis Playground Into More Attractive Recreation Asset Proposed.

The Meramec River Association has been formed, as a result of a report by the Parks Committee of the St. Louis County Chamber of Commerce, with the following objects:

Enlisting support of Meramec Valley mayors, bankers, public and private clubhouse owners, resort operators and citizens in general.

Drafting of necessary legislation and working for its passage.

Formation of a permanent Meramec River commission.

Advocacy of improvements, ranging from more aquatic sports to minor hydro-electric development.

Creation of a boulevard on each side fo the stream, from the Mississippi to Franklin County State Park, as a scenic circuit.

J. H. Wright, a canoe manufacturer at Valley Park, was chosen president of the association, at a meeting at the Osage Country Club; George Pickles of Fenton, vice president; George Frazier of Glencoe, treasurer; Clarence Loques of Eureka, secretary, and T. D. Alderson of the Union Electric Light & Power Co., statistician.

Continuous Policy Wanted.

In the Parks Committee report, L. P. Greensfelder, chairman, who is a civil engineer and builder, said:

"The Meramec is a navigable stream and as such comes under Federal jurisdiction for at least a part of its length. The reason the Federal Government has given no attention to the meramec is due to the fact that the people in the Meramec Valley have done nothing themselves. We have certain assurance that whenever the property owners and users of the river guarantee to the Government a continuous policy of river improvement, the Government will render considerable assistance, to help maintain this as a navigable river safe for continuous use.

"The Meramec is a sinuous stream, winding without challenge through its valley. Properly directed, its course could be considerably straightened, its bends cleared and widened and its whole course, through proper regulation works and bank protection, could be made a fit waterway in every respect.

"This lack of protection endances the flood damage, which occurs annually, many times without much warning. With the proper rain gauging and stream gauging, warnings could be given in advance similar to the predictions for the Mississippi River, thus enabling property owners to protect their crops and buildings. Dikes and levees can protect vast areas of fertile soil now devastated each year."

Playground District.

The Meramec Valley is the largest playground in the St. Louis district and is in growing demand, said the report, so that it is desirable to make this a safer and more attractive place for recreation and a greater commercial asset to the community. It was characterized as an asset which would be hard to match near any other American city, comparable to the Columbia River approach to Portland, Ore., but "it is not now intensively used owing to the dangers lurking in its waters."

"It does not take much vision to prophesy 100,00 persons weekending on the Meramec," the report continued, "and yet this number will not be reached for many years unless immediate action is taken to arouse lawmakers to the necessity of adequate legislation."

No sanitary measures are being provided for handling sewage and garbage or for providing potable water, the report pointed out, nor is anything being done to prevent breeding of mosquitoes and creation of swampy places. The stream was described as "rapidly becoming a foul water sewer."

Among suggestions made were: A launch to collect garbage; a gasoline-operated snagboat to keep the stream clear and prevent formation of dangerous rapids; life guards for every beach; patrols to regulate river traffic and preserve order; motor boat and canoe license fees, comparable to automobile licenses, and assessment of benefitted property, for support of the proposed activities, and other revenue from concessions, tax on motor boat gasoline, as on automobiles, licenses for boating and bathing privileges and an annual service charge in proportion to the river frontage of property.

evelopment of St. Louis Playground Into More Attractive Recreation Asset Proposed.

The Meramec River Association has been formed, as a result of a report by the Parks Committee of the St. Louis County Chamber of Commerce, with the following objects:

Enlisting support of Meramec Valley mayors, bankers, public and private clubhouse owners, resort operators and citizens in general.

Drafting of necessary legislation and working for its passage.

Formation of a permanent Meramec River commission.

Advocacy of improvements, ranging from more aquatic sports to minor hydro-electric development.

Creation of a boulevard on each side fo the stream, from the Mississippi to Franklin County State Park, as a scenic circuit.

J. H. Wright, a canoe manufacturer at Valley Park, was chosen president of the association, at a meeting at the Osage Country Club; George Pickles of Fenton, vice president; George Frazier of Glencoe, treasurer; Clarence Roques of Eureka, secretary, and W. D. Alderson of the Union Electric Light & Power Co., statistician.

Continuous Policy Wanted.

In the Parks Committee report, A. P. Greensfelder, chairman, who is a civil engineer and builder, said:

With the proper rain gauging and stream gauging, warnings could be given in advance similar to the predictions for the Mississippi River, thus enabling property owners to protect their crops and buildings. Dikes and levees can protect vast areas of fertile soil now devastated each year."

Playground District.

The Meramec Valley is the largest playground in the St. Louis district and is in growing demand, said the report, so that it is desirable to make this a safer and more attractive place for recreation and a greater commercial asset to the community. It was characterized as an asset which would be hard to match near any other American city, comparable to the Columbia River approach to Portland, Ore., but "it is not now intensively used owing to the dangers lurking in its waters."

"It does not take much vision to prophesy 100,00 persons weekending on the Meramec," the report continued, "and yet this number will not be reached for many years unless immediate action is taken to arouse lawmakers to the necessity of adequate legislation."

No sanitary measures are being provided for handling sewage and garbage or for providing potable water, the report pointed out, nor is anything being done to prevent breeding of mosquitoes and creation of swampy places. The stream was described as "rapidly becoming a foul water sewer."

Among suggestions made were: A launch to collect garbage; a gasoline-operated snagboat to keep the stream clear and prevent formation of dangerous rapids; life guards for every beach; patrols to regulate river traffic and preserve order; motor boat and canoe license fees, comparable to automobile licenses, and assessment of benefitted property, for support of the proposed activities, and other revenue from concessions, tax on motor boat gasoline, as on automobiles, licenses for boating and bathing privileges and an annual service charge in proportion to the river frontage of property.

State Enabling Act.

A State enabling act providing for river commissions to serve the major streams within Missouri and their tributaries was proposed in the report. A commission would be formed when 50 or more citizens in a majority of counties within any drainage basin petitioned the county courts in the basin, two non-salaried representatives from each county being appointed by the court. There are many American precedents, as along the Charles River, Boston, for the program and legislation advocated here, it was declared.

The River Commission should be empowered to establish a lower harbor line at the edge of the river at normal flow and an upper harbor line five feet above the edge at high water, the report said, and the area within these broad riparian borders should be considered public domain except for real estate ownership. The strips would be under the absolute control of the commission, which would have full power to regulate their use and occupancy; stationary structures would be permitted between the lines only by revocable permits of convenience from the commission.

Benefit districts should be established by the commission, similar to drainage, highway and other special districts within the State, the report said, with assessments on property included not exceeding ½ of 1 per cent of the assessed valuation. This would establish a fund for the commission's work.

Other powers proposed for the Meramec River Commission are:

Other Powers Proposed.

Construction of dams, locks, canals, docks, levees, portages, piers and bridges; establishment of rain and stream gauges; encouragement, regulation and provision of facilities for aquatic sports; regulation of ice harvesting and winter sports; regulation of navigation subject to Federal and State law; provision for flood control, irrigation, better navigation, water power and potable water supply; stocking and breeding of fish and water animals; extermination of mosquitoes and drainage of swamps; provision of parking for boats and automobiles and adequate lighting; establishment of beaches and bathhouses; provision of picnic grounds on the banks; preservation of historical monuments; operation of marine facilities; provision for patrols, garbage collection and sanitary equipment, like septic tanks; protection of banks, removal of rapids and straightening of stream; issuance of bonds for which the benefit districts would be assessed; operating of busses and hydroplanes; zoning regulations until the cities and counties should take this power over.

The watershed of the Meramec valley covers 3980 square miles, including 808 for the Bourbeuse River and 955 for the Big River, the major tributaries. The basin extends from Rolla to Webster Groves and from Ironton to Union. It includes parts of St. Louis, Jefferson, Washington, Franklin, Crawford, St. Francois, Dent, Phelps and Osage counties.

Two-Thirds Rule Maintained for Nearly a Century

spects are widely divergent—notably from the South and from the metropolitan centers of the East. In each of these sections there is strong positive opinion that it should be allowed to exercise a veto power over the chance of a candidate. The Smith delegates of 1924 vetoed the nomination of McAdoo, and the McAdoo delegates vetoed the nomination of Smith.

Move by McAdoo Men.

Whatever the claims of disinterestedness, virtually all the efforts of the past to rescind the two-thirds rule have been made with the fortunes of a particular candidate in mind. The effort of 1926 was set in motion by McAdoo adherents, at a time when it looked as if McAdoo might be a factor in 1928. It is safe to assume that with McAdoo out of the picture and Smith the leading contender, the friends of McAdoo have lost interest in the movement. Its success would now mean the certain nomination of Smith, or the very thing that its promoters were seeking to prevent.

It is the practice of the Democrats to adopt every four years the standing rules of the preceding convention. This will be done at Houston. Thus the two-thirds rule will be put into effect by a majority vote, and it can be suspended after the convention gets under way only by a two-thirds vote. If by any chance Gov. Smith is stopped by a one-third bloc, as the friends of Senator Reed are asserting he will be, then it is possible that an effort will be made to suspend the rules and give him the nomination as the majority choice, as Stone tried to do for Clark in 1912. But to get a two-thirds vote for suspension of the rules would probably be as difficult as to get a two-thirds vote for the candidate.

The sum of it all is that Gov. Smith must take the hurdle that all Democratic presidential candidates, with one possible exception, have faced since the first national convention of the party. His friends say he will take it easily; his enemies say it will prove his undoing. Houston in a few days will give the answer.

Worker for the Blind to Speak.

Miss Adeline A. Ruenzi, assistant secretary of the Missouri Commission for the Blind, will speak on work of the commission at a meeting of the Women's Advertising Club tomorrow noon.

CATHOLIC CHARITY AGENCIES TO DISCUSS HOSPITALIZATION

Conference Sept. 16-20 Part of St. Vincent de Paul Society's Convention.

Hospital care for middle class and poor patients and the rising cost of medicine are among the topics on the program for discussion at the fourteenth national conference of Catholic Charities, to be held in St. Louis Sept. 16 to 20, in conjunction with a convention of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul of the United States.

Among the speakers will be P. J. Shelby, chief Probation Officer of New York City; Frederick A. Moran, secretary of the New York State Probation Commission; John A. McNamara, Chicago, executive editor of "Modern Hospital," and Bernard J. Fagan of the New York City children's courts.

John E. Riley is general chairman of the local committee in charge of convention arrangements. The delegates, representing Catholic charitable organizations in all parts of the country, will participate in discussion of a wide variety of social and charitable problems.

Dent County Association Picnic.

The seventh annual reunion of the Dent County Association will be held on Grounds 8 and 9 in Forest Park at 1 p. m. Saturday, June 30. It will be an old fashioned picnic, and the committee has invited all former Dent County residents and their friends to attend and bring well-filled baskets. Supper will be spread at 6 p. m.

McNamee in Charge Again Of Convention Broadcasting

David Lawrence and Other Newspaper Men Will Assist Him in 'Covering' Democratic Sessions for KSD.

GRAHAM McNAMEE and the same staff of newspaper men who "covered" the Republican convention at Kansas City so successfully for listeners to KSD and allied stations, will be in charge of broadcasting over the NBC chains from the Democratic National Convention at Houston. Including KSD, about 45 stations will be hooked up in chains affiliated with the National Broadcasting Co.

Fifteen minutes before Clem Shaver, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, raps for order to open the convention, McNamee will begin the convention broadcasting. He will use this preliminary period to describe the convention hall in Houston and the delegates and to give to the radio audience news bulletins on last-minute developments in the Democratic political situation.

Working with McNamee in the same manner as at the recent Republican National Convention in Kansas City, will be David Lawrence, Frederic William Wile, Marley Sherris, another veteran of the NBC announcing staff, and a corps of trained newspaper men and broadcasters.

Profiting by their experiences in Kansas City, McNamee, Lawrence, Sherris and the reportorial staff should exceed themselves in covering the Democratic convention.

Use of a staff of trained newspaper men to cover a convention for the radio audience was an untried experiment when the G. O. P. convention was called to order June 12. Today it is known that the plan is successful from every point. So persons tuning in on KSD for the Democratic broadcast are assured of a concise and accurate report of what is taking place in Houston in addition to the colorful noise picture that radio alone can transmit to faraway places.

As in Kansas City, the NBC and associated stations will give the convention broadcast the right of way over all programs. In event of night sessions, other programs will be cancelled so that the big news event will be available to the nation.

The NBC technical staff is in Houston arranging microphones and broadcasting apparatus so that every important angle of the convention will be covered. As in Kansas City, there will be microphones on the speakers' platform and at the bandstand. A special announcers' booth will be located at a point where McNamee can keep the entire assembly under his eye. The noise "atmosphere" will be picked up by special microphones.

Radio listeners will hear a Southern girl singing the National anthem immediately after the convention is called to order. Miss Melvina Bassmore of Houston, has been chosen to lead the convention in "The Star Spangled Banner."

The rollicking tunes always played by bands at Democratic conventions—"The Old Gray Mare" and "East Side, West Side," the

Famous Lyric Soprano Sings Today on KSD

DR. J. FREDERIC BERG, pastor of the Flatbush Reform Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., will be the speaker in the Summer Radio Church broadcast over KSD at noon today.

Dr. Berg was president of the General Synod of the Reformed Church of America. A direct descendant of Peter Stuyvesant, he is well known as a lecturer on Biblical heology.

The musical program will be by a mixed quartet under direction of George Vause. The program follows:

Welcome, Delightful Morn— (arr.) Mason
Invocation by .....Dr. Berg
Sing a Song of Praise .....West
Scripture Reading by ...Dr. Berg
Response — Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of Hosts Rejoice, All Ye Believers and Let Your Lights Appear ..... Smart
Prayer by ..... Dr. Berg
Response—Chorale from the oratorio "Elijah" .... Mendelssohn

HERE'S A BRIEF VACATION TOUR Through the Ozark Hills

A VERY attractive, brief Ozark vacation tour of 300 to 350 miles, following a circle west and south of St. Louis, may be made on fine Missouri roads, by way of Westphalia, Arlington, Rolla, Steelville, and, if desired, Potosi and De Soto. Recent completion of graveling on long stretches of U. S. Highway No. 63 and State Highway No. 28—links of the route across Osage, Maries, Pulaski and Phelps counties—makes the trip feasible.

This is the sort of jaunt that lends itself to a leisurely itinerary—driving a hundred miles or so in a day and staying overnight or for a day or a week in any one of numerous pleasant resorts. The whole distance can be covered in 14 hours, with reasonable time to enjoy the scenery of the Ozark hills: two days nicer, three ideal and a week great. The accommodations available range from clean, new cabins at tourist camps to a high-class summer hotel.

Manchester road is the starter, and the trail follows the shield markers of U. S. No. 50. The beauty of that highway are an old story in type, but an ever new one to the traveler. At the Osage River, 14 miles east of Jefferson City, the turn is south on No. 63. A few miles from the junction, Westphalia is encountered. This is a picturesque town among green hills, noted especially for the Old World charm of a church predominating in the view. Tourists report comfortable hotel service and meals that they drive long distances to get. One hostelry has some striking old prints in the halls.

Continuing southward, Freesburg and Vienna—don't forget to call it "Vy-enna" in Maries ("Mary's") County—are passed, and it is interesting to notice how the Rock Island Railroad disappears in a tunnel far beneath the road in the former town. The intersection of No. 28 is just two miles south of Vienna. One can continue ahead on No. 63 to Rolla, through rolling country, or at least drive four miles houth of the intersection to the Gasconade River. The stream there is a gem, and a new State bridge carring the road across it is worth seeing because of its construction on a steep grade with the trusses suspended underneath.

It is more fun to lengthen the trip by perhaps 30 miles, by returning north from the Gasconade to No. 28, thence heading south on No. 28, through Dixon. For mile after mile this is a skyline boulevard, commanding broad vistas of wild and wooded hills. It curves and twists and, while it dips, it seldom leaves the bridge. The views to the east from the vicinity of the Maries-Pulaski County line are particularly bold. From there it is possible to see smoke on the Frisco Railway fully 25 miles away, but that is the closest sign of civilization.

South of Dixon the highway drops down to the Gasconade Valley, winds around a frowning, blackened, rock bluff and crosses the Gasconade. Climbing again, it terminates suddenly on a height at U. S. No. 63, with the sweep of the "Devil's Elbow" country of the Big Piney River below it on the east. It is 25 miles from this point to Rolla, by way of the numerous resorts and camps in the vicinity of Hooker, Arlington, Jerome and Newburg. In Rolla there are "town" hotels and good eating places.

No. 63 is followed east to Cuba and then No. 19 south across the Meramec River and through the resort section of Steelville. From that pretty little county seat, No. 8 leads east for 37 miles over steep hills and through a long, long valley in Crawford and Washington counties. This is the only road on the whole tour that is not in excellent all-weather condition, but is perfect driving except immediately after rains or when continued rainfall has swollen the mountainous streams that dot it.

This strip of road is the climax of the whole tour; it offers rare sylvan views and complete freedom from the customary aspects of more settled country. It's the backwoods. Two noted fishing streams—Huzzah and Courtois Creeks—cross the road, and temporary wooden trough bridges are provided at these places for motor cars. There are 10 other and smaller creeks to ford. One stretch of highway, for eight miles between the Huzzah and the Courtois (call that "Curdaway," by the way) has been graveled in first-class fashion.

From Potosi to De Soto and east to U. S. No. 61, No. 21 is another pleasing link of the route, through the hills. Most motorists are acquainted with the curving ribbon of No. 61 back to the city.

Should the traveler desire to avoid the Steelville-Potosi section, he may continue to St. Louis from Cuba on No. 66.

Road conditions? No. 50 is paved to Union and fine gravel from there to the Osage River, except for a few miles of rather poor, temporary surface at Linn. No. 63 is excellent gravel all the way, unless a captious critic objects to a few miles of narrow, old route in Osage County and the light graveling that has been possible so far near the Gasconade. No. 28 is equally dandy gravel, barring a few miles of well-drained earth top. No. 66 is good enough gravel. The short stretch of No. 19 followed is unexcelled gravel. On No. 8, much natural gravel is encountered, and some earth. No. 21 is good gravel and No. 61 concrete.

Motor Fuels Nearing Stage Of Perfection

IT seems likely that the motor fuel of the immediate future will be marketed upon the basis of performability and that those characteristics which indicate superior engine performance will be the characteristics demanded, according to Prof. G. G. Brown of the University of Michigan.

"Gasoline," he says, "will be sold upon its merits as a motor fuel even more than motor cars will be sold upon their merith as a means of transport, because the latter must possess style to satisfy the increasing number of women buyers, whereas fuel is placed in the tank and consumed without being seen.

"We are now entering a period in which the refiner of motor fuel is making conscientious effort to give his fuel high antiknock value and such effective volatility that it will give superior performance in any automobile engine in which it is used.

"It is extremely difficult if not impossible at present to supply sufficient heat to the fuel or to the carburetor for starting in cold weather if the fuel does not possess proper partial volatility for starting without the application of extra or external heat.

"An even more serious difficulty is presented in driving a cold engine after it has been started if the fuel does not possess the proper partial volatility for forming an explosive mixture.

"Many automobile manufacturers were so impressed with the low volatility of motor fuel as marketed in this country during the years of 1920 to 1923 that they still persist in heating the intake manifold and the carburetor to extremely high temperature, so that a fuel possessing satisfactory volatility for starting and acceleration frequently causes trouble in the automobiles having these engines."

Refiners now recognize the importance of partial volatility and many of them are actually producing fuels that give easy starting and good acceleration of engines such as were available even before the World War. Recent surveys of motor fuel marketed throughout the country clearly indicate the present tendency to supply fuels of this nature.

United States Government authorities at the Panama Canal Zone are experimenting with dyed gasoline to prevent the use of Government stores on unauthorized "joy rides." By adding one gallon of green dye, a decided color can be given to 1500 gallons of gasoline without injuring its quality as fuel. The green color makes official gasoline identifiable.

Civil War Landmarks Are Seen on Ozark Trip

For First Time All-Weather Highways Lead Into Arcadia Valley Where Forts and Breastworks of Strife Still Stand.

By ROBERT H. HALL, Auto Editor.

FOR the first time, an all-weather road devoid of stream crossings which must be forded, leads into old romantic Arcadia Valley. Part of this new road follows the old military trail leading west from Fredericktown, used in Civil War days by both Confederate and Federal troops.

The first part of the new route leads south from St. Louis over U. S. 61 through Flat River to Farmington, and this part of the route is concreted in its entirety. Then a first-class gravel road—still U. S. 61—is traversed to Fredericktown.

The old military road west from Fredericktown is now State No. 70, which, it will be recalled, for years has been a dirt road, so muddy in inclement weather that in spring and fall it has always been virtually impassable. Early this year, however, it was closed for reconstruction and transformed into a beautiful gravel boulevard over which it is a pleasure to drive. Especially is this true as the road winds along the shore of Lake Killarney—on one side of the road the expanse of silvery lake, on the other, hugging close the towering bulk of Shepherd Mountain.

The opening of the new route gives motorists two good roads into Arcadia Valley. The one most frequently used in the past, through Flat River, Bismarck, Middlebrook and Pilot Knob to Ironton—Arcadia—of most historical interest because of past events—is this year in better condition than ever before. So, with two routes available, it is suggested that the latter road be taken into the Valley and the new road, via Fredericktown, be used on returning to the city.

There are no less than a score of points of historical interest which can be—though they seldom are—"explored" by the tourist. In the accompanying pictures are several Civil War landmarks, which, the chronicler will chance, have been observed by but few visitors to the valley. They are to be found near the resort in the lake just after the Shut-Ins of Stout Creek—on the Flat River-Bismarck-Ironton-Arcadia road have been passed. The picture on the extreme right is that point on Stout Creek where Gen. Price crossed it on his way to engage Gen. Ewing of the Federal Army at Pilot Knob, while the picture below is one of the several rifle pits built by Price's men in the Shut-Ins.

During the Civil War many skirmishes between Confederate and Federal troops and much guerilla warfare was carried on within the boundaries of Missouri. Many such conflicts were staged in Arcadia Valley as well as in other portions of the State. One battle however, a major engagement, is significent in that it marked the last attempt of the Confederates to win over Missouri.

This last great movement of Confederate troops through the State was in 1864 when Price raided Missouri.

HEAVY RAINS CLOSE MANY STATE ROADS

U. S. 61, South, Open, but 61, North, and Part of No. 66 Closed.

Heavy rains the past week have placed Missouri roads, especially in the southeastern portion of the State, in a deplorable condition. The main roads out of St. Louis are travelable, but with difficulty.

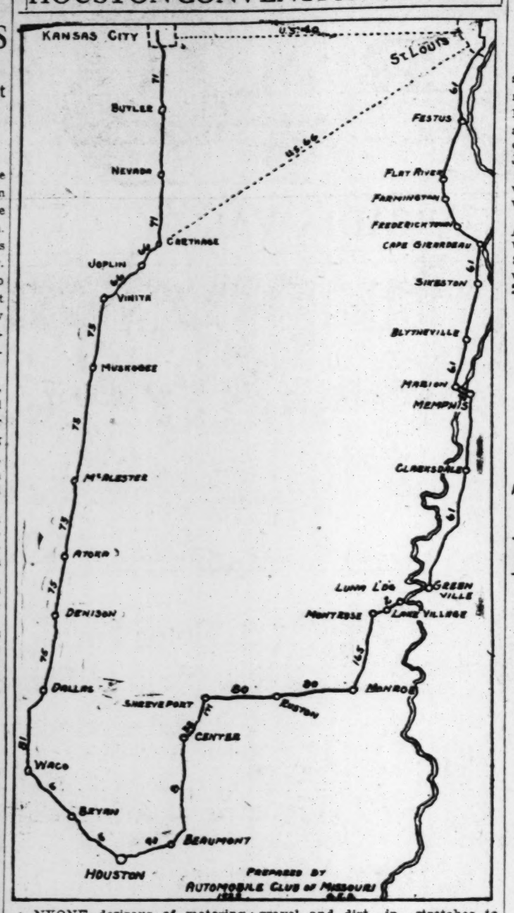
U. S. 61, from St. Louis south to the Arkansas border, is open, but there is a dirt detour between New Madrid and Sikeston which is travelable with difficulty, chains being a necessity.

On U. S. 61 north from St. Louis, the Salt River between Hannibal and New London is three feet over the roadway and was still rising late yesterday. The Cuive River, on the same highway in Lincoln County, has flooded its banks and temporarily halted traffic.

The detour on U. S. 66 through Leasburg—caused by the concreting of the highway between Hofflin and Cuba—is in a bad condition and it is not advisable to travel it. West of Joplin this highway is closed, and there is no traffic between Missouri and Oklahoma.

U. S. 40—the St. Louis-Kansas City highway via Columbia — was closed at Rocheport when high water undermined the paving at this point. Traffic is using atwo-mile gravel detour.

HOUSTON CONVENTION ROUTES



ANYONE desirous of motoring to the Democratic national convention at Houston will find all-weather going if he goes from this part of the Middle West. He also is assured by a committee of the convention that he will find plenty of camping room in and about Houston.

The route recommended by the Touring Department of the Automobile Club of Missouri and the Post-Dispatch Travel and Resort Bureau runs via Sikeston, Memphis, Greenville, Miss.; Monroe and Shreveport, La.; Logansport and Beaumont. It is concrete and gravel all the way.

Starting at St. Louis, it goes out the Lemay Ferry road and follows U. S. Highway No. 61 south to Memphis, then No. 61 to Leland, Miss.; west 11 miles to Greenville, ferrying the Mississippi River. (This ferry, operating an 18-car boat and an eight-car boat, leaves the landing every two hours from 7 a. m. until 5 p. m., then at 6, 9 and 11:30 p. m. The charge is $2 and 25 cents per passenger.)

The route continues from the ferry over Arkansas No. 2 via Lake Village to Montrose, south on No. 165 via Bastrup to Monroe, La.; west on No. 80 to Shreveport; south on No. 171 to Gloster; over No. 38 south to Logansport, where the Sabine River is crossed; then Texas No. 76 southwest to Center; No. 8 via Jasper and Buna to Beaumont, then west on No. 90 to Houston.

The route from Kansas City to Houston is made up of concrete, gravel and dirt stretches. It follows No. 71 south to Joplin, No. 66 to Vinita, Ok.; No. 73 via Muskogee and McAlester to Atoka; No. 75 via Durant and Sherman to Dallas, Tex.; No. 2 to Alvarado, No. 81 to Waco, then southeast on No. 6 via Bryan and Hampstead to Houston.

This route offers concrete and gravel to Eufaula, dirt for 19 miles to Crowder, pavement to Kiowa, dirt for 12 miles to Stringtown, gravel and concrete to Waco, Tex., gravel and dirt in stretches to Hockley, then pavement into Houston.

There will be camp room for all motorists who drive to the Democratic convention at Houston, according to a report by the Tourist and Camping Committee. Tourist camps have been remodeled and enlarged, extensions are under way, and special auto havens have been provided on city property.

The committee says that all camps in and around Houston are modern, lighted by electricity, have paved streets and all conveniences, and have been approved by the city health department.

Hermann Park has been cleaned and placed in fine order. Memorial Park, on the highway from Dallas and points east, can care for 2000 automobiles. Both camps are free to the public.

The Tourist and Camping Committee report lists the following regular camps as approved:

Camp Dixie, 6800 block of Harrisburg boulevard—present capacity with cabins, 75 cars. Extension under way, with cabins, 20 cars.

Tent City Tourist Camp, 7030 Harrisburg boulevard—space for 65 cars, with cabins; camping space without cabins, 50 cars.

Johnson's Tourist Camp, Broadway and La Porte road—Nineteen cars with cabins and camping space without cabins, 50 cars.

Houston Tourist Park, Telephone Road and Wayside—Space with tent houses, 21 cars, and camping room without tent houses, 300 cars.

Camp Logan Tourist Village, 6021 Washington—Car space with cabins, 40 automobiles, and camping room only, 200 cars.

It is said that there will be no "gouging," as rates will be in line with those charged at tourist camps throughout the country.

All camps mentioned have grocery stores and garage service and sanitation is good, according to the committee.

Service Managers To Hold Final Meeting of Season

The final meeting for the season of the Service Managers' Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association will be held at the Marquette Hotel Thursday evening preceded by a dinner. James Hershfelt, service manager for the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., who is chairman of the bureau, will preside.

Through the courtesy of William A. Elliot, general manager for the Willys-Overland, Inc., interests in St. Louis, the service managers will be shown the film which the title makers have called "A film Epic — the Silent Knight." This film, which was produced at an expense of about $60,000, shows in detail the development, the making and the final refinement of the Knight motor. In view of the number of engines carrying Knight motors at this time it is believed that this film will prove of great interest to the service managers and foremen.

The speaker of the evening is Ray Small of the Perfect Circle Co., manufacturers of piston rings, at Hagerstown, Ind. Small is a noted speaker on "The Proper and Efficient Conduct of a Service Station."

It is expected by Robert E. Lee, who is managing director of the Service Managers' Bureau, that the attendance will be about 120 service managers and foremen connected with firms which are members of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association.

LANDMARKS OF CIVIL WAR SEEN ON OZARK TRIP

000 men and 14 pieces of artillery and he entered Missouri at three points after having divided his men into as many divisions under Major Generals Fagin, Marmaduke and Jo Shelby. Opposed to Price's army were the Federal forces under Gen. Thomas Ewing Jr., who was stationed at St. Louis, and had command of the district of Southeast Missouri, there being established posts at Pilot Knob, Ste. Geneviewe, Cape Girardeau and New Madrid.

Orders were for all divisions to drive the Federal troops before them and to unite at Fredericktown, already many times ravaged by shell fire. With this point safely theirs, the Confederates planned an attack upon Pilot Knob—strongest Federal stronghold—where the most strenuous resistance was expected.

Gen. Shelby, commanding one wing of the Confederate army, reached Fredericktown in advance of the others, sent a detachment of soldiers to Farmington, captured it after a skirmish, then fought a severe battle at Mineral Point, where he destroyed the Big River bridge and tore up long stretches of railroad track, and reached Potosi. There Union troops holding the fortifications were engaged and captured.

Shelby then fell back to Fredericktown and met Price and the main army. Together they proceeded to attack Pilot Knob, following the old military road, now State No. 70, which has just been completed as an all-weather road.

About that time Gen. Rosecrans, departmental commander, after Ewing, in St. Louis, called upon Washington for reinforcements and received 6000 troops commanded by Gen. A. J. Smith, originally destined to join Gen. Sherman in Georgia. Thus the Federals also had 12,000 men in the field.

The forces came into conflict at Pilot Knob. Ewing had been directed to gather his forces, consisting of a brigade of the Second Division of the Sixteenth Army Corps of Jefferson Barracks, and with this force to patrol the Iron Mountain Railroad in preparation for the movement of troops under Smith.

Ewing left a part of his force at De Soto and took the Fourteenth Iowa through the country to Pilot Knob, where he found Major-General James Wilson in command of 1000 troops. Here he immediately began to build stronger fortifications.

There already was a fort just south of Pilot Knob, called Fort Davidson—which is one of the interesting landmarks on the trip to Arcadia Valley, since it can be entered and inspected—which was 700 yards in circumference and was defended by four 32-pounders and three 24-pounders. The plain on which the fort stands is almost entirely surrounded by mountains excepting a gap between Shepherd Mountain and Pilot Knob, through which runs Stouts Creek, and a gap to the southeast—which is the Shut-Ins and through which runs State No. 70.

Ewing obstructed the roads, cleared away the timber on both sides of the hills and dug two rifle pits in order to command the approaches. Then, as his operations were nearing completion, he sent part of his force to Fredericktown to bring back a supply train. As these troops were making their way through the Shut-Ins, the vanguard of Price's army intercepted them and much blood was spilt. Evidence of this fight, called the "Battle of the Shut-Ins," is found in Arcadia Valley today. There are still to be found intact many breastworks such as shown in the picture.

Price's men routed the Federal forces and the latter fell back to Ironton. But for ensuing nightfall and a terrific rainstorm, Price would have captured them.

The next day, just at dawn, Maj. Wilson, who was in command at Ironton, was attacked by Price and driven back into the gap between Shepherd Mountain and Pilot Knob. Again the Confederates scored and by a concerted attack drove the Federals out of the gap and took possession of it. Came nightfall and the Confederates had moved upon Fort Davidson, a mile or so away. But Ewing, knowing that defeat was ahead, evacuated the fort at midnight without being discovered by Price's men. After his forces had been withdrawn from the fort, he fired it. Though he again eluded capture by the Confederates, Price scored a moral victory.

After retreating from Pilot Knob, Ewing sent a detachment to Mineral Point where a small troop of Federal troops were, in order to warn them of his retreat, these troops, however, were attacked by Confederate soldiers under command of Gen. Joe Shelby, who had not participated in the battle at Pilot Knob but had marched from Fredericktown by the way of Farmington. This unexpected check caused Gen. Ewing to change the plans of his retreat. He was no longer certain of being able to retreat in the direction of St. Louis and he turned toward Rolla. At Webster, however, he decided to march for Harrison, here he fought a skirmish with Gen. Shelby and later retreatd to Rolla. Which is a story to be told later.

Though all these things occurred many years ago, Pilot Knob, Fort Davidson, the Shut-Ins and the rifle pits hidden in its fastness stand as mute evidence to their happening.

Pilot Knob is a tall mountain, the highest in the Arcadia group. It is a tedious but worthwhile climb to its summit, from which the surrounding country for miles around can be seen. Fort Davidson is right on State Highway No. 21, three miles this side of Ironton, and the Shut-Ins are but a stone's throw from the big resort on Lake Killarney, three miles beyond Ironton.

Week-enders and vacationers find good lodging and boarding facilities there. Fishing in Lake Killarney is excellent now, and there are other things to do, such as swimming, boating and horseback riding.

St. Louis Air Fi

FLYERS who like to boast about the speed of their OX-5-powered airplanes will have a chance to prove their claims today in a 20-mile race at Parks' Airport, open only to ships using the Curtiss 90-horse-power motor.

The race is under the auspices of the Falcon Club of East St. Louis, and a silver cup will be the first award. Oliver L. Parks, vice president of Parks Air Line, plans to enter three Travel-Airs piloted probably by Clyde Brayton, Claude Starling and Frank Wigton.

Among other entries are ships of the American Eagle Aircraft Co. of Kansas City, Mo.; the National Airways System of Lomax, Ill.; the Pheasant Aircraft of Memphis, Mo.; a Travel-Air of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, piloted by "Bud" Gurney, chief air mail pilot, and another ship owned by the Egyptian Air Transport of Marion, Ill.

It was estimated that more than 10,000 persons were present last Sunday at the Parks afternoon flying show.

Perkins Makes Parachute Leap.

Harry H. Perkins, the diminutive secretary-treasurer of Robertson Aircraft Corporation, who heretofore has confined his long aeronautical experience generally to work on the ground, made a parachute jump last Sunday at Springfield, Ill., for a crowd of spectators at the flying field there.

Perkins accompanied the three mail pilots, "Bud" Gurney, E. L. Sloniger and Leslie Smith, to Springfield the preceding Saturday for a banquet that night given by the Springfield Chamber of Commerce in the interest of further development of the flying field, which must be enlarged within the next few months to accommodate the tri-motored Fords to be put into service by Robertson Aircraft Corporation.

Before leaving St. Louis, Perkins announced he would make a jump, but no one took him seriously. On Sunday, however, he climbed to the wing of one of the Robertson Travel-Airs and Les Smith got on the other. With the two prospective jumpers lying flat, Guerney took off and when he had climbed to 1500 feet nodded to them to jump.

They pulled off together for perfect takeoffs. Perkins got an extra thrill when he narrowly avoided a barbed wire fence as he neared the ground. After he had landed the wind caught the parachute and started to drag him. Smith tried to run after him, but became entangled in the shrouds of his own parachute. Finally Perkins managed to pull in the shrouds and come to a stop, glad that it was over, as he admits, but glad also to be able to say he had made the jump.

Afterwards Perkins admitted that he had experienced some trepidation about the time Gurney nodded him to let go. On the left wing of the Travel-Air are plainly marked the scratches made by his finger nails where he tried to hold on. He explained that he had changed his mind about jumping after he pulled too late.

It is essential that my car should always operate properly and accordingly I use Champion Spark Plugs.

Champion is the better spark plug because it has an exclusive sillimanite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. Also a new patented solid copper gasket-seal that remains absolutely gas-tight under high compression. Special analysis electrodes which assure a fixed spark-gap under all driving conditions.

Perkins accompanied the three mail pilots, "Bud" Gurney, E. L. Sloniger and Leslie Smith, to Springfield the preceding Saturday for a banquet that night given by the Springfield Chamber of Commerce in the interest of further development of the flying field, which must be enlarged within the next few months to accommodate the tri-motored Fords to be put into service by Robertson Aircraft Corporation.

Before leaving St. Louis, Perkins announced he would make a jump, but no one took him seriously. On Sunday, however, he climbed to the wing of one of the Robertson Travel-Airs and Les Smith got on the other. With the two prospective jumpers lying flat, Guerney took off and when he had climbed to 1500 feet nodded to them to jump.

They pulled off together for perfect takeoffs. Perkins got an extra thrill when he narrowly avoided a barbed wire fence as he neared the ground. After he had landed the wind caught the parachute and started to drag him. Smith tried to run after him, but became entangled in the shrouds of his own parachute. Finally Perkins managed to pull in the shrouds and come to a stop, glad that it was over, as he admits, but glad also to be able to say he had made the jump.

Afterwards Perkins admitted that he had experienced some trepidation about the time Gurney nodded him to let go. On the left wing of the Travel-Air are plainly marked the scratches made by his finger nails where he tried to hold on. He explained that he had changed his mind about jumping after he pulled the cord. But it was too late.

Planes Loop in Formation.

For the entertainment of the crowd at the Springfield field, Gurney, Sloniger and Smith made a formation flight, with Gurney leading in a Ryan brougham and the others following in Travel-Airs. They brought cheers from the crowd when they looped in formation before breaking up for stunting exhibitions.

E. F. Baskey Back.

Earl F. Baskey, who used to fly the mail out of the Forest Park Field in a Hisso-Jennie in 1921, is back in St. Louis again working at Lambert Field as an instructor for Von Hoffmann Aircraft Corporation. He had left the flying game, except for occasional flights and was operating a tire shop in Fremont, O., when he read an editorial in the Post-Dispatch recently recalling the old days of the air mail.

The reminiscences proved too much for him. He closed his shop, climbed into his new flivver and headed for St. Louis, determined to get back into the flying business. In that he found no trouble, since experienced flyers are at a premium, particularly in the St. Louis district, where the flying schools are increasing in size rapidly.

"Boots" Dempsey's Field Beacon.

"Boots" Dempsey has a new automobile, ablaze with green, red and other colors, which he parks daily at the door of the north hangar at Lambert Field. Its pigskin cushions have proved welcome resting places of Stancill Gilley, Dick Stone and other field figures. The gorgeous machine as an envious fellow pilot remarked "makes a swell beacon." It is kept in shining condition by that young field roustabout, variously known as "Frank Dunn's man Friday" and "Dempsey's man Thursday," who is willing to perform scullion duties if rewarded with Louie's hamburger sandwiches, and a trip in the air now and then.

Art Goebel to Visit St. Louis.

Art Goebel, whose Travel-Air monoplane "Woolaroc" won the Dole trophy flight from California to Hawaii, is scheduled to stop at Lambert Field tomorrow en route to Washington, where he is to receive the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Goebel is carrying with him a Japanese robin which he will present, quite appropriately, to Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., makers of the Curtis "Robin." The Japanese robin is compartively unknown at the flying field and some of the pilots have gone so far as to ask what it was doing in Hawaii, anyhow. "Bill" Robertson, who is to be its custodian, has been wondering what the bird likes to eat, and is hoping that Goebel has brought with him a diet schedule so that the Japanese visitor may feel at home in Robertson's office.

Robin for Ford Tour.

The first Robin to be completed is being groomed for the Ford reliability tour which is to begin Thursday in Detroit, Mich. Dan Robertson, who is to pilot it, has been preparing maps for the trip and already has at hand a table of compass readings to be used on the tour.

Realty Men Fly to Louisville.

Milt Girton, Dale Jackson and Elmer W. Lindenberg of the Von Hoffmann Aircraft Corporation flew to Louisville, Ky., last Monday, carrying full loads of real estate men for the national convention of the Real Estate Exchange there, and Girton made another trip Tuesday. Frank T. Dunn, pilot for Phil Ball, owner of the Browns, also took four passengers to the convention Monday in his Ryan brougham, and "Bud" Gilley, pilot for Bill Chaudet, took two passengers Monday afternoon.

McCracken Visits Parks Airport.

William B. McCracken, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, visited Parks Airport Tuesday on his way from Little Rock, Ark.—where he had attended an aviation conference—to Chicago. He was met at the Parks Field by Inspector Gardner of the Department of Commerce and flown to Chicago in the Fairchild monoplane, piloted by Philip R. Love, in Col. Lindbergh's nation-wide flight. McCracken told Parks Airport officials that he was highly pleased with the development of aviation in St. Louis and commended the Parks Flying School for its good flying equipment and large class of students.

Robertson Buys New Plane.

Robertson Flying Services is to get in a new Waco-Ten this week to add to its school fleet, according to an announcement by Clifton C. Hutchison, general manager. A carload of Wacos, eight planes, is also expected to arrive by rail during the week. The ships will be equipped with OX-5s from the Robertson stock.

Landing T Needed.

O. E. Scott, Lamber Field manager, has a new Whirlwind Travel-Air to replace the OX-5 ship which he traded in recently. Harold M. Bixby, chairman of the board of the Chamber of Commerce, holds an interest in the new bus, as he did in the old one.

Thursday afternoon Scott experienced difficulty in landing on the field because of the number of training ships that were in the air or taxiing across the airport. Traffic was particularly crowded because it was all coming in over the northeast tip of the airport, and one pilot was rebuked by Scott for landing out of the traffic line. A landing "T" placed on the field, at or no wind, would simplify the traffic problem, which is becoming increasingly difficult as the schools increase their training plane fleets.

Les Smith Keeps Up Record.

Les Smith continues to guard his record on the air mail route of almost eight months flying without a single forfeited trip, no matter how bad the weather. Tuesday afternoon Smith took off in the storm which flooded parts of St. Louis with his usual remark that "I'll manage to get down somewhere." least on days when there is little He found fairly clear weather north of St. Louis and made the trip on schedule.

G. L. Lambert, Instructor.

George Lea Lambert, son of Maj. Albert Bond Lambert, has gone to work as a flying instructor for Parks' Airlines and is putting in long hours with his students during these days of good flying weather. Lambert has his own Travel-Air, a Siemens-Halske job, at Lambert-St. Louis Field and is a transport pilot.

Clyde Brayton's staff of pilots at the Parks school is to have another new face tomorrow morning. Edgar Schmid, lieutenant and adjutant of the Tirty-fifth Division Air Service, has decided to get into the game on a business basis. He becomes the tenth instructor in the Parks staff.

Tours Flying Schools.

Ford Ashman Carpenter, meterological and aeronautic head of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, arrived at Scott Field by airplane Wednesday on a tour of flying schools of the country. He left Friday morning after surveying the schools here in search of information and practices that may be valuable to West Coast schools.

Passing Through.

Joe Glass, the veteran Houston pilot, dropped in at Parks Airport Wednesday in his Stinson on his way back to Texas. On the same day H. C. Young, in an OX-5 Waco, stopped at the field on the way from the Waco factory at Troy, O., to Marshall, Mo. Milt Girton was a visitor at the East Side Thursday in a Ryan brougham.

DISTRIBUTER OF REO CARS OPENS PLANT

George S. Clayton Is President and L. B. McEwing Vice President.

Two Chicago men, George S. Clayton and L. B. McEwing, have organized the Reo Distributing Co., to handle Reo passenger cars and trucks on a wholesale and retail basis in St. Louis and the metropolitan territory.

They have obtained the large display and service quarters at 2921-27 Locust boulevard formerly occupied by the Wilson Motor Car Co., and today are showing for the first time the complete line of Reo Flying Cloud and Wolverine passenger car lines, and the Reo Speed Wagon line.

Both Clayton, who is president of the firm, and McEwing, who is vice president, have been affiliated with the Reo Motor Car Co. for nearly 10 years.

McEwing until recently was manager of the Chicago branch of the factory and Clayton was assistant manager of the same branch.

All departmental officers have not as yet been appointed, but it was announced yesterday that C. H. La Rue, prominent in the St. Louis motor truck field for many years, has been appointed as sales manager for the speedwagon division of the company.

Meeting of Marmon Dealers Held Here

Twenty-five Marmon dealers and their service men tended a meeting held Thursday, June 21 in the salesrooms of the Archer-Mann Motor Co., local Marmon distributer, to hear addresses by prominent factory officials. R. B. Mann, vice president of the local distributing company, presided.

The factory speakers were L. C. Voyles, assistant sales manager and Jerry Hadley, sales promotion manager. The Marmon factory is in Detroit.

Mrs. R. G. Owens, of Milwaukee, Wis., at the age of 76, is driving an automobile for the first time in her life—and enjoying it immensely.

J. C. THORPE HEADS AUBURN BRANCH HERE

St. Louisan, New General Manager, in Auto Field Many Years.

J. C. Thorpe, a St. Louisan who has had an exceptional automotive merchandising and organization experience, has taken charge as general manager of the Auburn St. Louis Co., which is the local factory branch of the Auburn Automobile Co.

Thorpe, a graduate of Illinois University, at one time had charge of the experimental engineering departments of the University of Michigan and Illinois U. Later, going to Seattle, Wash., he developed the mechanical engineering department of Washington University. Then he became an automobile distributor in Central Illinois, with headquarters at Urbana, and handled several medium-priced and higher priced cars.

At that time automobile selling was still a "game," but Thorpe became interested in seeing what could be done toward developing real merchandising ideas. He wrote and spoke widely on automotive service and merchandising on a fact basis, contributing to a number of the trade magazines. He came to be recognized as an authority on the sale of automotive equipment to the various classes of buyers, especially farmers.

In 1910 he was active in organizing in Illinois what was said to be the first state association of automobile dealers. He also did much organizing of states for the National Automobile Trade Association, which later was absorbed by the National Automobile Dealers Association.

Since 1921, Thorpe has resided in St. Louis, most of the time being engaged in industrial engineering or the reorganization of business that has got into a ricketty condition. For the last year he has been a general traveling representative for one of the large automobile factories.

Nash Dealers Hold Big Meeting Here

Formal introduction of the new Nash "400" series of motor cars to dealers in the Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas, Kentucky territory was made in St. Louis Tuesday of the past week at a meeting in the building of the Southwest Nash Co., Nash distributer. Approximately 135 dealers and their service chiefs attended the meeting, which was followed by a banquet in the evening. F. C. McDonald, president of the Southwest Nash Co., presided.

Speakers included J. C. Bonham, wholesale manager of the Southwest Nash Co.; McDonald; J. C. Graves, secretary; L. P. Fuller, treasurer, and W. J. Van da Grift, service manager.

The speakers spoke on sales, service and financing.

Ralph Page Manager for Allen-James

St. Louisans to Handle Retail Chevrolet Sales for Firm.

Ralph Page, a well-known figure in the automotive field here for the past 10 years, has been appointed sales manager for the Allen-James Motor Co., retail Chevrolet dealer at 3016 Locust street. Page, until recently, was on the sales staff of the Buick distributer here.

Some years ago Page organized and became president of the Carondelet Buick Co., and later went to Florida, where, at Fort Lauderdale, he was an Oakland-Pontiac dealer.

Page is a graduate of the University of Pittsburg, and a decade ago was a varsity halfback for three years on the famous "Panther" football team of that period.

Accessory Men to Hear Market Expert

A special meeting of the Automotive Accessory Association is to be held at the Claridge Hotel tomorrow evening, at which time George Brosch, western zone manager for the Greater Market Development Bureau of the Automotive Equipment Association will deliver an address. Brosch has been a deep student of automobile and accessory selling for many years and is said to be one of the best talkers on sales problems and sales methods in the U. S.

The meeting will be in charge of Stuart Campbell, newly elected president of the Automotive Accessory Association and Robert E. Lee, association manager. Lee has sent invitations to all automobile dealers in St. Louis and nearby and their salesmen and service managers and to all retail and wholesale accessory dealers in the nearby territory.

Brockmeier Company Enlarges Quarters

F. C. Brockmeier, president of F. C. Brockmeier Service Corp., has announced that his company has completely renovated and remodeled its sales and show room at 3408 Lindell boulevard and has widened its scope of service to the motorist by adding a tire department to its battery department.

The company recently has been appointed distributer for Hood and Seiberling tires and tubes and is completely equipped to give motorists battery and tire service at its station or on the road.

Gillum Promoted

Stanley Moon recently announced the appointment of Roy E. Gillum to the post of assistant to the president. The appointment takes effect immediately.

Gillum has been employed by the Moon Motor Car Co. for the past seven years and is well known by dealers throughout the country.

Samuel at Factory

R. L. Samuel, manager of the local factory branch of the Olds Motor Works, spent the past week at the Oldsmobile factory at Lansing, Mich., where he and officials planned the activities of the branch for the ensuing year.

De Paolo to Quit Track.

Pete de Paolo of Los Angeles who was injured recently in Indianapolis in attempting to set a new qualifying record time of better than 120 miles an hour, is quitting automobile racing for the love of his young wife and his 4-year-old boy. He is planning to become an automotive engineer.

Oakland-Pontiac Dealers Leaving On Factory Trip

All of the metropolitan dealers of the Mississippi Valley Motor Car Co., Pontiac-Oakland distributer here, will leave St. Louis this noon on a special train for an inspection trip of the Oakland-Pontiac factories at Pontiac, Mich. Beauty and Color as radiant as June

THERE are cars which seem to embody boundless zest—the gipsy lure of June. Cars—that sparkle in their rich beauty of line—that are so individual, so complete, they seem almost alive.

Such is this distinguished Six-91.

Its appearance but echos the kind of performance a ride reveals. Its action is as colorful as its beauty. Here is power that's invincible—sparkling pick-up that flashes thru the traffic lane—speed—zest—go.

And always, soothing smoothness—tranquil riding ease—a sense of restful assurance when you drive. If you enjoy fine things, the Six-91 holds an irresistible appeal for you.

Most impressive of all, however, is the fact that this car is backed by a heritage of quality possessed by few things you can buy today.

But you must see this Peerless to appreciate its rich beauty—you must drive it to experience performance far beyond the usual. Phone the Peerless dealer and let him demonstrate this fine car's fineness.

Eye Appeal Big Selling Factor, in Opinion of German

Eye appeal of a motor car is the largest selling factor the dealer has today, according to Leon R. German, president of Peerless Motor Car Corporation.

"At the same time," says German, "we automobile manufacturers are confronted with the fact that the bodies of the cars we build must be something more than beautiful.

"Higher speeds, larger engines, quicker acceleration and four-wheel brakes, subject the body of the present day car to strains and wracking much more destructive than was the case a few years ago.

"Durability, structural strength and rigidity must be provided to an unusual degree if the body is to stand up under the strenuous use it gets today. It is the "under the skin" work that tells the story.

"The advancement made in beauty of line, added room and interior comfort, can be readily appreciated by the eye. But structural features that make a body really good are hidden from view."

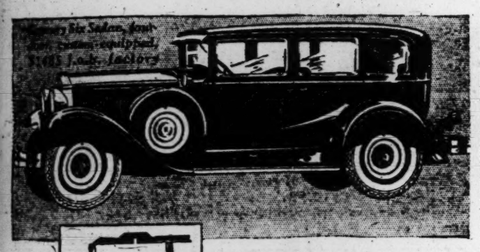
...Bridge-like strength plus beauty sets Hupmobile coachcraft apart



Note rigid structure of the steel front-end assembly—the region of greatest strain in automobile bodies. All joints are both riveted and welded.

IN MEETING the more severe strains imposed by modern high compression engines, higher speeds, faster acceleration and quick-acting four-wheel brakes, the new Hupmobile Century body styles set new high standards of strength and durability. Steel for rigidity, wood for silence and elasticity are employed at vital points. Door lock pillars are made double width to give extra strength where latching imposes strain. Sound is deadened at 123 points. Exterior finish is protected by 21 coating and rubbing processes. In every way, the safety, comfort and long life of the new Hupmobile Century coachwork match the same brilliant qualities in the Six and Eight cylinder chassis on which they are mounted. Inspect the new Century body types as carefully as you test the century's finest performance in these ultra-modern cars.

24 body and equipment combinations, standard and custom on each line. Six of the Century, $1345 to $1625. Century Eight, $1825 to $2105. All prices f. o. b. Detroit.

Rickenbacker Predicts 50,000,000 Autos by 1950

Says There Will Be 400-Foot Highways With Required Speed of at Least 75 to 85 Miles an Hour.

Fifty million automobiles, highways 400 feet wide on which one-way traffic will travel at 85 miles an hour, huge garages located in business areas that automatically will solve the parking problem, marvelous enrichment of the country through the realization of the great promise of modern transportation—these are coming by 1950, says Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker, assistant sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Co.

"Not later than 1950 the automobile industry will have a clientele of 50,000,000 automobiles and I make that prophecy not on dreams but on what I have gone through in the past 26 years in my actual experience with transportation of all makes and descriptions," declares Rickenbacker.

"California has a car for every one and seven-eighths persons. The only reason for that is because the men of our present generation 20 years ago appreciated the value of good roads to this country and started building them. It is the only State in the Union that is properly roadized. That is, furthermore, the reason for its great increase in ownership of property, because it has opened up millions of acres of land that, prior to the advent of the motor car, was not worth the powder to blow them up. When one considers that in the year 1910 we had just about 500,000 automobiles owned in the United States of America, and realize that we have increased that to 27,000,000 in the past 18 years, you can appreciate what I say when I tell you what we are headed for.

"There are 1,250,000 people a year coming to this country, and we will have a population of 150,000,000 by 1950, and we will add untold billions to our wealth. With 50,000,000 automobiles in the United States you will still have a ratio of only one car to every three people in the United States of America.

Predicts Super-Highways.

"You are going to have super-highways crossing this whole United States of America, highways not 100 feet wide, but 400 feet wide. You will have oneway traffic, or four-way traffic, and you are going to differentiate between the through traffic and the local.

"The great cities are not going to demand that these highways be diverted through their communities; they are going to want to be linked up with them by highways of their own. You are going to have a speed on those through highways of 75, 80 and 85 miles an hour, and you will do it with less trouble and a great deal more safety than you can now at 50 or 55 miles an hour.

"You stop and wonder when you realize that within the last 15 years the speed has more than doubled. You think nothing of going out on your highways and driving mile after mile at the rate of 65 and 70 miles an hour.

"Why?" Because of that great big highway, because of the four-wheel brakes you have, because of the speed and reliability of that engine, the low center of gravity, and the mental heritage that goes into the steering wheel, and because of the mentality that has been able to develop all these things.

"You jump your present speed only 10, 15 or 20 miles an hour, and it is still an ultra-conservative speed. The day will come when you will go down this highway at 75, 80 or 85 miles an hour, and if you don't travel 75 miles an hour you won't be able to stay on the through highway. You will be pushed off by traffic cops down onto the local. And, furthermore, you will be able to get from one to the other without crossing any one's path.

New Air Brake Is Proving Popular

W. J. Chaudet, president of General Brake Service Corporation, says the Richmond air brake, which it distributes, is proving popular with car owners here.

This new device makes it as easy to apply the brake as to feed the gas with foot accelerator. The Richmond air brake is easily installed on any car and does not require any change in the regular brake mechanism, Chaudet says.

The air cylinder is attached to the brake rods and is actuated by vacuum from the intake manifold. There is only two moving parts and neither requires any attention or lubrication. The Richmond air brake makes it possible for any woman, no matter how small, to easily brake the largest car. Another feature of this vacuum brake is the fact that it stops a car quicker than foot application on the regular brake pedal and also has less tendency to skid on wet streets.

Detroit Uses 200 Graham Buses

Detroit has developed bus lines in a position where the 200 Graham Brothers motor coaches included in the equipment travel more than 700,000 miles a month, according to figures recently tabulated by officials of the Department of Street Railways. The oldest Graham Brothers bus in this service has traveled approximately 144,000 miles.

Under the Detroit system, the motor coaches supplement regular street car service on some thoroughfares, and carry the entire transportation burden on other streets. Recently, the city has developed a system of express surface car schedules, in which the street cars make the express stops and motor coaches make the local stops. Free transfers are provided in making changes.

New and Larger Test Building—Handles Four Cars at Once

This new building enables us to provide much quicker testing and adjusting than ever before—quick, non-delay service even on busiest days. Equipped with four electric testing machines which permit four cars to be handled simultaneously and without confusion. Machines are set at floor level—men work in pits where they may easily reach any part of your car's brake mechanism. An additional test department is provided for the back shop—quick service always.

WHEN you want your brakes fixed in a hurry—and you want it done RIGHT—here is one plant where you can always depend upon getting both.... The largest plant of its kind in the world, specially equipped and organized to provide any brake service you need—quickly, carefully and RIGHT!... All work is performed by skilled men working by the scientific machine methods prescribed by the Chaudet Process, insuring careful workmanship, extreme accuracy and POSITIVE BRAKE SAFETY IMMEDIATELY upon completion of the work—available ONLY in our plants... Ample equipment, a large staff of men who know what to do and how to do it quickly and operating methods which eliminate lost motion and dead time enable us to handle every job in much less time than is required by any other shop... anywhere... In five minutes your car is tested and you have a report on the necessary work. Ten to twenty minutes for adjustments and minor repairs—an hour or less for the average relining job—almost any job taken care of while you wait. Any brake service you need—QUICKLY!

Much Quicker Shop Work

New Shop Building No. 2 More Than Doubles Our Former Working Space

Much more room, more equipment and much additional working space for every operation enables our men to perform every necessary detail without crowding or confusion—every facility is provided for handling work quickly, carefully and without delay. This new building, which is larger and more complete than our No. 1 Shop Building, more than doubles our previous capacity for relining, overhauling and heavy backshop work.

Larger Relining Dept.

A battery of twelve fast relining machines insures quick, accurate work on this most important operation in making your brakes safe. New lining is riveted with specially tested rivets, countersunk and set by machine—uniformly, quickly and accurately. Quick Service—day or night.

Larger Machine Shop

The most completely equipped shop of its kind in existence—special machinery to handle any type of machine work incident to brake service. Quick service always—no delays caused by the necessity of sending difficult work to some outside machine shop. Special equipment for large trucks.

Larger Stock Dept.

Two new and larger stock rooms provide space for the largest stock of brake lining and spare parts in the West—more than 40,000 feet of lining of all kinds always in stock. Your job is never held up waiting for the right type of lining or some missing part to be found. Quick service always.

$75,000,000 FOR FEDERAL AID ROADS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 23. — Approval by President Coolidge of the bill authorizing Federal-aid appropriations of $75,000,000 for highway building in each of the fiscal years 1930 and 1931, assures continuation of this program which has resulted in the building of close to 75,000 miles of important interstate highways and has provided the needed impetus to road construction by the states, says a statement issued by the American Automobile Association.

In addition to the appropriations for main highways, the measure signed by the President also carries $7,500,000 for each of the two fiscal years for building of forest roads and trails.

The national motoring body pointed out that since 1921 a total of nearly $1,500,000,000 has been spent on the nearly 75,000 miles of the original Federal-aid program of some 185,000 miles of important interstate routes and that it is well over one-third completed. Of this amount the Federal Government has contributed $614,649,253 and there are 11,516 miles of highway under construction to which the Government will contribute $126,456,015.

The appropriations for 1930 and 1931 are in line with the existing policy of making such authorizations two years in advance in order to provide continuity of work on the Federal-aid system and allow Federal and State agencies ample time to outline the construction program.

"Its importance," says Thos. P. Henry, president of the A. A. A. "is that it is an incentive to road-building by the states, as nearly two miles are constructed by the States for each mile built with Federal co-operation."

Labor Department Recognizes Auto Dealers' Bureau

The employment bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association has just been recognized by the Department of Labor of the U. S. Government and a special appointment issued to Robert E. Lee, manager of the association as "Special Agent Employment Service, Department of Labor."

About six months ago the State of Missouri designated the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association and its manager as Free Employment Bureau No. 1, State of Missouri. Under the new arrangement Lee reports to the Federal director each month. The Federal director is Roy B. Hinkle, State Labor Commissioner of Missouri.

For about one year the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association has been conducting a free employment bureau, the purpose of which is to retain in the automobile industry people who have been trained in it, who have lost their positions through changes of various kinds. The bureau of the association had been successful in obtaining positions for mechanics, bookkeepers, salesmen, managers, etc., when the State Labor Department of Missouri discovered it in operation and issued it a regular free employment bureau license, the first that had been issued by the State of Missouri.

The Bureau of Labor of the United States Government has issued the commission to Lee as special agent of that department so that the employment bureau may be assisted by the facilities of the United States Government, including in which is the privilege of sending all the mail of the bureau pertaining to employment matters under a Government frank free of postage.

New Air Cleaner On Graham-Paige

A new type of air-cleaner, depending on the adhesiveness of "oil-wetted" woven metal sponge for its effectiveness, is one of the features of the new Graham-Paige cars. The cleaner is said to remove virtually all solid particles from the air.

The filter is mounted above the carburetor. The housing is of sheet metal, having openings top and bottom that are several times the area of the carburetor intake. Loosely packed in the housing are many yards of flat copper ribbon, matted into a spongy mass. A large surface is thus exposed to the oil over the entire surface is a thin heavy oil.

It is not necessary to clean filter more than two or three times a season, or about every 5000 miles.

THE perfected Whippet Four Sedan is actually the lowest priced 4-door enclosed car on the market. Yet its astoundingly low cost does not reflect the remarkable quality of this smart, lively car. Low-swung, roomy, stylish, it offers every desirable quality of performance—power, speed, pickup, flexibility and safety.

The Whippet Four swept aside all previous standards of 4-cylinder performance. It introduced to buyers of light fours such mechanical superiorities as 4-wheel brakes, full force-feed lubrication and silent timing chain. Now the perfected Whippet Four—finer in quality, smarter, an even better performer—is selling at sensationally reduced prices.

The new Whippet Six is the world's lowest priced Six. Yet it offers such fine car features as a 7-bearing crankshaft, full force-feed lubrication, invar-strut pistons and many more.

We invite you to see these popular cars.

VERMONT TO SPEND MILLIONS FOR NEW ROADS

Rebuilding of Highways to Cost State 13,600,000.

Spending $13,600,000 for new roads, more money than any other New England state has ever had ready to spend for the rebuilding of highways, Vermont is now prepared for its final step from the slough of despond that followed the floods of last November.

Flood deposits that for weeks and months gutted the highways of the state have been so cleared that there is a one-car road with cutouts running through every town and section of Vermont. Stoddard Bates, Highway Commissioner of the state, has had charge of the work.

Mr. Bates, a colorful Vermonter, state that produced two others who are equally well known here—Calvin Coolidge and John G. Sargent, takes pride in the quick patchwork that made a flooded and muddy state passable until appropriations could rebuild the highway network.

Vermont has an annual appropriation of $3,000,000 for highways and to this was added another $10,000,000, secured by devious methods.

A special legislative session, called by Gov. Weeks, voted an $8,000,000 bond issue for emergency road construction.

National representatives of the Green Mountain State in Washington persuaded the Government to add $2,600,000 toward the restoring of roads that had previously been granted Government aid.

Practically all of this $13,600,000 for new roads will remain in the state. The work will supply employment for thousands of Vermont bread winners, many of whom are unable to till the mud-coated farms that once gave them their livelihood.

This ready employment, with its minimum labor wage of from $5 to $6, has created some agricultural concern. The wage, ordinary in a city, will be a large one in the country districts, and it is thought that many of the farmers whose lands are capable of tillage, will prefer the more remunerative road building.

Most Headlights Wrong.

Only 1,000,000 of the 23,900,000 automobiles in the United States have properly adjusted headlights, according to the American Automobile Association, which pointed out that headlights adjusted once a month were safer and cheaper. Most accidents occur at 5:30 p. m., when drivers first turn on their lights.

VERMONT TO SPEND MILLIONS FOR NEW ROADS

Rebuilding of Highways to Cost State 13,600,000.

Spending $13,600,000 for new roads, more money than any other New England state has ever had ready to spend for the rebuilding of highways, Vermont is now prepared for its final step from the slough of despond that followed the floods of last November.

Flood deposits that for weeks and months gutted the highways of the state have been so cleared that there is a one-car road with culverts running through every town and section of Vermont. Stoddard Bates, Highway Commissioner of the state, has had charge of the work.

Mr. Bates, a colorful Vermonter, a state that produced two others who are equally well known here—Calvin Coolidge and John G. Sargent, takes pride in the quick patchwork that made a flooded and muddy state passable until appropriations could rebuild the highway network.

Vermont has an annual appropriation of $3,000,000 for highways and to this was added another $10,000,000, secured by devious methods.

A special legislative session, called by Gov. Weeks, voted an $8,000,000 bond issue for emergency road construction.

National representatives of the Green Mountain State in Washington persuaded the Government to add $2,600,000 toward the restoring of roads that had previously been granted Government aid.

Practically all of this $13,600,000 for new roads will remain in the state. The work will supply employment for thousands of Vermont bread winners, many of whom are unable to till the mud-coated farms that once gave them their livelihood.

This ready employment, with its minimum labor wage of from $5 to $6, has created some agricultural concern. The wage, ordinary in a city, will be a large one in the country districts, and it is thought that many of the farmers whose lands are capable of tillage, will prefer the more remunerative road building.

PROVES THAT IT HAS SPEED

HOW THE NEW FORD CAR PERFORMS

It Is There With the Speed, but the Remarkable Thing Is Its Easy Riding and Steering Qualities—Gas Economy Also Is One of Its Virtues.

BY THE AUTO EDITOR.

EARLY this year, when the new Ford made its first appearance in St. Louis, the writer was privileged to ride in the car over an interior course at the factory here. Since that time it has been desired to take one on the open road to "see what it would do." This desire was gratified the past week when, through the courtesy of the Brodhead Motor Car Co., Lincoln-Ford dealer here, one of the new cars, a four-door sedan, was placed at the chronicler's disposal.

There's about as much difference between the new model A Ford and the old model T as there is between the well known hare and the tortoise. Speed, of course, has been the most-talked-of thing about the new car. It has that—all Mr. Motorist cares to utilize. But the real pleasant thing about driving the car is its remarkable roadability, its riding comfort and ease of steering.

It was said of the old model T that one could ride in it providing one's physical makeup was stanch enough to stand up to the rigors of incessant jolting and bumping. Owners of cars of that model can attest that the car would go anywhere, but that it was pretty rough riding off the smooth highways.

This new car, however, is more perfectly constructed. More care has been used in cushioning the seats. This, and the type of shock absorber used, makes it a mighty easy riding car over the roughest roads.

Now about speed: The new Model A will actually go 65 m. p. h.—that was a speedometer reading. And at that speed one rides as easily and as safely as at a lower speed. Remember the old Model T. At 45 m. p. h. one clattered along the road and the sensation was that anything might happen at any moment. And how the old engine roared! There's some vibration, of course, in the new car at 65 m. p. h.—there naturally would be since it's a four-cylinder job. But it's not an unpleasant vibration, and if one sticks to a good speed of about 55 m. p. h. there is scarcely little or no vibration.

In the matter of gasoline economy, the new Model A will probably prove to be more economical than the old Model T, on which the average driver got approximately 18 or 19 miles per gallon. On the test trip, over a 250-mile course, the new car averaged 23.5 miles per gallon, and the car still was not thoroughly broken in.

The new four-door sedan used on the test trip is comparatively new here, few cars of this type having to date come through from the factory. It is the de luxe car of the Ford passenger line and has many features which are new and exclusive in low-priced cars.

It is distinctive from the other Ford passenger cars in exterior appearance. The cowl sweeps down in a graceful curve from a raised panel at the windshield to a narrow belt molding which runs from the front of the hood on a straight line back and around the car. This gives the body a long, low effect.

Another feature that adds much to the exterior appearance is the roll belt effect below the windows, which rolls down to the narrow moulding. The top and rear quarters have rounded corners and are covered with a pyroxylin coated material of a tan shade, in pleasing contrast with the body colors. There is a ventilator in the lower panel of the cowl on the left side for greater driving comfort.

The interior of the car has a strikingly rich and inviting appearance. The trimming is of light brown effect with deeply cushioned seats upholstered in brown hairline cloth, a highly effective combination. The cushions are of the lounge style with overstuffed plain panels. Arm rests in the rear compartment are another convenience.

Seats in both compartments are deeply cushioned, wide and most comfortable. The attractiveness of the interior is further enhanced by the use of embossed panelling on the doors and around the ends of the seat in the front compartment. This is a decidedly distinctive touch, such as might be expected only in custom-built bodies. An oval bow light in the rear compartment and a flexible robe rail are other pleasing and serviceable features. The hardware is all nickeled in a conservative style of scroll effect and is all of uniform design in harmony with other interior trimming.

National Park Fees.

Fees collected by the United States Government from automobile tourists entering national parks range from 50 cents to $3. The charge at Sequoia, Crater Lake and Grand Canyon is $1. It is $2 at Yosemite and $3 at Yellowstone. So many machines come to the parks that at the end of the season the Government can count on receiving $400,000 to $500,000 from them in a season.

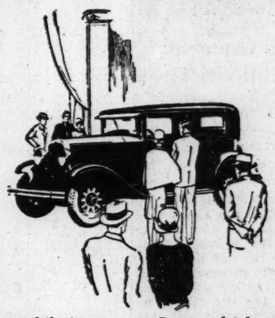
"YOU CAN BUY A BIGGER CAR BUT NOT A BETTER ONE"



The success of the new Oldsmobile is easy to understand when you know why this new six was created and how it was perfected.

It was created specifically for those whose preference is for a truly fine automobile. It was developed to standards of quality, style and value that made no compromise with price. It was proved by over a million miles of relentless testing. And from the day of its announcement, this Oldsmobile has enjoyed a rapidly growing recognition as the Fine Car of Low Price.

In performance, in comfort, in ease of control, in sophisticated beauty—it invites the most exacting comparison with the finest and costliest cars being built today.

Its new high-compression engine—embodying the most advanced features of design—provides true fine-car smoothness, snap and speed. Its insulated chassis and silenced interior create true fine-car environment. Its modish Fisher bodies reveal a new expression of fine car beauty; while such features as Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers and radiator shutters contribute the final touches of fine-car luxury.

Naturally, all this in a car selling for $925 has kindled genuine enthusiasm among thousands of buyers of taste and discrimination. That's why thousands who have seen it—inspected it—driven it critically—have said, "You can buy a bigger car, but not a better one!"

Young J . . . gets a thrill

"I saw one of these new Oldsmobiles out at the country club yesterday," young J . . . said, "and I want to tell you that it looked right at home among those expensive chauffeur-driven cars."

He opened the door of a coupe. "Nice upholstery," he said. "Rich-looking, too. And the appointments are in perfect taste—I guess you can't beat these Fisher bodies."

Then, turning to the salesman, "But will it perform as well as it looks?"

Before starting out on the demonstration, he went over the engine and chassis asking questions that clearly showed a sound knowledge of cars.

"Husky motor," he remarked. "Looks as if it would deliver plenty of power without straining. And say, that rubber-cushioned engine mounting that you tell me about, is a great idea! Entirely new, isn't it?"

On the open road, his enthusiasm reached its peak as, under his guidance, the car swept smoothly and silently over the highway—throttled down to a walk one moment—then glided swiftly away at top speed as his foot came down on the accelerator.

"Any car can rush hills," he said, "but taking hills slowly in high gear is a real test of power."

Then as the Oldsmobile crept smoothly over the top of a rather steep hill, young J . . . grinned. "That's power," he said. "I'm satisfied. Let's go back. You've got a new owner right now." Come take that drive today.

THE FINE CAR OF LOW PRICE

NEWEST NASH LINE NOW ON DISPLAY HERE

"400" Series, With Three Groups, Priced at $885 to $2165.

Twin-ignition, high-compression engines and custom-finished salon-type bodies are among the innovations offered by the Nash Motors Co., in its new line of six cylinder cars, the "400" series, now on display here by the Southwest Nash Co., Nash distributer, and its dealer organization in St. Louis and the Missouri-Illinois, Kentucky-Arkansas territory.

The line is complete, with three groups of cars, a standard six series, priced at $885 to $995, factory list; a special six series, priced at $1245 to $1345, and an advanced six series, priced at $1480 to $2165, factory list.

All models are equipped with full hydraulic shock absorbers, front and rear—Houdaille on the advanced six and Lovejoy on the special and standard six. Bujir centralized lubricating system, on the advanced six models, sends automatically metered oil changes to 21 chassis points simply by depressing foot pedal.

All of the new models embody engineering accomplishments of unusual interest, including the twin-ignition, high-compression motor, developed by Nash engineers. This motor unites for the first time in the history of automotive engineering multiple ignition, high compression, the valve-in-head engine principle, the seven-bearing crankshaft improved with hollow crank pins and aluminum alloy pistons, which employ embedded Invar struts to guarantee the closest possible fit.

Powering the standard six models, there is a new-type motor which combines the advantages of high turbulence, high compression, aluminum alloy pistons with the same Invar struts, and the seven-bearing crankshaft and torsional vibration damper, with the L-head principle of construction to make a motor design especially favorable to quality manufacturing in the field of lower-priced cars.

The new advanced six models are capable of smooth speed from 75 to 80 miles per hour. The special six easily reaches 70 to 75 miles an hour and the standard six models have a speed "ceiling" of 65 to 70 m. p. h., the factory reports.

Pure riding comfort in the new "400" series is an emphasized feature. Each chassis of the three series has a new type double-drop frame, stronger, more rigidly trussed with tubular members and supported with deeper side members. These frames serve to bring the over-all height of the cars to the lowest modern vogue and also lower the center of gravity in the cars to achieve even greater road balance. At the same time the new treatment allows more headroom in all of the bodies.

Another notable development of the "400" series is the easy steering brought about by the new Nash "hair-breadth" steering control. Turning radius has been reduced 25 per cent.

The new radiators, with their artistic new Nash name shield and speed-lined radiator caps, are higher and narrower to conform with the body design and provide greater cooling capacity for the high compression motor. Radiator shell, bumpers, lamps and all other exterior work are chrome-plated over nickel—another example of Nash extra-quality processes. They are thus proof against all tarnish and corrosion.

The new fenders are of one-piece salon design to harmonize with the body style and at the same time add strength and symmetry, and all models are fully equipped at the factory. The list price of each includes complete equipment. There are no "extras" to buy except one spare tire.

Improved Guages For Balloon Tires

With the almost universal application of balloon tires to the modern automobile, a factor that is being stressed constantly by tire manufacturers, is the need for maintaining correct pressure at all times. Motorists are advised to test their tires at least once a week in order to insure the proper pressure being maintained. For the convenience of motorists some manufacturers and car dealers are now including the tire tester as part of the regular equipment. Accessory manufacturers have developed of late the watch-case type of tire tester, as differentiated from the older type of cylinder model. These newer types, it is pointed out by officials of the Motometer Co., Inc., have simplified mechanical construction by eliminating all rubber tubing and substituting for it the principle of the Bourdon-spring movement. This principle has been employed for many years in practically all other types of high grade pressure gauges. The Bourdon-spring is such that when the air enters the mechanism, there occurs an expansion of the spring which actuates the needle recording the pound pressure.

Gardner Sales Gain Sharply

Frederick H. Rengers, general sales manager for the Gardner Motor Co., Inc., has returned to the St. Louis plant after a month's tour of the East and reports big sales gains of Gardner eights-in-line in 24 of 26 distributing points visited. Rengers' trip took him to Pittsburg, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Cleveland, with a dip into Southern territory at Memphis.

"In all but two points I found Gardner sales greatly exceeding previous records," said Rengers. "With retail sales being made in larger volume than present factory production, it will be necessary for Gardner to double production in June over May, and steps for necessary plant expansions are now being made."

Iver Schmidt, president of the Automobile Sales Co. of Memphis, Gardner distributer, sold and delivered 150 Gardner eights-in-line between April 25 and May 20, according to Rengers.

AUTO CHAMBER CHIEF FAVORS FREE PARKING

Says Plan Philadelphia Worked Out Has Cut Fatalities.

Action by the Philadelphia downtown merchants in providing free parking is a symptom of the constructive methods which will free traffic, in the opinion of Alvan Macauley, chairman of the Street Traffic Committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, as indicated in the monthly report of that group published this week.

"Merchants of the downtown section, Philadelphia, in combining to provide free parking space for their customers have taken a step which is likely to have a far reaching influence all through the country," says Macauley. "The answer to the parking question is not to ban automobile parking in the normal course of business, but to build accommodations and operate these at a reasonable rate of return."

March motor fatality figures show an improvement over February in cities of more than 100,000 population; total being 477 in March as compared wih 507 in February.

A number of the larger cities had beter safety records for the first quarter of 1928 compared with a year ago, including Detroit, Baltimore, San Francisco, Pittsburg, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Mo., Seattle, Louisville, St. Paul, Houston, Richmond, New Haven, Grand Rapids, Hartford, Conn.; Dayton, Scranton, Des Moines, Kansas City, Kan.; New Bedford and Spokane.

"To provide parking space," Macauley indicated, "is simply a matter of common sense.

"Communities build good roads, take a pride in the number of automobiles which are owned in the region, and generally recognize the value of motor transportation.

"Obviously any branch of transportation must have its terminal facilities. Yet this is a feature which has been neglected. The result has been, especially in congested sections, that the volume of parking cars has come to clutter the streets. Following that often comes the suggestion of limitation of parking privileges. This, however, can be only a stop gap. The very fact that cars are parked at any given point is evidence of the need for some terminal facility at or near that point.

4,408,470 Autos on Farms.

Motor vehicles in use on the farms of the United States number 5,007,124. Texas leads other states in the number of farm-owned cars with 314,000. Ohio is second with 244,000 machines. Iowa has 240,000 cars on its farms and ranks third. Illinois, with 234,000 and Pennsylvania 230,000, are next in the list. Passenger cars comprise approximately 88 per cent, or 4,408,470, of all automobiles on the farms.

Grade Crossing Problem.

In five years the railroads of the United States have spent nearly $100,000,000 on grade crossing elimination. Despite the large expenditures that have been made for the elimination of grade crossings by means of grade separation, the number of such crossings is increasing. The growing density of highway traffic makes the problem all the more serious, while a growing interstate nature of traffic broadens the problem to one of national importance.

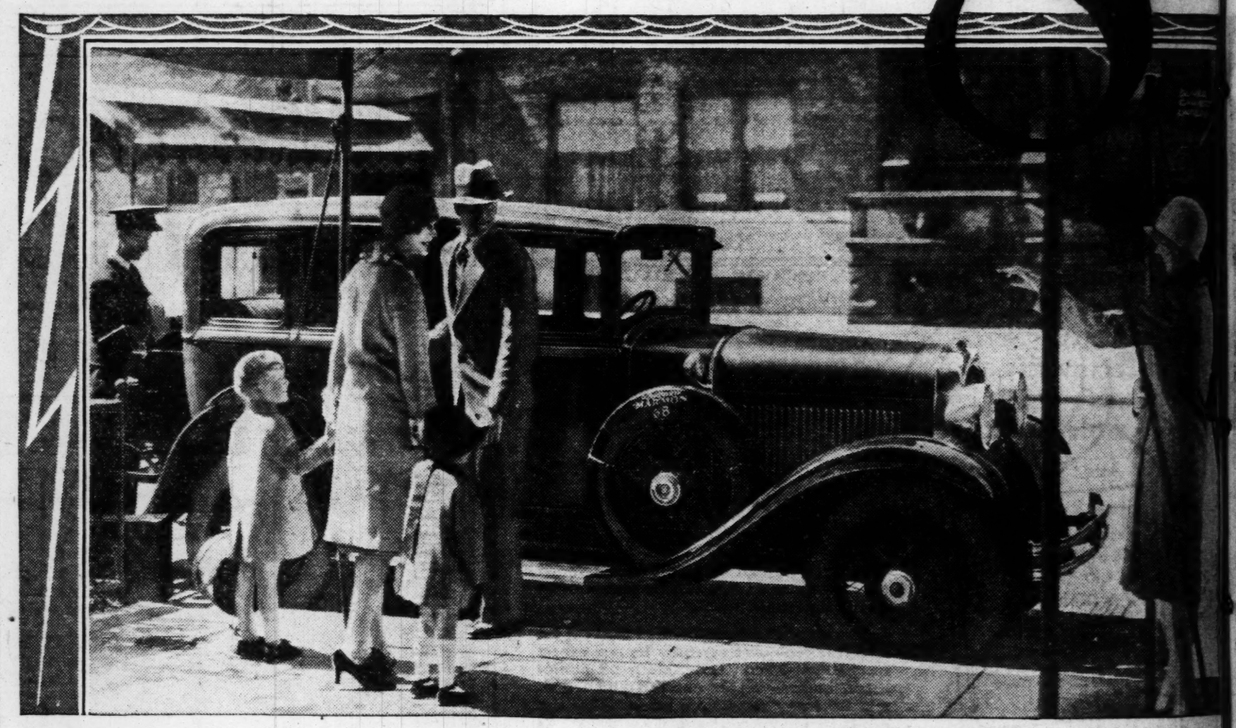
MARMON 8's



There was a time when many could truthfully say, "I can't afford a Marmon," but now there's one at

The way Marmon became the world's largest producers of straight-eights was by delivering the greatest value

—a straight-eight of genuine Marmon quality at the price of a Six, costing the purchaser

—less money for speed

—less money for comfort

—less money for luxuriousness and distinction

—a car that's thrilling to drive in traffic and that will really "get up and go" on the open road

f. o. b. factory. De luxe equipment extra. Also, the new "78," a straight-eight at $1895.

—a car of luxurious five-passenger capacity, but so designed as to take all the struggle out of parking

—an absolutely new type of smooth riding comfort

—all of these things plus an assurance of carefree, troubleless, inexpensive motoring as attested by the experience of more than 15,000 owners.

OLDFIELD

Firestone Built

Takes a New Place in the Tire World!

Now that Firestone has taken over the manufacture and distribution of this high-grade standard tire, from the Oldfield Tire and Rubber Company, the Oldfield Tire emerges from the comparatively limited production class to that of nation-wide distribution and sale through 30,000 Firestone Service Station Dealers.

What does this mean to the millions of users of high grade standard tires everywhere in America?

It means that this famous tire which for more than four years has been distributed through the Oldfield Tire Company's own Dealers as the most outstanding tire on the market—commanding a higher price than any other high-grade standard tire—can now be bought at LOWER prices than those of any other tire of equal quality, durability and mileage performance.

The Oldfield Tire takes its new place in the tire world, backed by the tremendous resources of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, the advantage of a Firestone scientifically designed tread with greater gripping power, longer wear, greater comfort, security and economy and the advantage of Firestone special methods of building into tires extra mileage at lowest cost.

A Quality Tire for Every Car

Backed by a Manufacturer Who Holds All World Records for Tires of Safety, Comfort, Endurance and Mileage

COURIER Firestone Built

TIRES and TUBES

Firestone-built Courier Tires are generously oversize and rugged and the sidewalls are protected against rut and curb wear by heavy ribs. The deep cut design of the tough, long-wearing Courier tread prevents skidding and provides longer wear than any other tire in the medium price field. Courier Tires give car owners quality and mileage that have never been duplicated at the price.

AIRWAY Firestone Built

TIRES

Firestone-built Airway Tires are especially designed for light car owners and far outclass anything else on the market at anywhere near the price. Note the scientifically designed tread with the rider strips at the center and the cog-like units which give greater traction and prevent skidding. Don't experiment with "bargain" tires when you can buy Firestone-built Airway Tires at the market's lowest prices.

Firestone Dealers

Save You Money and Serve You Better

These wonderful tire values go to you direct from rubber plantations and cotton fields through Firestone Branches and Warehouses and Firestone Dealers exclusively—with all middlemen's profits eliminated. Firestone Dealers are better trained and equipped—know more about tires—and give a higher type of service than any other dealer. DUBOIS YOUNG.

HIGH OUTPUT TO CONTINUE SAYS YOUNG

Hupp Chief Scoffs at So-Called Saturation Point.

Saturation points in the automotive industry, the belief—held by many in the industry—that manufacturers will suffer a great slump in 1929 as a result of the feverish production and sales activities this year, were debunked by Du Bois Young, president of the Hupp Motor Car Co., during an interview in St. Louis Monday of the past week. Young was here to address a meeting of dealers and the sales staff of the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., the St. Louis Hupmobile distributer.

"I not only do not expect a slump in business in 1929," said Young, "but I'll make the prediction that more cars will be sold next year than this year. There is an ever-broadening field for the sale of cars. Persons with old ones will require new ones, the foreign export business is increasing by leaps and bounds, and with better roads greater opportunity is being offered for touring, thus it is logical to expect a steady increase in production and sales.

"Hupp, for instance, in 1927 made and sold 41,000 cars. The first half of 1928 we sold 38,000 cars, an increase of 75 per cent for the first six months, and before the close of 1928 we should sell something near 100,000 units.

Speaking of better highways, Young said that narrow highways which now are causing congestion in and about the larger cities were responsible for fewer auto sales, and he gave it as his opinion that super-highways—roads of 40-foot width and more—would soon have to be generally resorted to as a means to solve the traffic problem. Young commented upon the super-highway plans for St. Louis and said the city officials were headed in the right direction. He inspected the wide stretch on U. S. 61 between Luxembufg and Point Breeze and said wide highways of this type would be the only kind used as main throughfares within 15 or 20 years.

Young sees little revolutionaary changes in the anto industry in the near future.

"There is talk of front drive cars, engines fueled by crude oil and things of the sort," he said. "These things may come to pass but not in the near future.

"We are now in the age of refinement, and the manufacturer who builds the best possible car and incorporates the most modern ideas of comfort, safety and reliability is the manufacturer who is on the road to success."

Production Ideas Aid Oakland Plant In Holding Party

The production methods upon which rest the success of America's immense automotive industry were applied with singular effectiveness at Pontiac, Mich., recently to such problems as taking care of babies, parking cars and feeding 65,000 people.

The occasion was a three-day open house celebration at which the Oakland Motor Car Co. played host to the public in formal observance of the completion of a $3,000,000 addition to the manufacturing and shipping facilities for the Oakland All-American Six.

The factories were placed upon an afternoon and evening schedule so the public might see them in actual operation.

The two men who applied their production methods to the problems involving in handling, feeding and entertaining the huge crows of guests were A. R. Glancy, president and general manager of the company, and Gordon Lafebvre, his vice president in charge of operations.

To accommodate the thousands of visitors' automobiles, a tract of vacant land near the factory entrance was transferred into a flood-lighted free parking lot. Efficient special police superintended the orderly parking of the cars. Out-of-town visitors found themselves guided to the plants by illuminated arrows on every highway and Boy Scouts posted at every intersection.

A baby checking department was organized with a corps of white-clad nurses, a dozen sand piles, countless playthings and an apparently inexhaustible supply of full nursing bottles. When parents brought a baby to the checkroom, they received a call tag which matched a similar tag attached to the child.

As an additional precaution, the names and addresses of both children and parents were recorded by a clerk. During the three days of the open house celebration, 625 babies were checked.

At the conclusion of the plant inspection, the visitors reached an immense ballroom a 40,000 square foot section of the new Oakland shipping building. In the center was an elevated stand occupied by a 15-piece orchestra. Loud speakers carried the music to all parts of the dance floor.

Along one side of this ballroom and along portions of two other sides extended a 322-foot "refreshment production line," a solid row of serving tables from which hundreds of waiters and waitresses dispensed 92,000 sandwiches, 81,000 individual bricks of ice cream, 90,000 pieces of cake, 2400 gallons of coffee, 550 gallons of punch, 180,000 olives, 180,000 pickles, 24,000 packages of popcorn confection and 22,000 frost bites. Plates, spoons and cups were of paper.

Other "production lines" distributed 10,000 souvenir ash trays, 25,000 toy balloons, 25,000 Indian bonnets, 1500 lapel buttons and 6000 flowers, the methods bearing a close similarity to the progressive assembly of automobiles as practiced at the Oakland and Pontiac Six factories.

Circle Roads Planned to End New York Congestion

Several Belt Lines of Transportation Highways Running in Concentric Rings to Be Built Around City.

Looking forward to double the 9,000,000 population in New York's metropolitan area by 1965, a special regional plan committee of the Russell Sage Foundation has suggested a plan by which future traffic could be relieved.

This plan is the result of five years of work, surveying areas of congestion and compiling traffic figures. It calls for construction of several belt lines of highways running in concentric circles around the metropolitan area with New York as the center, and a series of radial highways diverging toward these from Manhattan Island.

Thus, the present practice of passing through this narrow and congested island, from one outer borough to another, would be eliminated. The motorists, instead, would take a belt highway and skirt the island from borough to borough.

Double deck streets and bridges, more bridges over the Hudson river in addition to the one just being built, auto tunnels under the East river and even across Manhattan Island, elimination of street cars on at least two of the main cross-town streets and substitution of busses, reduction of taxes, widening of essential streets, limitation of building heights in congested areas, raising of railroad crossings, diversions of traffic from congested spots to others less congested and roundabout ferry routes, to avoid some of the more important recommendations made by the foundation.

If all these were adopted, it is said, the city and its 400 surrounding communities in an area within a 50-mile radius could take care of 20,000,000 people easily.

But today, the figures show, there are 39 spots reaching out on Long Island, in New Jersey and as far as Stamford, Conn., which become congested of a Sunday as the result of traffic to or from New York City. At one point, where street car line and railroad crossing meet on a narrow highway, automobiles have been held up for eight miles back.

The bridges over the East River and the ferries on the Hudson have been the chief causes for congestion, the committee reports. Therefore, doube decks on existing bridges and additional bridges over the Hudson are recommended. In addition there would have to be a vehicular tunnel under the East River and possibly one running cross-town to the Hudson, in order to keep such traffic as goes on to New Jersey off the Manhattan streets.

Trolley cars, it has been estimated, reduce the traffic capacity of the streets they travel on by 20 per cent, and in two cases by more than 25 per cent. Taxis, too, are said to hold up traffic, for a single bus could take care of as many passengers as two score taxis can accommodate.

Making a count of busses and taxis on Fifth avenue, on typical days, the foundation discovered that the busses amounted to only 12 per cent of all the vehicles on the avenue, but carried 64 per cent of all the people riding along the street.

Trucks in factory districts are another menace to traffic, the foundation says. Lack of loading facilities within the property lines causes these large vehicles to clutter up the streets more than 97 per cent of the time they load or unload.

The taller the buildings the greater the traffic needed to serve them, yet most of Manhattan's tall buildings are confined to a district where narrow streets and street cars abound.

COMBINE OF STATIONS TO FIGHT OUSTER

Organization of Those Slated for Denial of Licenses Is Started.

A number of stations which are among the 162 that the Federal Radio Commission proposes to rule off the air are organizing the Independent Broadcasters' Association, with headquarters in Chicago, and announce their plan to make a determined fight to retain their licenses.

Virtully all the stations represented in the new assciations are low-powered. Officers are: Clinton R. White, WCRW, Chicago, president; N. Mayer, WPEP, Waukegan, Ill., first vice president; Charles Messter, WCBS, Springfield, Ill., second vice-president; D. H. Harrell, WHBL, Sheboygan, Wis., secretary; Ben Sanders, WKBB, Joilet, Ill., treasurer; Hersh Miller, WCLS, Muncie, Ind., Charles Middleton, WRAF, LaPorte, Ind., Noble B. Watson, WKBF, Indianapolis, Ind., C. L. White, WJAK, Kokomo, Ind., C. L. Beardsley WHBF, Rock Island, Ill., C. W. Wermich, WKBI, Chicago, and C. L. Carrell, WHBM, Chicago, directors.

A statement in behalf of the association follows, in part:

"The right of communities to have local broadcasting stations, as they have local newspapers, is at stake. No one would suggest that 50 smaller newspapers be destroyed to make room for a single national magazine. Yet the Federal Radio Commission has announced that 162 radio stations must be taken off the air, and that several hundred more must be destroyed later, to make room for the larger broadcasting stations which the commission believes should be given exclusive rights.

"According to the Commission's plans, 50 of these smaller broadcasters would have to be wiped out to make room for a single high powered station.

"The commission, it has been announced, intends to allot only four wave lengths for local broadcasting. On these, it proposes to put 200 of the smaller stations now in existence, then to take those that are left off the air. At the same time, the commission plans to allot 85 channels to 150 favored stations. In other words, less than 3 per cent of the air is to be given to community broadcasting, and 95 per cent to the larger stations.

"This proposal violates the law which created the Radio Commission, Senator Dill, one of its authors, said on the floor of the Senate: 'It is not the intent of this law to crowd off the air a great number of independents and smaller stations. If that kiind of an interpretation is persisted in, there are two remedies—one in the courts and the other by impeachment and conviction of the commissioners.' Senator Walsh of Massachusetts foretold the same evil, when he said: 'We are up against the old problem, that the big monopolies, gradually through governmental aid and commissions, eliminate the smaller stations and the smaller operators.'

"In radio, this local right means the right of every community to use this newest means of communication as part of its daily existence, just as that need is now being served by its local newspaper.

"Radio should not be allowed to become a national monopoly, to be used only for national needs and national entertainment. Radio is also a local institution, designed most admirably to meet local needs, to inspire local pride, to arouse local ambition, to be—as no other means of expression or communication can be—the voice of the city, town or village for which it speaks."

Dispatchers For Airplane Service to Work by Radio

Western Part of Trans-Continental Air Route Being Equipped to Use Them.

Radio is providing a new job—that of airplane dispatcher.

Much like his predecessor, who is responsible for the operation of trains without conflict in schedules, his task will be to keep airplanes going in the right direction and to give aid in cases of emergency. But the land wires the train director uses are not to be part of the system. Radio will be the link between ground and airplane.

On the western sector of the transcontinental air route, ground radiophone stations are being set up, and a dispatcher will be in charge of each.

Most of the directing by radio will be done at night, when a pilot must depend on his compass or light beacons spaced at intervals along his route. These beacons are erected on towers and contain lights with a candlepower of 4,000,000.

At the outset, the airplane dispatching equipment will provide for only one-way voice communication. From a ground radiophone the dispatcher's voice is loud and clear in an airplane receiver. However, for his responses, the pilot will use wireless telegraphy, as weight of an efficient phone set is too great for practical purposes in the air.

It is intended to restrict answers from planes at the start largely to "yes" and "no."

song of Gov. Smith's followers—will be picked up by the microphones.

In addition to the regular convention broadcast, the NBC has arranged, with the co-operation of the Associated and United Press, to broadcast summaries of convention proceedings late each night. By this method the man who has not tuned in on the convention can have a concise report of all that has happened.

The convention also will be broadcast by KMOX and other stations linked in the Columbia Chain and by WGN, Chicago, independently. Maj. Andrew White, head of the Columbia System, will be in charge at Houston for that chain, while Quinn Ryan, noted announcer of WGN, will direct the broadcasting through that station.

FAMOUS LYRIC SOPRANO SINGS TODAY OVER KSD

dramalogue would incidate that the "unfortunate" youth did not lose so much after all. In the last analysis, it is seen that the scheming brother who remained behind gained little by the acquisition of his brother's share, while the latter freely roamed under the open sky with his wife and children.

The overture to Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" will open the broadcast of the "Sixty Musical Minutes" offered by the Federal Council of Churches over KSD at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

This week's group of old favorites will include a flute and clarinet version of "Juanita," Bartlett's "Dream" as a tenor solo, a male quartet arrangement of "A Perfect Day" and Schumann's "Traumerei" as a violin solo.

The details follow:

Overture to "Marriage of Figaro" ..... Mozart
Orchestra.
Duna ..... McG.ll
Baritone.
I Know of Two Bright Eyes— Clutsam
Male Quartet.
March of Nutcracker Suite— Tschaikowsky
Orchestra.
Last Night ..... Kjerulf
Tenor and Barjtone.
Violin Solo.
Absent ..... Metcalf
Male Quartet.
(a) Juniata.
Flute and Clarinet.
(b) A Dream ..... Bartlett
Tenor.
(c) A Perfect Day..... Bond
Male Quartet.
(d) Traumerei ..... Schumann
Violin.
Fear Not, O Israel..... Buck
Baritone.
In a Little Town Nearby.... Maley
Male Quartet.
Gondolier ..... Nevin
Orchestra.
All Thru the Night..... Old Welsh Ensemble.

A joint recital by Genia Zielinska, coloratura soprano, and Winifred Young Cornish, pianist, will be broadcast over KSD at 2:00 this afternoon.

Their 30-minute program will contain the brilliant "Concert Etude" of Constantin Sternberg, the Russian pianist-composer, and unaffected songs in English and Russian, including the characteristic "Sevillana" by Massenet.

The program follows:

Air De Ballet ..... Scarlatti
Sonata ..... Scarlatti
Winifred Cornish.
'Tis June, My Dear .... Spross
My Cross, My Crown.....Walker
The Nightingale and the Rose— Rimksy-Korsakoff
Genia Zielinska.
Concert Etude ..... Sternberg
Winifred Cornish.
Sevillana ..... Massenet
Genia Zielinska.

A variegated program for piano and harpsichord will be played in a half-hour studio recital by Hans Barth over KSD at 5:00 this evening.

Barth has chosen works that suit the instruments to which they are assigned. The jacy, old-world texture of Mozart's works is revealed on the harpsichord, contrasted with works of Chopin to be heard on the sturdier instrument for which they were intended.

A mozart theme and variations is repeated on the piano after the harpsichord performance, giving listeners an opportunity to compare directly the relative qualities of the two.

The program follows:

Waltz, E minor..... Chopin
Piano.
Andantino in E flat..... Mozart
Harpsichord.
Theme and variations in E. Chopin
Piano.
Minuet in F..... Mozart
Harpsichord.
Revolutionary Etude ..... Chopin
Piano.
Sonata in A (theme and variations) ..... Mozart
Harpsichord.
Sonata in A..... Mozart
Repeated for piano.
Mazurka in B flat..... Chopin
Piano.

Louise Bave, lyric soprano, will sing with the Capitol Theater Family over KSD at 5:30 this evening.

Miss Bave is not only well known abroad, but is conceded to be one of the foremost interpreters of Italian music in this country.

Last KSD Grand Opera Wednesday

The National Grand Opera Company of WEAF is to close its winter-spring season over KSD with a performance of Verdi's "The Masked Ball" next Wednesday night. "The Masked Ball" is kept on the operatic repertoire, despite its stilted plot, because of its fine music, the most famous of which is the baritone aria, "Eri Tu."

The cast will include the following well-known soloists of the National Grand Opera Company: Julian Oliver, tenor; Ferruccio Corradetti, varitone; Astrid Fjelde, soprano; Devora Nadworney, contralto, and Johan Oakley, basso.

The scene of the opera originally was laid in Naples, but for political reasons was changed to Boston. Scenes are supposed to take place in the late seventeenth or early eighteenth century.

Program Changes On Station KSD

Because the speakers scheduled will be at the Democratic convention in Houston, the Voters' Service broadcast for next Tuesday evening over KSD will be cancelled for the one evening. In its place there will be a concert by the Mediterranean dance band.

A concert by Vincent Lopez' orchestra, playing in New York, will be broadcast by KSD at 5:30 next Wednesday evening.

KSD will broadcast programs by the Utica Jubilee Singers next Saturday and on Saturday, June 30.

Two Song Cycle concerts are scheduled to be broadcast over KSD at 7 on Thursday evening, July 5 and 12. The July 5 program will bring Cadman's "The Morning of the Year." "Flora's Holiday" is scheduled for July 12.

Another Station Gives Up License

Radio station WLBM at Cambridge, Mass., has voluntarily surrendered its license. It is the second station to suspend voluntarily. WEBJ in New York having retired last week.

In giving up the license, WLBM officials wrote:

"We are very much in sympathy with what the commission is doing and believe that if you could eliminate 200 or 300 stations, the gain would be much more important than the loss of a few insignificant stations such as our own." It is sincerely hoped that the work of the commission will not be interfered with by legal action."

Jane Ellison, cooking expert, is to tell how to make ice creams and sherbets in an economical way, in a Radio Household Institute talk that she will broadcast over KSD at 9:15 tomorrow morning.

To cut down your motor mile costs

Buy "balanced" oil

The cost of driving your car one mile is your "motor mile" cost. But this includes not only the cost of gasoline and oil, but also the expense of repairs, depreciation, tires, tax, license and everything else.

As experience has told you, good lubrication is what saves repair expense and makes your car last longer, thus cutting down your motor mile costs.

In other words, oil, the smallest item of your car cost, is the one thing that is most effective in keeping down Repairs and Depreciation —your two greatest costs! And the better the oil, the greater the saving.

You can see why Pennant "balanced" oils are by far the most economical for you. These oils are highly heat resistant because made from selected paraffine-base crudes in which Nature has provided the elements that resist heat.

Also, they flow and penetrate at the first turn of the motor, regardless of weather, because they have been specially refined, purified and finally "de-waxed".

Thus they protect your motor under all conditions.

It would pay you to buy Pennant "balanced" oils even if they cost you more — but these superfine oils still sell at regular price.

ST. LOUISAN IS MAXWELL HOUR SOLOIST

Willard Robison, Once With 'Nighthawks,' Sings Tenor, Plays Piano and Composes.

Willard Robison, composer, pianist and tenor, who is to be featured in the Maxwell hour over KSD next Thursday night, is a St. Louisan. He became staff pianist for WDAF, Kansas City, and a member of the "Nighthawks," whose fame had spread throughout the country till people sat up through the small hours of the morning to hear them play.

Paul Whiteman on a visit to Kansas City heard this pianist through a speaker and went immediately to the station to hear him play. Whiteman returned to New York, but he had not forgotten his "find" in the West and wired Robinson an offer of a permanent place in his organization. Robison accepted, and since then his ascent of the ladder of success has been steady. He organized the Deep River Orchestra, which toured the country and was a success in New York.

Robison has developed a new rhythm idea of blues syncopation. Although white, he has composed Negro spirituals that are equal to the best of the colored writers. As a pianist he has mastered the tricks which are the foundation of piano jazz. His is said to be the last word in blues interpretation—and he sings well.

To Get Best Possible Results From Receiver.

A good antenna and ground are absolutely necessary to obtain maximum results from the receiver. The best antenna to use is one about 50 feet long, including the lead-in. Better results may be had with the antenna facing in one particular direction. The best ground to use is a copper plate with the ground wire soldered to it and buried five or six feet in damp earth.

Radio Trade Notes

THE new Fada receivers and speakers were exhibited for some 100 Fada dealers in the St. Louis territory at a convention and dinner held Monday at Hotel Coronado at which Beck & Corbitt, the distributer, was host. Speakers included L. J. Chatten, general sales manager of F. A. D. Andrea, Inc., E. F. Bergere, teritrorial representative; George Niekamp, general sales manager of Beck & Corbitt, and Carl D. Wagener, assistant sales manager. Niekamp presided at the meeting and dinner.

Chatten said that Fada sales weer 60 per cent greater last year than in 1926, and promised to show as great a rate of increase this year. "There is no reason why the public should wait to buy a radio set or speaker," he said. "They can buy now with confidence, for the sets that are being shown now will be the current models this fall and winter. And the man who gets his set now will not miss the exceptionally fine things that are to be on the air this summer."

The new Fada receivers are completely shielded AC electric sets, and carry out the Fada principle of "harmonated reception," in which receiver and speaker are designed to work together.

All models, of course, have single dial tuning, and all operate from the light socket. One type uses 5 of the 227 type AC tubes and a 171A power tube. Another has 6 of the 227 AC tubes and two of the big 210 power tubes in push pull. Fada sets burn AC tubes at a voltage that gives them long life, and there is a special control of line voltage variations.

Console models have built-in Fada cone speakers or the advanced Fada dynamic speakers which are designed to reproduce speech and music from 20 to 6000 cycles at any volume.

The receivers are fitted for electric phonograph pick-up devices. The volume control enables tubes to operate at full efficiency no matter what the volume.

The monthly meeting of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association will be held at 6:30 Wednesday evening at the Roosevelt Hotel. A committee will make a report on tube discounts. Reports also will be made on the recent show and conventions at Chicago. Separate group meetings are set for 6 o'clock.

The Walter Ashe Radio Co. has moved from Tenth street near Pine to Pine and Eleventh streets. Walter Ashe, head of the firm, is one of the pioneer radio wholesalers in the St. Louis territory. The firm will continue to cater to set builders, radio amateurs and experimenters as well as conduct a general radio wholesale business.

Coolidge Called Ideal Broadcaster

Recapitalized and reorganized, the De Forest Radio Co. is remodeling and re-equipping its plant in Jersey City, N. J. It announces plans to produce a complete line of tubes, receivers and accessories. It is to be associated with the Sonora Phonograph Co. It controls numerous basic patents and rights. James W. Garside is president and general manager. A. J. Drexel Biddle Jr. is chairman of the board. Paul L. Deutsch, president of the Sonora Phonograph Co., is a director.

Stetson Parade Broadcast.

The Dewey day celebration will be featured in this afternoon's Stetson Parade, broadcast over WEBH, WSAI, WHO and other stations at 4 o'clock.

Russian Music In Tomorrow's 'Family Party'

Napoleon's Retreat From Moscow to Be Theme of Musical Program.

Musical presentation of one of the great historic events will be featured in the General Motors Family Party over KSD tomorrow night. The theme will be Napoleon's retreat from Moscow. This military event has served as inspiration for some of Russia's most lasting musical compositions. One of the greatest of overtures, Tschaikowsky's 1812 overture, is based on Napoleon's retreat.

The event to which Tschaikowsky has given the most vivid musical expression began on Sept. 13, 1812, when, six days after the battle of Borodino, the Russian troops evacuated Moscow. The city was occupied by the French the next day. That same night the capital was fired, signalling a general rally to the peasants who arose against the invaders.

Want of supplies and the impossibility of wintering in a ruined city supplemented the continuous attacks of Cossacks and peasants, and Napoleon was compelled to leave Moscow on Oct. 19, after an unsuccessful attempt to destroy the Kremlin, which he had occupied.

Russian music, strongly grounded in conservatism, is said to owe its appeal to influences still discernible. Founded on a century-old art, music critics say this emotional expression of a Slavic people still shows the influence of the Greek Church, the old folk songs set to primitive dance tunes, here and there a marked gypsy strain, with decided influence from the earlier Italian operas.

Mexican Soprano on KWK.

Raquel Nieto, soprano, who is singing with the Tango Orchestra in concerts over KWK on Monday nights, is a Mexican.

Berlin Songs in Roxy Program.

Songs by Irving Berlin will be featured in the Roxy's Gang broadcast over KWK and allied stations tomorrow evening. A new song, "I'm Mad About You," by Jack Press, will be sung by Harold van Duzee, tenor.

KING GIVES UP UMBRELLA ON ENTERING ART MUSEUM

Capricious Climate of England Causes Rulers and Subjects to Carry Them Constantly.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 23.—The King and Queen of England, like 40,000,000 of their subjects, seldom are seen without a capacious umbrella hooked over one arm.

Once one has encountered a London downpour, he can sympathize with them. The precaution, however, has its disadvantages, for should one want to drop into a picture gallery to get out of the wet, he must relinquish the umbrella and run the risk of losing the elusive metal tag which alone will enable him to reclaim it.

But then even the King and Queen take this risk. When they paid a private visit to an exhibition of antiques the other day, his Majesty's quick eye read the notice stating that all walking sticks and umbrellas must be checked at the entrance. He immediately insisted on surrendering his own and the Queen's, in spite of the curator's remonstrance that an exception would be made in their behalf.

The Prince of Wales is almost always seen with his umbrella crooked over his arm, and the Duke of York carries one on many occasions. Most of the royal ladies are particularly partial to their umbrellas.

TO JUDGE GARDENS THIS WEEK

Second Visit in Contest Will Be Made in September.

All gardens entered in the "Best Garden" contest of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, which closed June 15, will be visited this week by judges. There were 435 entries in the contest, including gardens in all parts of the city, and the contest was far more successful from point of entries than had been expected for the first year. It is to be an annual event. One thousand dollars in cash prizes is offered, of which $25 is for the best garden in each of 12 districts. Two city prizes for the best of district winners, one for $50 and the other for $100, will also be awarded.

The gardens will be judged again in September.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

PART SIX. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 24, 1928. PAGES 1—4A.

Opera Turns to Musi-Comedy

Municipal Company to Present the Pleasing "No, No, Nanette," With Dorothy Seegar in the Title Role, and the Garden Theater Will Have "Up She Goes." Both Shows Starting Off Tomorrow Night.

AFTER another week in which the weather cut into the prospective profits deeply the Municipal Opera company and the Garden Theater organization begin their fourth productions of the summer tomorrow night. The Municipal, for the occasion, will discard light opera and have a try at that immensely pleasing musical comedy, "No, No, Nanette." The Garden, already committed to that form of entertainment, will offer "Up She Goes"—which is the title of the show and not a reference, by any means, to the battle the new promoters have had to keep ahead of the rains which threatened to engulf the box office.

Like "The Vagabond King," which the Municipal Opera forces will offer for the last time tonight, "No, No, Nanette" was based on a stage success and those St. Louisans who saw it at the American Theater in 1925 during a three weeks capacity run will recall that the intelligence of the libretto was no small factor in the enjoyment that the musical play offered.

The history of "No, No, Nanette" is no less interesting than that of "The Vagabond King." Both are among the biggest money-makers that the theater world has ever known. But while "The Vagabond King" was a smashing success from its very first performance, "Nanette" looked like the biggest kind of a flop during its first three weeks, a lot of hard work on the part of its authors and good showmanship by its producer finally swinging it into the hit class.

HARRY FRAZEE had obtained the rights to make a musical comedy out of a farce, "His Lady Friends," written by Frank Mandel and which served Clifton Crawford as an excellent starring vehicle for a number of seasons. He commissioned Vincent Youmans, a rising young composer, to write the score. After a month of rehearsals the piece entitled "No, No, Nanette" opened in Cincinnati for a tryout prior to a Chicago run. As the comedy unfolded, act after act, Cincinnati failed to warm up. Only perfunctory applause greeted the early moments and the last act was played in absolute silence. The second and third nights suffered a similar fate and "Nanette" looked like the biggest kind of a flop. Owing to the Chicago contract Frazee had to play the piece there for two weeks before he could close the musical play. The first of these two was spent in what theater men call "fixing." Numbers were rewritten and changed around. The cast was changed and then the miracle happened. Chicago took the musical play to its bosom and for 53 weeks, the longest Chicago run ever recorded at the time, the Harris Theater was filled to capacity.

After six months of big business in Chicago, Frazee realized that he had struck a gold mine and he sent out four road companies. Like Chicago, the piece caught on everywhere. First Philadelphia, then Boston and other eastern cities turned out capacity audiences for an attraction that had not yet obtained New York's stamp of approval, for Frazee was holding Broadway for the company that was in Chicago. Finally, in September, 1925, "Nanette" arrived at the Globe Theater in New York and it stayed there for a full season. Frazee, known as one of the producers of that earlier musical success, "Madam Sherry," was well on his way to making millions of dollars for shortly after companies were organized for all of the principal countries of the civilized world and at one time 18 troupes were offering "Nanette" in all of the important cities of America, Europe, Africa and Australia.

"NO, NO, NANETTE" thoroughly succeeded in the mission suggested by its theme song. "I Want to Be Happy." It proved that laughs can come from situations that are not risque and that hearty enjoyment can be caused by songs that are not suggestive, for there is nothing of either in this smart, tuneful and more than usually melodious farce.

Outstanding among the musical numbers provided by Vincent Youmans, who, by the way, was composer of "Hit the Deck," which scored heavily last year, are the theme song, "I Want to Be Happy" and "Tea for Two." Although the orchestras, phonographs and radios have introduced them to the world rather liberally, they carry a new thrill when they are heard in their proper places in the musical play. There are several other numbers in the score that are scarcely less popular. "You Can Dance With Any Girl," "No, No, Nanette," "Too Many Rings Afound Rosie" and "I'm Waiting for You" are others that have a special appeal.

The presentation of "No, No, Nanette," because of its lighter and more modern mood, will be somewhat of a relief to the members of Municipal Opera's cast after their strenuous efforts of the last three weeks. Seven of the 11 principals have excellent roles in the week's offering, with three members of the chorus—Verna Burke, Lola Aguade and Camille Cunningham—assigned to the most important parts ever given to local talent.

"GOOD MORNING, DEARIE" closes at the Garden Theater tonight. Jack Squire, who was especially engaged for the role of Billy van Cortland, the part he created in the original production of "Good Morning, Dearie," remains over for an important role in "Up She Goes," which opens at the Olive Street road playhouse tomorrow evening.

Lois Moran in "Don't Marry" at the St. Louis.

"Up She Goes" is the musical version of "Too Many Cooks," a successful farce, presented by William A. Brady. Frank Craven wrote the story. The music is by Harry Tierney and the lyrics by Joseph McCarthy.

The story deals with a young engaged couple who plan to build a home in which to begin their married life. The family of the bride-to-be come to visit her. The groom-to-be is, at the same time, playing host to an only uncle. The two young folks tell their many relatives of their plans to build and everyone starts making suggestions. One wants the kitchen here, another thinks it ought to be some place else, and so on until the house is farther from completion than when it was started.

Things become so tangled and the couple so irritable and angry that they separate, the girl returning to the old home town with her family. That ends act one. In act two the lovers are brought together again and decide to tell their relatives to mind their own affairs. Act three shows the completed house. Of course everything

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 23.

A FRIENDLY critic corrects me for a recent use of "spit image." And also offers an interesting thesis on the use of what should be "spitting image." In years agone the Southern matron often remarked a new born babe was "the spirit and image" of his father or mother, as the evidence offered. The best the old Southern mammy could do with the phrase was "the spittin' image." Thus the colloquialism.

When an underworld figure comes to an untimely or natural death, his fellows say "he went cold." Rather ghastly, but gripping.

Charleston, S. C., seems likely to become the haven of the towering figures of American literature. The age-old charm and beauty of this quaint Southern city has received a fresh impetus among the literati as the result of Booth Tarkington buying a home there. Many other distinguished writers have been traveling to Charleston incognito in quest of one of the many residences reputed to be for sale.

In the passing of Harriett Underhill New York lost one of its best known and most popular movie critics. For 10 years she endured the handicap of a physical affliction with philosophic calm. She was a perennial fount of good humor and few suspected the shadow always at her side. At the Broadway gatherings which included her, her gaiety was so spontaneous that she was considered "the life of the party." Four hours before she drew her last breath she dictated her final story. She had an eager hunger for life, but was not afraid to die.

This week I called on a preacher from a small town in which I once lived. For 35 years he has been a pillar of strength in his community—officiating at funerals and marriages and comforting the afflicted. In all these years his salary has remained almost stationary. In New York he was living at a third rate hotel in an obscure section. It was his first visit to the metropolis and the genuine enjoyment he was getting out of attending museums, galleries and such on "free days" had a tinge of pathos. It is not at all just that so many noble, self-sacrificing preachers should be so poorly paid. They are entitled to a comfortable compensation as much as doctors, lawyers and other professional men. Their service is just as great, if not greater.

Short Shavings: Talk of a jazz theater for Paul Whiteman and his orchestra....Life has adopted the make-up of London Punch....Three highly paid actresses within the week have admitted supporting their husbands for many years....Another rumor that apartment rents are to drop decidedly by fall....Also hotel rates.....Montague Glass is back from a year's residence on the French Riviera....Earl Carroll's new show is said to be the most expensive yet produced on Broadway....Best seats will be $11.

The legend has grown that brilliant men spend their leisure hours reading mystery and detective stories. As a devotee of this form of literature my ego was gently caressed. Yet a book salesman tells me this is largely bunk. He has for years served a large group of prominent and intellectual men. He says they buy one book of this kind to 50 of a more serious trend. The light fiction is purchased chiefly for a railroad or steamship trip. So I suppose I'm just the low-brow everybody always suspected.

My hat is off to the player who can take a small bit in a show and make it hum. Barbara Stanwyck did this in "The Noose," and now has a lead in "Burlesque." Harry Tyler's outstanding performance in a rather small part in "The Shannons" will no doubt result in stardom. In the meantime the casting agencies are filled daily with men and women who will not take small parts—and await hopelessly for the Big Break.

Another big gap among amusement reviewers was created by the passing of Alan Dale, dean of the dramatic critics. His real name was Alfred J. Cohen and he died on his way to his birthplace in Birmingham, England. He was a shy gentleman who slipped into his aisle seat quietly and departed in the same manner. His reviews were always impersonal but could be cutting. He once attended a miserable performance and his entire review next day was given over to the gaudiness of the electric sign outside. He wound up with a single line about the play—merely mentioning it was on display inside.

Methodists to Give Rupert Hughes Play

For the first time in their history, the Southern Methodists of the city are to present a play at the Shubert-Rialto Theater next Thursday. This is to be a play, dramatized from a short story of Rupert Hughes, appearing in Collier's Weekly, under the title "When Cross Roads Cross Again."

The play is not given primarily to raise funds, but to remind the congregations of the campaign to raise funds for superannuated ministers. The twenty-four Methodist Churches are co-operating in the presentation. Edwin L. Butler, director of the Woodward Players, is coaching the cast.

Included in the cast are: G. A. Hanke, Thomas Mellow, H. L. McNail, W. W. Shannon, T. D. Fultz, Mrs. Rose Lautner, Mrs. G. W. Feverston, Mrs. Gayle Fessler, Mrs. Marceline Norman, Misses Beatrice Beste, Maybelle Roberts, Esther Quertemous, Ila Stafford, Alice Nowatney, Fay Whiting, Alvina Johnson, Anna Michler, Katherine Robinson, Leona Johnson and Messrs. C. C. Aydelott, James McDonald, Henry Abeken, Carl Rhine, W. A. Haupter, Roland Bennetsen and Ford Smith.

Second Thoughts on First Nights

By Allison Smith

NEW YORK, June 23.

THE last two weeks have passed with only one solitary opening on Broadway's theaters, and while one opening has been known to make a summer season, it seems improbable that this one will. It is a piece which was, in its early try-out, known with sweeping simplicity as "Married." In that stage it was said to be a frankly sentimental study of domestic conflicts, but the idea arose that there should be more comedy relief, so the title was changed to "Married—And How!"

This, we gather, makes it funny through much the same magic that any ordinary statement used to be turned into an uproarious epigram by adding "So's your old man." Even with these comic touches, the revised play emerges as one of those sermons on how to fall in love with your wife which thunder away so righteously to an unhearing Broadway. There is every reason to believe that this one won't thunder very long.

IT is made up, apparently, of those shreds and patches of two-a-day philosophy which passed through the hands of a young vaudeville agent, Ray Hodgson, its author. It seems there were a couple of show-girls, Vie and Flo, and one of them marries a millionaire's son for mercenary reasons, only to discover in the last scene that, after all, money isn't everything.

The other becomes involved with an elderly satyr and a fur coat through complications which we never did untangle, but which seemed to be based on the same theory because her romance ends happily also. There are no end of incidental motifs—such as the tragedy of the young brother who hits waiters over the head with bottles and runs down wealthy relatives in their own motor cars—and with every other line some character pops out to start the plot all over again.

Mr. Hodgson seemed to be suffering from an embarrassment of riches in his material, but, for all that, he held doggedly to his central theme that show girls, after all, have hearts of gold and that their husbands only have to be nursed by them after an automobile accident to make this pleasant discovery.

THE familiar blond and brunette sisterhood of Lorelei and Dorothy is played with great vigor by Dulcie Cooper and Peggy Allenby, whose authentic dialogue provided the only genuine moments in a series of synthetic scenes. Joseph Baird was bland and plausible as the family physician (his efforts to reconcile the warring couple added another subplot which we can't possibly go into here). There was also a nurse who seemed strongly under the "Strange Interlude" influence, for she kept muttering subconscious asides to herself whenever the bellboy left the room. Altogether, while Mr. Hodgson knew what he wanted in the way of a message, he seemed handicapped by the fact that every character reminded him of a new plot.

As a result, the clearest motion of a confused evening was an ardent desire to see the author light somewhere—and stay.

SO, ALL things considered, the sole opening in a fortnight has made little impression on the static pattern of Broadway. Those

Movies and the Crime Wave

The Cinema Goes to the Fountain Head to Get an Authentic Story for an Underworld Film and "Ladies of the Mob" Comes Out of Folsom Prison—How Mike Donlin Is Staging a Come-Back as a Screen Actor in the Latest Beery-Hatton Comedy Meller.

THE length to which motion picture producers will go in the quest for new material is evidenced in a forthcoming Clara Bow picture, "Ladies of the Mob," the story of which was written by Ernest Booth, Convict No. 13332, serving a life term in Folsom Prison in California. As the identity of both the writer and title indicate, the story is of a girl of the underworld—the romance of a gangster's sweetheart.

But the history of "Ladies of the Mob" is not that of a film company's getting a story and then acquiring the convict's name to add color to the underworld narrative but rather a case of Booth having written a story that attracted the attention of the film executives.

Booth's own history makes fairly interesting literary history. As a youth he undertook a career of crime, and after participating in numerous bank robberies, ended up in the Folsom penitentiary. There, he became interested in writing, and corresponded for several years with H. L. Mencken, editor of the American Mercury. For many months he continued submitting stories to the caustic editor, and though none proved satisfactory Mencken was so struck with a certain literary feeling in his articles that he corresponded with Booth and encouraged him greatly.

Eventually Booth struck the proper note, and has since been a frequent contributor to the Mercury, all his artices dealing in one way or another with crime. Among the stories was "Ladies of the Mob," in which he discussed the various gangsters' sweethearts.

Some executive of Paramount was seemingly impressed with both the title and the possible material contained therein, for Booth was commissioned to develop a fiction story for the screen around his title. The result is "Ladies of the Mob," which, incidentally, begins with a bank robbery such as Booth described in another article, "We Rob a Bank."

Another sidelight to Booth's career is the connection of Jim Tully, former vagabond who turned writer. Likewise a protege of Mencken who recently has been writing of film celebrities in Vanity Fair, Tully visited Booth at Folsom and wrote his impressions of the prison artist. As Tully has close connections with Paramount because his "Beggars of Life" is being screened by that company, it is possible that on his trip to Folsom he negotiated with Booth for the screen rights to "Ladies of the Mob."

AND while on the subject of criminals and crime pictures the suggestion that hounding a killer to the gallows with his own voice; catching him and delivering him to justice in a network of words once uttered by himself and now endlessly repeated in all corners of the country by a merciless motion picture double—that is a modern way to deal with crime.

Nothing needs to be invented to make such a man-hunt possible. All the equipment is at hand where movies are made, points out Lloyd Bacon, whose work in the past year directing sound-pictures has led him to the conclusion that a man's voice is as distinctive as his finger-prints, and as capable of being used to identify him if filed away in a rogues' gallery of sound-pictures.

Not that directing May McAvoy, Lionel Barrymore and others in talking films turned Bacon's mind toward rogues' galleries. His study of numerous voice-tests, however, impressed him with the fact that every voice has peculiarities which make it impossible for anyone to mistake it who has given it the close, painstaking scrutiny one can give a voice repeated over and over again as often as may be necessary to fix it in the memory.

Ordinary motion pictures of criminals already are being filed away in some metropolitan police departments to supplement the old-fashioned rogues' gallery portraits. By going one step further and making sound-pictures of all prisoners at the time their finger-prints are taken, police departments now can equip themselves to send out at short notice any number of celluloid doubles in pursuit of a criminal whose sound-picture is on file, these celluloid doubles resembling their man not only in features but in voice and little tell-tale oddities of enunciation.

SUPPOSE, for example, that a murder has aroused the whole country, and police have identified the fugitive murderer as a criminal who was under arrest for forgery several months ago, and at that time was finger-printed and sound-pictured.

Duplicate reels of the sound-picture, in which he answered many questions designed to bring out all peculiarities of his voice, would be rushed to all sections of the country and projected before audiences of police detectives. The player's celluloid double also could be made to talk to every theater audience in a city, in which case the average citizen would have a fair idea of the fugitive's voice and appearance, and police experts would know in addition every inflection, every detail and defect of his utterance.

The voice could also be broadcast by radio, with attention drawn to outstanding characteristics and defects, so that even someone who never had seen the fugitive's picture in a newspaper might recognize the guilty voice somewhere and put police on the trail.

The fugitive might try to disguise his voice, but that would be far more difficult than disguising his appearance, for a man can look in a mirror and see himself somewhat as others see him, but he is too close to his own voice to hear it as others hear it.

In other words, the application of sound-pictures to police problems would make it possible to send talking doubles of a criminal out looking for him like relentless bloodhounds. He would be his own nemesis, hounding himself to justice from 100 directions at once.

OUT at the Missouri Theater this week baseball fans who happen to see Raymond Hatton and Wallace Beery in their latest comedy—lets hope it is—will witness Mike Donlin, veteran of many major league baseball campaigns disproving the adage that "they can't come back."

Donlin is making his comeback effort on a motion picture lot instead of a baseball diamond. His baseball days are long since over and a year ago it was considered certain that his remaining days of life were few.

For Donlin had been hard hit by a virulent attack of influenza from

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 23.

ONE need not talk the fine points of drama with an actress these days to keep the conversation from lagging. A word about the price of General Motors or Bank of Italy is enough to save one from seeming speechless. Nearly everyone in the screen colony has been playing with stocks. Some, indeed, are said to have piled up more wealth in the recent bull market than by toiling in front of the camera.

Even more interesting is the conversation of players who were earning good money eight or nine years ago. They remember the other side of the picture.

"Plenty of us went broke in those days," observed Louise Fazenda, chatting stocks and bonds over the luncheon table. "I remember the day I walked back and forth through the downtown streets trying to realize that a crash in sugar stocks had taken $18,000, all my savings." The comedienne's eyes twinkled. "It's not easy to take, either, a loss like that, not when you earned it taking comedy falls."

Those who have always wanted to know how a typical movie audience would react to grand opera will be interested to hear that fan letters have been pouring into Hollywood lately for Raquel Meller, the operatic star, who recently made her debut in sound pictures.

Pawnshop emblem filched from a studio prop room hanging jocosely over the door of the portrait photographer's room. Half a hundred rough, bearded pioneers gambling away their gold in one of the Forty-niner saloon scenes in "Tide of Empire." And during the lunch hour one of the biggest and brawniest of the gold-rush men risking a nickel in a slot machine across the street from the studio—one of those machines in which the alignment of oranges and lemons and cherries under the little glass window tells whether the seeker after gain and excitement gets both, or merely the excitement.

Wherever people talk pictures nowadays they talk talking pictures, and eventually get into an argument over whether or not the new sound-films will create a demand for players with stage experience. Time alone will tell, but the cast of "The Terror," an all-Vitaphone production in which everyone will have to speak lines, seems to favor the stage. Only one of the players, May McAvoy, is strictly a motion picture product without stage experience. The others, Edward Everett Horton, Louise Fazenda, Alec B. Francis, bleachers will recognize him without his uniform and in the role of an underworld gangster.

Mathew Betz, Holmes Herbert, Otto Hoffman, Joseph Girard and John Miljan, all have had experience in stock or vaudeville.

Nor are there any recently arrived foreign actors in the cast.

Soon the milliners of Hollywood will be hiring motion picture gag men to design their new models. The latest on the boulevard is a white turban worn by Esther Ralston as a hot weather hat. Its chief decoration is a thermometer prominently displayed against the front of the white felt.

Victor McLaglen, the hard-boiled, tough-speaking top sergeant of the films, sitting mildly at a desk in the publicity department to autograph a few dozen portraits of himself for fans. And between scenes on a big Turkish harem set, surrounded by the beauties of the Orient, Hugh Allan reading a batch of admiring fan mail from maidens in Missouri, Minnesota and other far-off places.

Tough dance-hall scenes in one of those new underworld pictures called "Gang War," with Jack Pickford playing elaborately but noiselessly on a saxophone to flutter the heart of Olive Borden, the gang leader's sweetheart. And explaining, "I took all the insides outa this sax so's not to break any rules of the musicians' union; not even with a single toot."

Every now and then someone in the screen colony here arises to accuse American newspapers of an over-eagerness to print sensational news about Hollywood. Seldom do the papers get credit for the many peaceful items they print, reflecting the sweetness and light and uneventfulness of ordinary existence in the film center. In the course of one day's news, for instance, one may learn that:

Dolores Del Rio struggled to arrive at a decision on the question of whether to bob her hair or let it alone. Flash, the dog star, went to the dentist for a porcelain inlay. Junior Coghlan joined the Boy Scouts. Estelle Taylor drove down the boulevard in a bright red dress, with red shoes, hat and automobile to match. Two studio costume designers predicted women's skirts would be worn longer and shorter, respectively. Fifty-two bears on location with Edwin Carewe drank strawberry pop out of bottles. And bank clearings for the day were $1,042,821.76.

Food for psychologists: Musicians who provide melody on the set for F. W. Murnau say the German director of "Variety," "The Last Laugh" and "Sunrise" does his deep thinking to the tune of American jazz. When he stops the cameras to ponder a difficult problem they snap into hot syncopation, full of weird saxophone angles and kaleidoscopic tone colors.

which his system failed to rally. Weeks in a quiet mountain resort failed to bring the fading veteran the improvement hoped for. When death seemed ready to win the battle members of the theatrical profession and sport lovers throughout the country rallied to Donlin's aid with a monster testimonial.

From the receipts of this testimonial the former star outfielder of the New York Giants was enabled to spend a long period under treatment at the Mayo Brothers' clinic in Rochester, Minn.

Now he is back in Hollywood and has justified the faith of the friends, who so loyally aided him, by rounding out a career of usefulness. He has completed work at the studio in the cast of "Partners in Crime," melodramatic comedy co-starring Beery and Hatton. Donlin has the part of an underworld gangster in the picture, his first part since his victorious battle with death.

IT was in 1897 that Mike Donlin started his professional baseball career in the same city where he is now working as a screen player. He played in the Los Angeles city winter league and later went to Santa Cruz. In 1899 the St. Louis Cardinals bought his release from Santa Cruz for $500. The price of baseball players has gone up since that time along with the price of most everything else.

It was with John McGraw's New York Giants that Donlin spent most of his baseball career. He was an outfielder and the old time bleacherites of Gotham still remember him. For a number of years he was a team mate of the late Christy Mathewson and his admiration for the peerless "Big Six" is still boundless.

In 1914 Donlin found the old arm weakening and his legs slowing up so he left the major leagues and said goodby to baseball. Unlike many other great ball players, he did not turn to the minors but quit the game when his days in the big time ended.

Since 1908 he has spent the winter season in vaudeville with his wife, the late Mabel Hite, and, when he retired from baseball, he devoted his entire time to the theatrical game until her death.

For the past five years he has been in Hollywood and has been devoting his time to the silent drama.

While just playing atmosphere in "Partners in Crime," the Beery-Hatton team picture, Donlin's part is more than the ordinary "bit." The picture is a melodrama featuring a savage feud between two underworld gangs and the men for all of the gangster roles were carefully selected from an imposing array of talent.

So Donlin is content. He is still at his life-long work of proving entertainment for the public. His one hope is that the old timers who used to cheer him from the theatrical scouts, when faced with an evening away from the footlights, are forced to seek a busman holiday by dropping in to the hardy successes which have survived the humid nights of late June. Some of them have picked high spots in various openings which they conscientiously visit with grave regularity at the rate of four or five productions an evening.

Of these, the favorite, as we know it, is that entrancing interlude in "Funny Face" which Fred Astaire stamps out to the measures of "My One and Only." It goes on at 10.15 and we have grown used to meeting the same group of enraptured confreres who have stopped in their Broadway rounds to hear once again its delirious, maddening rhythms.

Among the other conspicuous high lights we personally have made a definite effort to recapture the following:

The wailing of the Negro spirituals against their background of grotesque shadows in "Porgy."

Nina's soliloquy after her lover has deserted her in "Strange Interlude."

The last act scene on "Coquette," where Helen Hayes says farewell to her father.

The intermission speech of Frank McHugh in the vaudeville scene of "Excess Baggage."

The scene of sudden, surprised passion between Madge Kennedy and Donald MacDonald in "Paris Bound."

The curtain line ("You little sportsman") and the resulting fury of the heroine in "The Happy Husband."

"My Heart Stood Still" in "The Connecticut Yankee," also "Thou Swell," whenever sung.

Bill Robinson's dancing in "Black Birds."

That inexpressibly pathetic little dance in "Showboat," where Edna May Oliver forgets the age and the vinegar aspect of her role and capers sentimentally about with Charles Winneger to the strains of "Wy Do I Love You?"

That cockeyed Ferris wheel invention like a bad dream of Rube Goldberg, solemnly exhibited by Joe Cook in "Rain or Shine."

Marilyn Miller and Jack Donahue dancing in the ship scene of "Rosalie," Jack Donahue loping across West Point in his solo dances—in other words, Jack Donahue.

Haidee Wright's reminiscent version of a long-forgotten first night in "The Royal Family."

Mae West, as seen by Dorothy Sande, Helen Hayes as seen by Paula Trueman and Moissi's deathless voice (emerging as a tenor solo) through the lips of Albert Carroll in the "Grand Street Follies."

Hal Skelly's desperate, frenetic burlesque of a wedding march as the second act curtain of "Burlesque."

Undoubtedly some of the remaining productions have their moments. We know several enthusiasts who have been four times to see "The Varsity Drag" in "Good News"—an episode which thus far has eluded us. There are a few others in the list of remaining performances which it seemed to us only a producer could love, though they seem to hang on somehow. And of these, to our mind, the only moments of diversion came with the intermissions.

Work Being Rushed On New Fox Theater

With over 100 men working on the concrete job at the new Fox Theater being built at Grand and Washington boulevards, work of completing the main auditorium and top floors is going on speedily. Terra Cotta work is now in progress and all floors are being finished with the composition.

Theater business offices on the sixth floor are under construction and bucks for this work have been laid. Nine men are employed in erecting elevator shafts and fittings.

Air will be admitted to the auditorium through the ceilings of the various levels, and a horizontal downward moving current of air will be maintained constantly, free from drafts, and exhausted through openings in the floor.

Plastering work will be started at an early date, as will work on the radio broadcasting station to be installed on an upper floor.

PLANS FOR NATIONAL MUSEUM FOR SCHOOLS

St. Louis Idea to Be Incorporated in Institution Proposed for Philadelphia.

The benefits of the public school museum in St. Louis are to be extended to the schools of the nation by a museum to be established at Philadelphia.

Plans for the national educational museum, to be a division of the Philadelphia Commercial Museum, are in the hands of a joint committee of the National Education Association and the American Association of Museums, headed by Carl G. Rathmann of St. Louis, Assistant Superintendent of Schools. The offer of co-operation by the Philadelphia institution was made last month to the museum association, and Rathmann is to present it to the educational organization next month at Minneapolis.

Its Inception in 1904.

The St. Louis Educational Museum had its beginning in the World's Fair in 1904, related its curator, Miss Amelia Meissner. Dr. F. Louis Soldan, who was superintendent of schools, and Rathmann, who was in charge of the St. Louis school exhibition, decided to save for the use of the schools the valuable material gathered for the educational building of the fair from many countries.

"International as well as national attention has been drawn to the 20 years' work of the museum in providing exhibits for classroom use," Miss Meissner related that when a group of German educators recently visited St. Louis they pronounced it a significant step in visual education and spoke of establishing a museum like it in Berlin upon their return. In the school year of 1926-27 the St. Louis museum provided teachers with 61,984 collections.

Purpose of New Museum.

The national museum proposes to gather materials to illustrate classroom study from science, history and art museums, commercial firms, Government departments and commercial organizations of many countries. Special attention is to be given to schools in the smaller cities and rural communities.

"Visual education is rapidly finding its way into all the schools of the country," said Rathmann. "It has come to stay. The schools are realizing more and more the extent through which learning takes place through the sense of sight. Teachers feel more and more that their pupils should not merely hear and read about the earth. To become acquainted with the world in which he lives, the child must be brought into personal contact with the world. The national school museum will be a valuable factor in bringing the world to the child."

NEW TRAINING SCHOOL FOR TEACHERS TO OPEN SEPT. 19

It Is for Instructors of Disabled Children; Course Occupies Two Years.

The Missouri Training School for Teachers of Crippled Children, sponsored by the Missouri Association for Occupational Therapy, will open Sept. 19, in the School of Medicine of Washington University, 602 South Euclid avenue. Courses are planned for teachers now in the field and those who are training for the work.

Miss Geraldine Lermit, director of the Missouri Asociation for Occupational Therapy and director of the St. Louis School of Occupational Therapy, will be dean of the new school. Course will be open to certified teachers or students who have completed two years of college work, majoring in education. The Washington University Medical School and extensions departments are co-operating in the work.

FRISCO'S NEW LINE TO GULF COMPLETED

Special-Car Parties Leave St. Louis and Elsewhere Tomorrow for Celebration.

A special-car party will leave St. Louis tomorrow night to attend the celebration at Pensacola, Fla., Thursday, of the completion of the Frisco system's new rail line into that city, a port on the Gulf of Mexico.

Cars from Kansas City, Wichita, Tulsa, Oklahoma City, Joplin, Ft. Smith and Springfield will reach Memphis Tuesday morning, and will be made up with the St. Louis and Memphis cars into a special train which will proceed to Pensacola, picking up another car from Birmingham on the way.

Railroad officials, shippers, representatives of business organizations and newspapers will make the journey. Tuesday afternoon and evening will be spent in Columbus, Miss., where a celebration will be held, Columbus being the largest intermediate point on the new line.

Program at Various Towns.

Wednseday morning the party will take part in a barbecue at Demopolis, Ala., another town on the new line. In the evening, Aliceville, Ala., will entertain the guests. Thursday morning the special train will be in Pensacola.

A fund of $15,000 has been raised in Pensacola to celebrate the railroad's entry. Naval aviators from the Pensacola air base will put on an air show, and there will be a water regatta, street parade, barbecue and banquet.

The new line, constructed by the Frisco within the last two years, extends southeast 152 miles from Aberdeen, Miss., to Kimbrough, Ala. From Kimbrough to Pensacola, 143 miles, the route is that of the Muscle Shoals, Birmingham & Pensacola Railroad, which the Frisco purchased and reconstructed.

Direct Line From the Gulf.

The new line connects at Aberdeen with the Memphis and Birmingham division of the Frisco, and thus form as direct line from the Gulf of Mexico to St. Louis and Kansas City, via Memphis. Pensacola is 742 miles from St. Louis by the new route, and 920 miles from Kansas City, which is reached from Memphis via Springfield, Mo., and Fort Scott, Kan.

The new enterprise, which cost the Frisco about $7,000,000, gives that system its first tidewater outlet. In acquiring the line into Pensacola, the Frisco acquired also terminal property including a dock for ocean steamers and a deep-water coal loading and unloading apparatus.

Pensacola's deep harbor, its comparative nearness to Cuba and the Panama Canal, and the proximity of the Alabama coal and iron fields, have caused the prediction that, with the new rail connections, the port can be made a rival of Mobile, and even of New Orleans.

14-STORY HOTEL FOR LINDELL AND SPRING PLANNED

Preston J. Bradshaw Announces $3,000,000 Structure to Be Annex To Coronado.

CONSTRUCTION TO START IN FALL

15-Story Apartment to Be Erected at Taylor and Lindell By Syndicate.

By Berry Moore

Plans for a 14-story hotel, with convention hall, for the southwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue, involving an estimated cost of $3,000,000, were announced last night by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect. Construction is scheduled to start early in the fall.

The new building is to be erected by the Coronado Hotel Co., of which Bradshaw is president, as an annex to the Coronado Hotel at the northwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue. The two buildings will be connected by a tunnel under Lindell.

The site, purchased some time ago by Bradshaw, has a frontage on Lindell of 170 feet with a depth on Spring of 223 feet. A valuation one of the largest vacant holdings available on Lindell boulevard.

Plans provide for 200 hotel rooms and 100 apartments with an entirely new idea of equipment. Each room will have private bath with shower

To Have Swimming Pool

The first and second floors and basement will comprise a convention hall and a banquet room, each with a seating capacity of 1500, a swimming pool and a garage. A separate entrance will be provided for the banquet room.

A large coffee shop is planned on the first floor, as well as lobby and lounge.

The building will set back 30 feet from the street with the lot terraced up to it, similar to the Coronado Hotel. A tower, with roof garden is being discussed.

Plans for the new annex are being drawn by Bradshaw who designed the present Coronado which was erected seven years ago. In addition to the original building was erected two years ago doubling its capacity.

Bradshaw is the designer of some of the most notable St. Louis hotel and apartment buildings, including the Chase, Melbourne and the new Heiss Hotel at Washington avenue and Ninth street. The Brown Hotel in Louisville was also designed by him. He has been for years an advocate of Lindell boulevard hotel and apartment construction, holding that "the Fifth avenue of St. Louis" cannot have too many fine buildings.

Another Apartment Planned.

Plans are under way for a 15-story apartment building for the northwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Taylor avenue, as was told in Wednesday's Post-Dispatch. It is to be erected by Meyer Finkelstein, proprietor of the House of Finkelstein, dealer in women's wearing apparel. Jacob Harshfield and Joseph Kopman, builder, composing a syndicate which recently purchased the site for $100,000 through the Mercantile Trust Co.

The site has 100 feet on Lindell and 250 feet on Taylor. Mrs. M. G. Logan of New York, a client of the trust company, was its former owner. A residence on the site is occupied by J. R. Koontz, vice president of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Co.

Restrictions on the property in this block have prevented the erection of buildings more than 10 stories high. Sixty of the property owners, however, have signed a release of the restrictions which has been filed with the Recorder of Deeds.

To Have Large Suites.

Suites of 5, 6, 7 and 8 rooms are contemplated with two and three baths. The top floor apartments will have 10 rooms each with four baths. The building will contain no stores but there will be a garage in the basement for 250 cars. Construction is to be started in either September or February.

The purchasers, accompanied by an architect, will go to New York this week to get new ideas for the apartment, which, according to Finkelstein, will be different from anything in the apartment house line in St. Louis.

Morfit Sells 4206 Lindell.

The James C. Morfit Real Estate Agency reports having sold for Mary Jones to L. F. Sherman a 15-room residence at 4206 Lindell boulevard; also 550 Olive court, Webster Groves; a frame bungalow on Rock Hill road south of Big Bend road, and various lots. Mr. Morfit reports activity in Tesla place, where new houses have been completed and six are under construction.

WIDENED STREETS ATTRACT INVESTOR AND SPECULATOR

Deals in Delmar, Franklin and Olive Property Traced to Recent Improvements; Viaduct Renews Interest

Renewed activity in realty as the result of civic improvements, notably new broad thoroughfares, was a salient feature of the week. This refers especially to Delmar boulevard, Franklin avenue and Olive street.

A noteworthy purchase was that of the property at 805-09-11 Franklin avenue by Frank Lind, retail grocer, represented by W. T. Hartwell, real estate agent.

The purchase consists of a three-story building and lot 75 by 70 feet. It adjoins the new three-story building at the northwest corner of Eighth street and Franklin avenue, embracing 55 by 80 feet already recently erected by Lind.

The building sold is under lease to the Biederman Furniture Co., which has concluded negotiations with Lind for the corner, with plans for occupying both buildings. The purchase, with the corner holding, gives Lind a total frontage on Franklin avenue of 125 feet, with a depth on Eighth of 80 feet.

The price paid reflected, it is said, the changed attitude of investors as well as speculators as to this thoroughfare, which prior to its widening was comparatively dormant, contrasted with its original buoyancy. Attention of both speculators and investors now is directed toward this thoroughfare, on the theory that it is destined to regain its former prestige as a retail center.

The Lind purchase is the most noteworthy in this section since Wayne Stedlin, wealthy commission merchant and subdivider, acquired the northeast corner of Sixth and Franklin avenue from the Scott estate.

Another feature of the week was the purchase by Joseph Goodman, an attorney, of the 99-year lease of the building and site at the northeast corner of Olive street and Jefferson avenue owned by Jack Dubinsky, real estate speculator. Negotiations were handled by Eugene J. Altheimer of the real estate firm of Eugene J. Altheimer, Williams & Calmer. The leasehold carries an option to purchase the fee at a stipulated price.

A modern two-story business building occupies the site, having a frontage of 68 feet on Olive with a depth of 109 feet on Jefferson. Valuation of the property, including leasehold, is placed at $2000 a foot for the Olive street frontage. The corner has strategic advantages which enhances its value.

The business section of Delmar boulevard has been a center of keen speculative interest both east and west of Kingshighway, doubtless based on the benefits to be derived from the increased traffic on that thoroughfare with the completion of the viaduct over the Wabash tracks at Hodiamont avenue coincident with the widening of the street.

At Delmar and Cabanne.

A significant transaction of the week involved the northeast corner of Delmar boulevard and Cabanne avenue, acquired as an investment by Gus A. Heman of the Independent Quarry & Construction Co. through the W. B. Shelp Realty Co. The lot has 75 feet on Delmar and 160 feet on Cabanne Way. It is just west of and adjoining the stores of the F. W. Woolworth Co. and the Moll Grocery Co. It is virtually opposite DeBaliviere, which adds materially to its value.

The reported consideration was $125,000, or more than $1600 per foot for the Delmar frontage. The purchase price was based entirely on the value of the ground, the improvements, consisting of a one-story building, being regarded as of negligible value. A new three-story building is to be erected to contain stores on the first floor, and apartments on the second and third floors.

The property was owned by the Pevely Dairy Co., which was represented in the transaction by the W. B. Shelp Realty Co.

Sold at Four Times the Cost.

Forty years ago Alexander Smith, a Negro barber, proprietor of the Lindell Barber Shop, purchased a three-story building at 1005 Lucas avenue for $7500. His widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, yesterday sold it for $30,000.

The purchaser was Leo G. Hadley, president of the Hadley-Dean Glass Co. The lot has a frontage of 28 feet on Lucas by a depth of 105 feet. Hadley has plans for modernizing the building, a two-story structure, at a cost of $50,000. The sale was made by David D. Lynch & Co., real estate agents.

Hotel De Soto, to Be Built at Eighth and Market Streets

Concern Which Will Erect 15-Story Structure Incorporated—Lot Sells for High Price.

The Hotel Investment Co. has been incorporated with plans complete for the erection of the proposed 15-story De Soto Hotel at the northeast corner of Eighth and Market streets. It will have a frontage on Market street of 70 feet, with a depth on Eighth street of 109 feet, extending to the east and west alley of the block. Cost exclusive of the site is placed at $1,500,000.

The site has been purchased by the hotel promoters who have held it under a 99-year lease. No idea is given as to the purchase price which, it is understood, however, sets a new high record for ground values on Market street east of Twelfth boulevard. The land was owned by a client of W. L. Ronald, real estate agent, through whom negotiations weer conducted.

The new hotel will have a total of 355 guest rooms, exclusive of three conference rooms, fully equipped. All the guest rooms will be provided with a shower and other modern fixtures. The lower level of the building will be equipped with coffee room, kitchen and cold-storage system, in addition to large dining room.

There will be two fast passenger elevators and one service elevator.

Plans provide for nine stories on the Market and Eighth street fronts, including tea room, candy shop, news and tobacco stands, and a beauty parlor and barber shop. Negotiations are pending for the remaining stores.

The first two floors of the building will be constructed of stone with terra cotta finish and the upper stories of velour mat brick of a dark color with terra cotta trimming.

Plans for the building drawn by the John T. Craven Engineering Co. The Kopman Construction Co., of which Joseph Kopman is president has been awarded the construction contract. Work of tearing down the one-story garage building now occupying the site is scheduled to begin this week.

George W. Hunter, with offices in the Railway Exchange Building, is the prime mover of the project. He has associated with him several men with ample resources for carrying out the project.

The hotel will be under the management of Frank E. Jago, formerly connected with the Bomer-du Pont Co. as manager of the McAlpine and Martinique hotels.

This hotel will establish a new skyline for eastern Market street, overtopping the 14-story American Hotel Annex at Sixth street. It is the first private building enterprise of importance to follow the new Courthouse. The plan for it was predicated on the benefits to result from the widening of Market street.

SIXTY-THIRD PLAYGROUND IN ST. LOUIS IS OPENED

Thousands Attend Dedication of 5000 Davison Avenue to Public Recreation.

The Walbridge Public School Playground, 5000 Davison avenue, was dedicated and opened Friday night. It brings the number of playgrounds opened in St. Louis this year to 63.

Thousands of children and their parents living in the district gathered for the dedication ceremony. Addresses were made by Henry P. Schroeder, member of the Board of Education; Miss May B. Blanchfield, principal of Walbridge School, and Miss Elsae Beckman, director of the new playground.

Mrs. William Hertwick, president of the Mothers' Club of Walbridge School, is organizing the mothers of the district to serve as hostesses each day, and George Laxton, president of the Patrons' Association, is organizing the fathers for work in the evenings. There will be special classes in basket weaving, raffit work and sewing for the mothers in the afternoons.

Rodowe Abeden, Supervisor of Summer Playground activities in St. Louis, has arranged an entertainment each fortnight during the season at all centers. A playground festival will be held in the Public School Stadium in the fall.

NEW HOMES BEGUN IN OSAGE HILLS TRACT

Excavations for Three Made, Bixby-Smith, Inc., Announces.

Excavations for three new homes were started last week in the Osage Hills Country Club grounds on Big Bend boulevard, according to Bixby-Smith, Inc., owner of the property. Two of the new homes are for W. J. McCully, who plans for several more. Walter Sheridan is building the other. The home of S. G. Elliot, west of the Osage Country Club clubhouse is nearing completion.

Of the group of homes completed early this year and offered for resale, only two remain unsold, the company announces. Thousands of persons inspected the homes during the short trial in which they were open for display. All of the other homes now under construction will be displayed upon completion, for a few weeks before they are occupied.

WOLFF-WILSON DRUG CO. LAUNCHES BIG EXPANSION

Acquires Three More Stores as First Step and Eventually Will Go Outside City and State.

Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. has acquired the three stores of the Johnson Brothers' Drug Co. as the first step of an expansion into a large chain drug-store system, according to the announcement last night of C. Robert Wolff, vice president. The new stores, located at Seventh and St. Charles streets, De Baliviere and McPherson avenues, and Plymouth and Hamilton avenues, brings the number of Wolff-Wilson stores to six. Heretofore the company has operated stores at Seventh street and Washington avenue, 408 Washington avenue, and Grand boulevard and Olive street.

The company contemplates other stores on the northeast corner of Ninth and Locust streets and the southwest corner of Ninth and Olive streets. Purchase of the Enderle Drug Co. store at Grand boulevard and Arsenal street is being arranged. New offices, warehouse, and ice cream plant will be located at Seventh street and Lucas avenue.

The company will gradually acquire other locations in the city, according to Wolff, and eventually will expand into neighboring states.

FIST FIGHT STOPS MUSICIANS' PARADE

Union Band Opposing 'Canned' Music Strikes Discord Passing Theater Owner's Home.

The campaign of union musicians against "canned" music in neighborhood picture houses precipated a free-for-all fist fight yesterday afternoon when a union band parading in protest against mechanical music in the Lemay Ferry Theater, happened to pass the home of the theater owner, Robert Lau, at 7829 Ivory avenue.

Responding to a riot call, police of Carondelet District restored harmony by arresting nine men, who will be in police court Monday cross-charged with peace disturbance.

The union's "band wagon," a truck with 10 musicians aboard and flaunting signs to the effect that the Lemay Theater was unfair, had been touring the neighborhood, followed by a touring car from which handbills were being thrown.

According to Stephen H. Butler, business agent of the Musicians' Union, Lau and his followers charged unexpectedly from his driveway, tore the signs from the truck and assaulted the occupants of the touring car when they protested. Lau made no statement beyond remarking that the musicians had "shouted things" at him as they passed.

The men arrested were Lau, two of his relatives, Leopold Lau and Irvin Lau, and William Hazard, 16, an employe of the theater; Butler, Emil Bafunno, band leader, and three other musicians, Eugene S. Van eMter, Glimer Cobbel and Charles W. Biehl.

TWO DELEGATE CONTESTS DECIDED BY SUB-COMMITTEE

District of Columbia and Pennsylvania Cases Heard at Houston; Two Others Remain.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 23.—The Democratic National Committee sub-committee appointed to investigate delegate contests has decided in favor of the regular organization delegates in the District of Columbia and Pennsylvania.

J. Bruce Kremer of Montana, chairman of the sub-committee, said today he expected to complete his committee's report tomorrow, when the contests of the Canal Zone and Louisiana will be taken up.

The committee decided the two cases, he said, purely on the record and without hearing witnesses. In the District of Columbia the dispute was between the Smith Club and the regular orgatnization delegates, who also are in favor of Smith's nomination.

In Pennsylvania, he explained, complaint was made over the calibed of Democracy of the delegates, but the sub-committee did not believe it was authorized to pass on the party loyalty of regularly-chosen delegates. The contest included one seat in the first district and two in the fifth.

The sub-committee will report its findings to the full committee on Monday, which will in turn report to the credentials committee for final settlement.

CANADA-TO-MEXICO PLANE UNREPORTED SINCE HOP-OFF

Pachecho and Bieler Arc Due at Capital of Southern Republic at 8 a. m. Today.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., June 23.—Although no reports had been received here tonight regarding the plane in which Joaqún Pacheco and Fritz Bieler took off from Walker Field near Windsor, Ont., on a projected non-stop flight to Mexico City, officers of the Stinson Aircraft Corporation, builders of the plane, were of the opinion that no mishap had marred the undertaking.

It was pointed out that the courses charted by the plane, southward through the Mississippi Valley to the Gulf Coast, would take it over rural territory for the most part and that the chances of its being sighted were slight.

With a cruising speed of approximately 95 miles an hour the plane was thought to have reached the Gulf Coast about midnight and to have straightened out over the interior Mexican route toward the country's capital.

The plane was expected to reach its destination about 8 a. m. tomorrow.

JUNE WEATHER ABNORMAL THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY

Nearly Every State East of Rockies Has Had Too Much Rain, West Coast Too Little.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The unusually cold and unsettled weather conditions prevailing in North Atlantic seaboard states haye been caused by winds off the ocean, but seem likely to be replaced soon by the warm dry weather seasonal in this section, the Weather Bureau announced today.

Throughout the country the month of June has been a peculiar one and no area has reported normal conditions. Virtually all states east of the Rocky Mountains have had too much rain and, while this situation has brought floods in Missouri and Arkansas, the bureau said prospects for spring wheat growers in the central states had improved considerably.

Northern states of the Pacific slope, which normally experience rainfall, have had little or no rain recently.

HELD AS KANSAS CITY SUSPECT

NEW YORK, June 23.—Acting on information from Kansas City, detectives tonight arrested Leo Gordon, 27 years old, on susicion of being one of the seven men who held up the Home Trust Co. in Kansas City, Mo., June 14, during the Republican convention, and escaped with more than $25,000.

A traffic officer was killed, a witness died of heart trouble and four persons were wounded by the robbers. Gordon was found at the Hotel Harding witha young woman who, he said, was his wife Both were taken to Police Headquarters, where the woman was released after questioning. Gordon was held as a fugitive from justice.

They Were Grandpa's Glasses

Grandpa had lost them on a Delmar car—

A boy had picked them up—and the boy's mother watched Post-Dispatch Lost ads next day.

The boy brought them back that afternoon — for they were advertised.

Most lost articles are recovered when they are advertised promptly in the Post-Dispatch.

SALESMEN ON GROUNDS

Location Is Everything

The price may be tempting and the neighbors charming—but what about the neighborhood as a whole? Is it on the way up or down? Is it old or new? Is it growing or standing still? In other words—is it really the place to buy?

Take this for example—suppose Forest Park was divided into three equal parts and the center part made into an exclusive residential district—beautiful homes, winding drives, parkways—would you consider it a good location? If you can picture this as a possibility you are picturing BEL-NOR as a reality—as it is right now—except that instead of being between two parts of a beautiful park, it is directly between two beautiful golf courses, Bellerive and Normandie. If you want to see what a perfect location is really like—

Make it your business right now to see

LONDON, June 23.—Miss Amelia Earhart, who is beginning to show the strain of her many engagements since the arrival of the trans-Atlantic monoplane Friendship, put in a day of complete rest today. The only function she attended was a luncheon given by Mrs. Alanson B. Houghton, wife of the United States Ambassador.

She slept this morning, held an informal reception this afternoon and then slept again for several hours. In the evening she went for a long, cool drive into the country.

Plans have been completed for a return to the United States on Thursday aboard the steamship Roosevelt, and her intervening time is so filled with engagements that it will be impossible for her to make a proposed trip to the continent.

Tomorrow Miss Earhart will have lunch with Lady Astor and dinner with Lady Heath, widely known woman aviation enthusiast.

Wilmer Stultz and Louis Gordon flew several hundred miles today to Manchester and back. They laid a wreath on the grave of Sir John Alcock, trans-Atlantic flyer, and had lunch with city officials. This evening they visited the dirt track races at Stamford Bridge, where they awarded the prizes.

The authorities of Burry Port, the little Welsh town where the Friendship landed, have written to Miss Earhart that they want to build a monument to commemorate the successful flight.

DEMOCRATIC FARM FEE PLANK URGED BY RAINEY OF ILLINOIS

Representative Predicts Victory for Smith in His State if Platform Backs Relief.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 23.—A demand for a farm plank in the Democratic platform indorsing the equalization fee principle for surplus crop control was brought here today by Representative Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, who for several sessions has been active in behalf of farm relief legislation in the House.

Rainey said he had not expected to attend the convention, but after the farmers "had been turned down at Kansas City," he was convinced the Democrats, with a "real farm relief plank instead of an academic discussion of agriculture, could carry Illinois for Al Smith by at least 100,000 votes."

Former Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, who has the solid support of that State's delegation for the Democratic presidential nomination, will offer a farm measure of his own. It is in the form of a bill which Hitchcock believes would meet objections to the McNary-Haugen measure. Designed for "effective regulations and stabilization of commerce of the United States with foreign countries," the proposal would create a board of four members to be appointed by the President and empowered to buy on the open market under competitive bidding such products as it may deem necessary and sell them abroad at such prices as may prevail.

Peer in Ship's Engine Room.

SOUTHAMPTON, June 23.—Anxious to get practical experience in engineering which he is studying at Cambridge, Lord Pentland, whose maternal grandparents are the Marquis and Marchioness of Aberdeen, sailed as a workman in the engine room of the Mauretania today. The young peer has just turned 21.

$78,953 SPENT FOR LOWDEN'S CAMPAIGN

Wisconsin Delegate at Inquiry Would Rid State of "La Follette Element."

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 23.—The unsuccessful campaign of Frank O. Lowden for the Republican presidential nomination cost $78,953.14, Clarence F. Buck, Lowden's campaign manager, testified here today at a brief meeting of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee. Contributions to the campaign, Buck said, totaled $88,976.31, and in pointing to the balance of $10,000, Buck remarked, "I guess I'm a piker in spending money."

The committee, represented by Senator Frederick Steiwer, (Rep.), Oregon, and Senator William H. McMaster, (Rep.), South Dakota, was in session less than four hours, hearing only four witnesses, most of the testimony concerning expenditures in behalf of Republican convention delegates in Wisconsin and Minnesota. At the conclusion Senator Steiwer said no further inquiries would be made until August, when investigations would be started in Texas and California.

Besides Buck the committee today were A. B. Fontain, Green Bay, Wis., one of the leaders in the faction opposed to the group headed by Senator Robert M. La Follette; State Senator Claude McKenzie, Gaylord, Minn., Lowden pre-convention manager in that State, and Ivan Bowen, Minneapolis, who directed the effort to name Minnesota delegates favorable to Hoover.

Fontain said the regular Republicans, as members of his group call themselves, raised about $36,000 to elect nine delegates to the Kansas City convention who were antagonistic to La Follette and the presidential candidate of that faction, Senator George Norris of Nebraska. The regulars sought to elect uninstructed delegates.

Fontain would not say, in response to questions by Senator McMaster, that all who voted for Norris in the primary were not Republicans.

"I'm not indicting the Republicans of Wisconsin," observed the witness. "I am interested, however, in ridding Wisconsin of the element we complain of—now representing the State in the Senate."

McKenzie said the Lowden organization in Minnesota was formed a year ago, but that the Hoover people were first in the field with a headquarters. The Lowden sentiment crystallized because of a desire for farm relief and following President Coolidge's first veto of the McNary-Haugen bill, he related.

The witness said that $16,000 was spent in Minnesota to name Lowden delegates, $10,000 coming from the national headquarters of the candidate, with the remainder raised in the State.

Bowen told the committee the Hoover campaign in Minnesota was centered in three districts, each of which named two delegates favorable to the Commerce Secretary. He added that about $6500 was spent.

SAM LEARS, FORMER ST. LOUIS POLITICIAN, DIES IN CHICAGO

Ex-Bondsman Conducted Newspaper, the Searchlight; Defeated as Candidate in 1916.

Sam Lears, 49 years old, formerly of St. Louis, died in Chicago yesterday of diabetes. He was a dealer in theatrical supplies, and was formerly active about the criminal courts, in the old Four Courts building, as a politician and bondsman. He sought a Republican nomination for the Legislature in 1916, but was unsuccessful, and filed suit against the Municipal Voters' League for statements made about him in a bulletin issued for information of voters. He moved to Chicago three years ago.

In connection with his supply business here, Lears at one time ran a paper, the Searchlight, in which he dealt with politics and personalities. A business rival once caused advertisements to be printed in newspapers for "200 men with hatchets, to do wrecking work," and sent the applicants to Lears' establishment.

He is survived by his widow, The body will arrive here today, and the funeral will be held probably Tuesday. Two brothers, Philip and Ike Lears live in St. Louis.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS GROUP URGES PROTECTION OF BIRDS

Tactics of Modern Sportsmen Deplored by Committee, Which Favors World Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, June 23.—Algrettes and other feather adornments for women's hats meet with no favor from the International Committee for Bird Preservation. In conference here, the bird protectors adopted a resolution deploring the killing of birds to supply feathers for the millinery trade.

Twenty countries, all members of the League of Nations except the United States, will be asked to recommend the league sponsor an international conference which would be convoked to draw up a treaty for the preservation of migratory birds.

Dr. T. Gilbert Pearson of New York, president of the American Audubon Societies, was re-elected president of the International Committee for another two years.

The establishment of bird sanctuaries and reserves in all countries, the passage of laws prohibiting the collecting and sale of birds' eggs and the rigid enforcement of laws against shooting wild fowl by artificial lights and the taking of plover and ducks with nets and traps were recommended in additional resolutions approved by the conference.

Modern methods of killing birds by sportsmen were condemned, being found to be the greatest contributing cause in the imminent extinction of certain species. The repeating shotgun, motorboats and decoys were declared to have reduced to a minimum the chances of birds escaping from their human enemies.

As a protection to migratory birds, it was voted that all shooting of them ought to be prohibited after March 1 in Europe, Asia and North America and after Sept. 1 in countries of the southern hemisphere.

CHICAGO JUDGE IN GANGSTERS' TRIAL GETS POLICE GUARD

Four Indicted for Election Crimes; Three Found Guilty of Holdup.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Police protection was given to Judge Frank Comerford of the Criminal Court yesterday against terrorists and gangsters almost at the same time that a special grand jury was issuing new indictments naming four men in election crimes.

Comerford asked for police guards when witnesses at the trial of three men for robbery indicated they had been terrified into refusing to testify. The men on trial—Sam Newman, Pat English and Walter Tracy—were charged with having held up 20 men at the Taxi Cafe Chauffeurs' Club, March 17. The three had previously been identified by witnesses, but none would repeat his identification from the witness stand. The jury, however, returned a verdict of guilty, carrying sentences of from one year to life.

Policeman George Hartigan was one of the four named in the special grand jury indictments. He is charged with perjury before the grand jury.

John Armondo, already held on a charge of killing Octavius Granady, Negro ward committeeman candidate, was another named in the latest indictments. The new charge was assault with intent to murder George Dowthard, an election worker.

Joe Silverman, already under arrest in connection with the Granady killing, was indicted on four counts charging assault to commit murder and four counts charging kidnaping. The name of the fourth person indicted was withheld pending his arrest.

BAPTISTS' WORLD ALLIANCE MEETS AT TORONTO, CANADA

Representatives of Faith in Nine Countries Address Opening Session of Congress.

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Ontario, June 23.—Representatives of nine countries addressed the fourth congress of the Baptists' World Alliance at its opening today.

The Rev. W. H. Langton, president of the convention of Ontario and Quebec, welcomed the delegates.

"The thing that matters most is that people shall be linked together by the bond of common faith," he said.

Signor Aristarco Casulo conveyed the greetings of Italian Baptists with the Fascist salute. The Rev. Vinko Vacek of Jugo-Slavia, the Rev. A. Meter of Latvia, the Rev. T. Gerikas of Lithuania, Prof. Arnold T. Ohrn of Norway and Rev. B. Spalek, Polish delegate, greeted the Congress on behalf of their countrymen.

The Rev. Ungureanu, dressed in the native costume of his country, spoke for Rumania's 35,000 Baptists. The Rev. N. Odinoff, representing Russia, saw in the congress an "expression of the unity and solidarity of the denomination throughout the world." Tomorrow, Baptists all over Russia would pray for the success of the congress, he said.

Because of the illness of the Rev. E. Y. Mullins of Louisville, Ky., president of the Alliance, the Rev. George W. Truett of Dallas, Tex., was chosen to preside.

David Lloyd George, former Premier of Great Britain, in a message to the opening session, extended greetings to his "fellow Baptists from all parts of the world."

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUTS

SCOUTS SOON TO MAKE NINE WEEKS' TOUR

Fifty Sign for Yellowstone Park Camping Trip—Training Begins This Week.

The longest and most comprehensive outdoor activity of the St. Louis Boy Scouts Council, that of the Tepee or all-summer campers, will begin nine weeks of touring and camping next Saturday, when between 50 and 60 first-class merit badge scouts will leave for their first camp, at Irondale, Mo. The stay at Irondale will be in the nature of a preparation for a six weeks bus tour of the West, including a visit to Yellowstone Park.

The Tepee Camp was organized last year by the local scout council to accommodate boys who wished to spend the entire summer in camp. As an experiment, the scouts were taken on a bus tour to Washington, D. C., the tour proving so successful that a decision was reached to hold another this year, on a larger scale and with better equipment. Two new 25-passenger buses and a complete truck-mounted traveling kitchen were purchased, and the trip to the Yellowstone planned. Only merit badge scouts of first-class rank are permitted to join the Tepee group, as it is necessary that all members be experienced campers.

Two Weeks of Training.

The scouts will spend two weeks at Irondale in training for the tour. The campers will cross Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa, or long runs by bus, but these will be shortened through the Black Hills of South Dakota. A swing will be made into Montana, and the party will nter Yellowstone Park

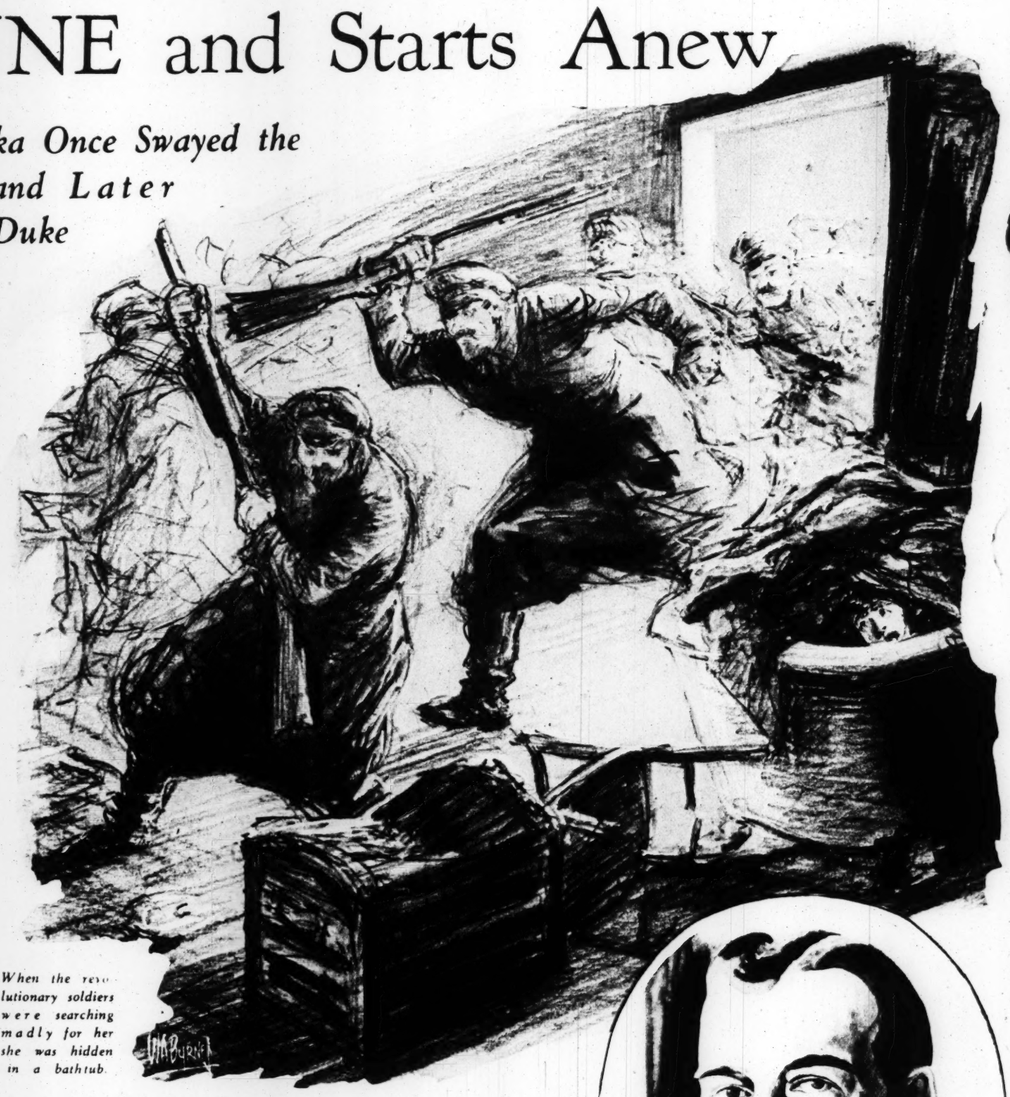
Czar's Sweetheart FLINGS AWAY FORTUNE and Starts Anew

Mathilde Ksheshinska Once Swayed the Russian Throne and Later Married a Grand Duke —Now She's Just a Dancer Again.



When the revolutionary soldiers were searching madly for her she was hidden in a bathtub.

Mathilde Ksheshinska.

PARIS

SINCE that recent memorable night on which she staked and lost with superb nonchalance the last remnants of her once huge fortune at the gaming tables of the Monte Carlo Casino, the Grand Duchess Andre Vladimirovitch is receiving strange and unusual visitors in her sumptuous villa on the Cote d'Azur—people who a few months ago would have been summarily turned away by the haughty doorman. In the luxurious drawing room, where she had so often been hostess to visiting royalties at strictly formal receptions, plebeian real estate agents and shockingly informal antique dealers are asking blunt questions as to the knock-down price of the Villa Alam and its furniture. On the spacious veranda, where formerly only members of the Romanoff dynasty had had the privilege of lounging at 5 o'clock tea, theatrical managers and impresarios are discussing the details of a certain contract in which her Imperial Highness figures merely as "the party of the second part."

The Grand Duchess, once the wealthiest member of the exiled Romanoff family, is selling what was left after her financial debacle, and is preparing for a theatrical engagement, scheduled to begin next fall in Paris. She is giving up her jewels, her villa at Cap d'Ail, even her name and title. For the woman who will make her bow at the Grand Opera will not be the Grand Duchess Andre Vladimirovitch, but simply Mathilde Ksheshinska, danseuse, who a generation ago was a celebrated artist.

It is a coincidence that the date of Mme. Ksheshinska's return to the stage will mark the fortieth anniversary of her debut in a unique and spectacular career.

It was in the fall of 1888 that the "Divine Mathilde" first set foot on the stage of the Imperial Marien Theater in St. Petersburg. What lies between that date and the present is the extraordinary story of her life, a true romance, replete with the elements of historical drama. Hers has been, and still is, a life more crowded with dramatic events and fantastic turns than perhaps that of any other woman in modern history. For more than two decades Mme. Ksheshinska dominated not only the stage of Russia, but she was a brilliant star in the firmament of Russian life in general. The conquests of her art and beauty took in not only the Russian people, but also the heart of their ruler.

THE present Grand Duchess who is planning her return to the stage was the first love and eventually the morganatic wife of Czar Nicholas II. She was the mysterious power behind his throne for over 20 years. Favorite of the Emperor and adored artist of the millions, once the mistress of unlimited wealth and now a penniless exile, she should undoubtedly qualify as "the most extraordinary woman of the past 50 years," as she is called by those of her fellow countrymen who know the story of her career.

Mathilde Ksheshinska comes of a family which for generations has figured in the artistic life of Russia. Her father was master of the Imperial Ballet for many years. Mathilde was naturally destined for the theater, and when 16 she appeared in a minor role on the stage, and was well received. A year later she became premiere danseuse of the opera ballet corps.

About that time the Imperial Ballet was sent to Warsaw. There was a gala performance, and the honored guest was the Czarevitch Nicholas Alexandrovitch, heir to the throne. The Czarevitch, at that time a young man in his twenties, watched the performance from the imperial box. He seemed interested solely in the danseuse. When the second act was over, His Imperial Highness went behind the scenes and the first meeting between the heir to the throne and the dancer kept the audience waiting for more than a half-hour for the beginning of the third act.

It was the first love of the Czarevitch, as well as of Mlle. Ksheshinska. The romance lasted almost to the tragic death of the Czar. Eager as the Czarevitch was to spend as much time as possible with the lady of his heart, the affair had to be kept secret, and Nicholas was kept busy finding excuses to be near the dancer without arousing the suspicion of his father, Alexander III. There was only one member of his family to whom he could confide his secret—the Grand Duke Constantin.

CONSTANTIN offered to give his villa at Peterhof, just outside the capital, to Mlle. Ksheshinska. He had another palace near to the villa, so that Nicholas could come to Peterhof under the pretext of visiting the Grand Duke Constantin. Mlle. Ksheshinska moved into her new residence, and from that time the Czarevitch was much in Peterhof, at the palace of his Uncle Constantin.

Nothing disturbed the idyll of the Czarevitch and the danseuse for about two years. Mlle. Ksheshinska continued to appear in the ballet, and became the leading star of the ensemble. Nicholas visited her every day. It was not merely a fleeting passion which bound him to the girl. He found in her a fine and understanding comrade, with whom he could even discuss affairs of state and politics. He came to regard himself as not only the lover, but the husband of Mathilde. Their love match, of which two sons were born, was virtually a marriage. At last the insistence of the Czar that his son marry according to the interests of the dynasty became so strong that Nicholas was forced to tell everything to his mother and ask the Czarina for help. The only thing, however, the Czarina could do was to delay the marriage plans of the Czar for a few months.

The continuous evasion, and the repeated assurances of the Czarina that the Czarevitch was too young to marry, finally aroused the suspicions of Alexander III. The secret police received an order to find out whether the Czarevitch had any clandestine love affair, and when they reported that His Imperial Highness was living with the dancer Ksheshinska in a villa at Peterhof, the Czar took characteristic action. He sent for the Czarevitch and told him he was to marry Princess Alix of Hesse within two months. The Czarevitch rebelled.

"If I marry anybody," he said, "it will be the woman I love. She is the mother of my two boys, and I consider myself her husband."

The Czar, enraged, threatened to send Mathilde and all her family to Siberia; and when the Czarevitch retorted that in such case he would renounce his right to the throne and follow her into exile, Alexander III raised his hand and struck his son in the face.

THE appearance of the Czarina put an end to the painful scene, which so affected the nerves of the Emperor that he fell ill. Nicholas planned hurriedly for the future.

He knew his father was capable of making good his threat and sending Mathilde to Siberia. The Czarevitch prepared for the ultimate possibility. With the aid of the Grand Duke Constantin he left the capital secretly with Mlle. Ksheshinska. They journeyed as far as Kalisch, a small town near the German border, where a priest performed a marriage ceremony and made Mathilde the legal wife of the heir to the throne. Nicholas was determined that if the Czar should insist upon Mathilde's exile, he would cross the frontier and send his letter of renunciation from Germany to his father. For three days the Czarevitch and his wife waited in the miserable border town. At last there came a message from Uncle Constantin:

"The Czarina sends word that the Czar will not employ coercive measures. Mathilde can live unmolested in Peterhof. You will be sent on a trip around the world."

The Czarevitch's trip around the world lasted almost a year, but nothing could make him forget Mathilde, who patiently awaited his return, and when he returned he went first to the country house of his wife in Peterhof. The grand passion was ever alive.

The Czar now deemed the time ripe for the consummation of his plans regarding the marriage of his son and heir.

Again the Czarevitch was summoned by his father and told he must marry Princess Alix. Again Nicholas refused. The political magnates of the empire strove to convince the obstinate Czarevitch that the interests of Russia and the dynasty made this marriage imperative. Even his mother and the Grand Duke Constantin changed their attitude and told him he had to obey. And the Czarevitch played his last card.

"But I can't," he said. "I can't marry, even if I would. I am already married."

The Curator of the Holy Synod of Russia, Pobiedonoscef, present at the momentous discussion, was ready with his answer:

"Your Imperial Highness is mistaken. The ceremony at Kalisch was a mockery. The Holy Synod has already invalidated that marriage."

The Czarevitch remained a week in seclusion. He told everything to Mathilde, who, contrary to his expectations, said to him, in her usual gentle manner, that he must do as he was commanded.

A few days later Nicholas sent word to the Czar that he was ready. The bride-elect was called to St. Petersburg, and, three weeks afterward—two months before the death of Czar Alexander III—the Czarevitch led Princess Alix to the altar.

Nicholas II, late Czar of Russia.

After Nicholas ascended the throne, Russia had two Czarinas—one sharing the Emperor's palace, the other dancing in the Imperial Ballet.

His marriage idyll with the beautiful Mathilde was ended in fact but not in spirit. In his heart Nicholas still regarded Mathilde as his rightful wife and constant love, and he continued to care for her more lavishly than ever. The premiere danseuse of the Imperial Ballet received a luxurious mansion in the Kammenoi Ostrow, the most fashionable section of the capital, in close proximity to the Winter Palace. She also had an estate in the Caucasus and a yearly income of $300,000.

When Alexander III died and Nicholas II ascended the throne, Russia had two Czarinas: an official one, sharing the Emperor's palace, and an unofficial one, living in a private mansion in the Kammenoi Ostrow. Subsequent events showed that the unofficial Czarina was no less powerful than the legitimate one.

THE mansion of Mme. Mathilde Ksheshinska was equally near to the Winter Palace and the residence of Grand Duke Sergius Michailovitch. Every afternoon a court carriage bearing the arms of the imperial dynasty drove up before the portal of Mathilde's residence, and the bearded doorman stood rigidly at attention while a slender young officer, wrapped in a fur-collared tunic, alighted and disappeared behind the heavy-curtained portico. There was no secrecy about these daily visits. The Russian capital's aristocratic society knew that the dancer's regular afternoon visitor was the Grand Duke Sergius, charged by the Czar with the duty of looking after the needs of Mme. Ksheshinska.

There were, however, two days of the week when the dancer's palace was closed to everybody except a mysterious personage who was never seen at the artist's regular tea parties. On such days the palace was surrounded by a cordon of plain-clothes police. The secret service men drew near the entrance when the carriage drove up, and the doorman bared his head at sight of the visitor—His Imperial Majesty the Czar.

Despite his marriage and the cares of empire after he had ascended the throne, Nicholas II could not forget the woman of his first grand passion. It was not youthful love which held the Czar. His passion changed to a deep and loyal friendship toward the mother of his two sons. Here, in the seclusion of the dancer's home, he could be a private gentleman, untroubled by affairs of state, unhampered by court etiquette, unharassed by political intrigue. Here was one woman who did not fear him as the all-powerful Czar, who never asked him for anything and with whom he could discuss the human events of everyday life the same as any one of his 160,000,000 subjects. Sometimes he would receive here a few intimate personal friends and play cards with them, rejoicing if he was able to win a few rubles. Being a "petit bourgeois" for a few hours a week was the greatest luxury of Czar Nicholas II, and he was grateful to the woman who made this possible for him.

BUT however carefully these weekly visits were guarded by the Czar, the secret leaked out, and court circles murmured about the underground government residing on the Kammenoi Ostrow. When a Minister was suddenly dismissed the courtiers saw the hand of Mathilde.

In 1910 Mathilde Ksheshinska was at the height of her power. Her position in the ballet was a dominating one; she held the title of "Soloist to His Majesty the Czar," and danced only when the Emperor commanded her to do so. Her fine art reached its highest peak and secured for her a unique professional position. Her appearances were gala events.

The regular visits of the Czar continued, and well-informed court circles gossiped discreetly about the possibility of proclaiming the elder son of Mme. Ksheshinska heir to the throne.

The secret government in the palace on the Kammenoi Ostrow was exerting an influence greater than ever—when suddenly a sensational event put an end to Mathilde's political power.

On a bleak December night secret service agents surrounded the mansion of Mathilde and demanded admission in the name of the Czar. Protest was in vain. The agents rushed in and searched every corner of the palace. They were looking for certain documents, and they must see Mme. Ksheshinska's jewelry. When the Grand Duke Sergius, who happened to be present, demanded an explanation, the officer showed him a search warrant and told him that Mme. Ksheshinska was charged with having accepted bribes from the French ammunition factory of Creuzot. The search, however, produced no tangible evidence against the dancer. An hour later the palace of Grand Duke Sergius was searched. Rumor spoke of deportation of the dancer to Siberia, and the arrest of the Grand Duke Sergius, but nothing of the kind happened. Grand Duke Sergius disappeared for a few months from the capital and his place in the household of Mme. Ksheshinska was taken by Grand Duke Andre Vladimirovitch.

Though the bribery accusation did not affect the dancer's position, and she continued to enjoy the favor of the Czar, she seems to have felt the

Lieutenant Uzal G. Ent.

Lieutenant Uzal G. Ent Tells What Happened After a Bolt of Lightning Struck Him and Killed Lieutenant Paul Evert During the National Elimination Race.

LIEUTENANT UZAL G. ENT here tells for the first time the story of his close escape from death in the National Balloon Elimination Race. His co-pilot, Lieutenant Paul Evert, was killed when the Army balloon entry was struck by lightning. In the air but two hours, Lieutenant Ent experienced every hazard of free ballooning before the craft came down in flames.

Lieutenant Ent entered the Army during the war as an enlisted man, and at its close won an appointment from the ranks to West Point, later entering the Air Corps. He completed a course at the Balloon and Airship School at Scott Field in 1926 and is now on duty temporarily at Kelly Field, San Antonio, Texas.

By UZAL G. ENT
Lieutenant, U. S. Army Air Corps

I HAD a hunch that something unusual was going to happen. This wasn't because going up in a balloon was new to me. Although I had never taken part in a race, I had been up numerous times in free balloons, and had flown in both heavier than air machines and in dirigibles more or less constantly since I entered the army as a private in the aviation section of the Signal Corps during the war.

On no other occasion did I have a feeling of apprehension like that which caused me, before going up in the elimination race at Pittsburg, to make my will and write to my parents letters for delivery to them in case of my death. Lieutenant Paul Evert, with whom I went up, had not, in so far as I know, any such feeling. Hunches count for much with flyers. Whether they should or not, I don't know. Anyway, I, who had a bad one as to myself, escaped unhurt, while Evert, who had none, was killed.

My free balloon training, aside from its military value, has been the most stimulating of my flying experiences. From the time I completed the pilot's course in ballooning, my greatest desire was to enter the national elimination balloon race and strive to win a place for the army. My wishes were gratified unexpectedly when Lieutenant Evert, who was assigned as pilot to one of the Air Corps balloons, asked me to accompany him as his aide. Lieutenant Evert had competed in last year's race and was highly pleased with the opportunity of again trying his luck.

WE ARRIVED at Pittsburg two days prior to the race. We were entertained gloriously by the committee in charge of arrangements.

When we got out of bed on the day of the race, rain was falling and the sky was overcast. But by the time of our arrival at Bettis Field, the take-off place, the sky was clearing and everybody was in good spirits.

Evert and I were flying U. S. Army Balloon No. 3 and had drawn the number three position in the take-off. This was almost directly in the center of the field. We took this as a good omen, so our enthusiasm rose as our bag was laid out and inflated. Evert had already set up in the basket his radio set and had rigged it with a double antennae for direction finding and to enable him to pick up both long and short wave-length stations. It was by means of the receiving set that we hoped to be able to navigate at night or in fog. The set worked perfectly and Evert was highly elated over its efficiency. He was to listen in while I handled the balloon.

We checked on the direction of the wind and found it to be slightly south of west, which should have taken us, had it continued so, into Northern New York, Maine or Canada.

The monotony of the morning was broken, and that time heaviness which precedes a scheduled adventure was lightened, by the appearance over the field of the dirigible Los Angeles and the superb flying of three airplane pilots from the Army First Pursuit Group.

There were 14 balloons, with two men to go up in each of them. Several of the men going up were old-timers in free ballooning and had taken part in numerous races. We younger chaps were much impressed by the matter-of-fact way the experienced racers went about the work of preparation. None of us had a great deal to do during the morning and early afternoon. Information was exchanged freely and advice given.

After breakfast, Evert and I ate nothing except a couple of sandwiches that were washed down with soda water. We looked longingly at the bountiful lunches sent out to the field by a Pittsburg hotel, but agreed to wait and have a combined luncheon and dinner in the air.

THE last-minute weather dope was given out at 4:30, a half-hour before the time for the take-offs. Scattered thunderstorms were forecast. This wasn't so good, for a free balloon collects static electricity very readily. But a good balloonist always expects to miss any storms that may be around.

The first balloon took off at exactly 5 p. m. It was piloted by William C. Naylor, chief engineer of the Stinson Aircraft Corporation and an experienced balloonist. Others were released at five-minute intervals. Our wait of 10 minutes after the first one took off seemed very long. I had the same feeling as when waiting for the first whistle at a football game. Finally the starter came. A large crowd had collected. We had to clear its heads, so at the last moment 50 pounds of our ballast had to be thrown off. Thus lightened, we rose a little faster than we had expected to. The altitude gauge showed 500 feet quickly, then 1000, and then 1500, and within a few moments after leaving the ground, 2100 feet, when we reached equilibrium.

The balloon then took a general easterly direction at a speed of about 10 miles an hour. The other balloons were north of us and at lower altitudes. We decided to stay up high and have our evening meal there at once. The sun, which had been shining, dropped behind a cloud, with a cooling effect that caused the balloon to settle. The air was fine. We had been putting the basket in order and making ready to hook up the radio set. We threw over some ballast and checked our descent at 300 feet. The wind was stronger here than higher up and we began to gain on the leaders. People were running out of houses and waving and shouting greetings to us. We could hear them plainly.

But the balloon wasn't satisfied at the 300-foot level. It oscillated up and down, trying to select its own altitude. We didn't care how high we went, but we didn't want to go down. We kept up easily, so easily that at this point we finished our dinner. Everything seemed fine. Then a distant roar chilled our blood. It was thunder, the herald of a storm, the worst hazard for a free balloon.

"I guess we are in for it," said Evert. "Just the same thing we had last year." But he had ridden through last year's storm to a happy ending, so we still counted on reaching a trout stream, far away.

THE bag began to rise rapidly, and shot up at a rate of 500 feet a minute to an altitude of 2000 feet. There the storm was on for fair. It was raining; otherwise a deadly stillness surrounded us. We had a creepy feeling, such as you have when on the brink of a fearful uncertainty. Then we began to rise again, and faster, shooting up at the rate of over 1500 feet a minute, and going faster as we rose. There was a vivid flash of lightning and the clouds all about us glowed like a tropical sky at sunset. It wasn't beautiful, it was terrible. We were valving gas to no avail. The bag came to a halt at 6000 feet and immediately began to drop almost as fast as it had risen. All was confusion. We regained equilibrium at 1000 feet, momentarily out of the clouds.

"My God! Look there!" Evert exclaimed. I looked in time to see a balloon falling out of the clouds at a rocket-like speed. It was strung out in the form of a colossal necktie. I saw it disappear behind a hill.

"I'll bet both of those poor fellows are done for," Evert remarked. One of them, Ward T. Van Orman, escaped, but suffered a broken leg. Walter W. Morton, the aide, was killed, it is believed, by a lightning bolt that exploded the balloon. His head was crushed in the crash. Van Orman remembered nothing from the time of the explosion in the air until he became conscious, alone and dazed, in the wreck on the ground.

THINGS weren't very satisfactory with Evert and me at 1000 feet, so we decided to get near the ground and cut loose our drag rope, which, acting as an automatic ballast, would keep us in touch with terra firma. Drag-roping is a fine part of free ballooning, and when conditions are good it yields a lot of fun. But when the rope is wet, as ours was, it is dangerous frolicking, especially when carried on in an industrial area like that around Pittsburg. For, if high-tension wires be in its path, a wet drag rope may become the conductor of an electrical charge fatal to the balloon and all in it. But we descended and released the rope. We could see three other balloons scattered out within a mile of us. All were bouncing along close to the earth, as we began to do. One, probably Captain Honeywell's, landed. The Captain was too old at the game to take further chances with the weather conditions. Evert and I still had hopes of making a success of the flight—and of reaching a glamorous trout stream far away.

Shortly after we dropped the drag rope, our basket hit the ground and both the loop and antennae of our radio set were knocked off. This put the set, which we had not used at all, out of business. On the next dip downward we threw the set overboard. Hence its only service was to lighten the balloon and enable us to clear a dead tree that might have punctured the bag. With a 25-to-30-mile wind blowing around us, this was real free ballooning. We were bumping into nearly everything along the countryside, but, thanks to a good, stout bag, the collisions scarcely jarred us. Up we went again, and then began to settle on a farmhouse. But we righted ourselves sufficiently to skim the roof, then dropped again and just missed the top of a Ford car.

THE sport was so exciting that we had forgotten the storm. But we remembered that there was one when we saw a parachute emerge from the clouds above us. The figure of a man dangled from the 'chute. He was yelling at the top of his voice and kicking his feet wildly, in apparent joy over being alive. This was Carl K. Wollam, pilot of the City of Cleveland balloon and winner of the national balloon race of 1924. His capers in falling were genuinely heroic, being for the purpose of calling the attention of folk on the ground to his aide, who was falling with their shattered balloon. The bag had exploded when they were 7500 feet in the air. We saw the wrecked balloon, with the aide's body hanging over the side of the basket, come to the ground in a heap. Wollam had tried to lift him out and let his 'chute take him down. Luckily there hadn't been time enough, for the risk would have been enormous. The aide, John F. Cooper, came down unconscious with the collapsed balloon, which happened to act like a parachute, and escaped all injury except severe burns. We called to a farmer to look after the fallen men and went on our way.

Jumping over a hill we saw a small town ahead of us. A high-tension electric line jumped ab if by magic across our path. Over went a lot of ballast, but not soon enough to keep our drag rope from coming in contact with the wires. It looked as if we were on the verge of electrocution. There was a flash, like a miniature bolt of lightning, and the rope was freed. It had wrapped itself around and short-circuited two highly-charged wires. As I said, luck counts for a lot in free ballooning.

Then the rope wrapped its tail around a big telephone cable and our balloon suddenly changed from the free to the controlled kind. We threw out ballast in the hope of giving the bag lift enough to jerk us loose, but the rope wouldn't unwrap itself or break in two. We tried to pull it loose with our hands, but couldn't. People were congregating on the ground. We appealed to them for help, and, under Evert's directions from above, they brought a ladder and a man climbed up to the cable and cut us loose.

The sudden release caused us to shoot up rapidly. Evert began to valve gas quickly, hoping to get close to the earth. We were at about 1200 feet altitude before the ascent was checked.

AS THE balloon steadied there was a deafening roar, like that of an explosion. Both of us went over, I on top of Evert, onto the bottom of the basket. My left leg and right arm were numb, as if asleep. But I was able to get to my feet quickly. Evert didn't rise. I shook him and slapped his face, but there was no response. I felt his pulse. Yes, I thought, he is alive. How could it kill him and not me? The balloon was burning at the top. I could smell the smoke and could hear the sounds of commotion on the ground. The balloon was settling. It was due to explode. We must get out of here right now, I said to myself, but how? We both had on seat type parachutes, but would Evert's 'chute open if I ripped it from the basket as I threw him overboard? No. I am going to jump, said I to myself. Then, No, I had better not. When is that damned thing going to explode? We were falling faster. God, why doesn't it explode and get it over with? Something—maybe the "third pilot" who helps balloonists when in difficulties—warned me against using any of the measures of control that were available. If I had valved, an immediate explosion probably would have been the result. If I had cut loose the appendix (the tube extending from the gas bag to the basket), descent would have been impeded. There came over me a feeling of confidence. I'll get down yet, said I to myself, but where will I hit? I glanced at the rate-of-climb indicator and saw that we were falling 700 feet a minute. Pretty fast, but not bad. There's a stream. Can I make it? It will put out the fire and maybe prevent that explosion. Houses loomed in front of me. Can't land there. Everything I could reach went overboard. It looked as if we would make it.

I BELIEVE that at about that point the top of the bag burned out, for a second later I realized that we were on the ground on the bank of the stream. Luckily, the basket and bag landed separately. I crawled out, unhurt, and bystanders helped me get Evert's body out of the bag quickly. We tried artificial respiration while a doctor was coming. After an examination, Dr. H. A. McMurray of Youngwood, Pennsylvania, pronounced Evert dead. The pilot evidently was killed instantly by the electrical charge that had knocked both of us down and set the bag on fire. A burned spot on his left shoulder showed where the charge had entered his body.

The Youngwood Fire Department put out the fire and saved remnants of the balloon. In the home of Dr. McMurray I was able to collect my scattered thoughts—and, on doing so, my first emotion was one of gratitude to the "third pilot," protector of balloonists, for saving my life. Lieutenant Evert was much the better balloonist: the bag should have exploded; yet here was I alive and uninjured.

We were in the air about two hours, and in that time we had, in some form, all the numerous, exciting and even puzzling experiences that a free balloonist may encounter—including, for me, unaccountably good luck.

The BITTER WAR of YOUTH against YOUTH

HOLLYWOOD, California.

LONG has it been the custom, whenever some particularly luminous baseball star was released to the minors because he was through at the age of 33, for the sporting writers to sound the sad knell of his fate. "In other fields of endeavor," write the baseball reporters, "he would be at his best at his age. But in baseball 33 is the age of a veteran and some sandlot kid of 24 takes his place. Surely baseball fame is fleeting."

Well, it is. Look around and you'll find most of the chief executives and big successes are 50 or thereabouts. Bernard Shaw, around 70, seems to have no difficulty keeping nicely in advance of the rest of the world's playwrights. Mrs. Fiske, no girl herself, is still a pretty good actress, and Mussolini, whether you like him or not, is long past the callow years.

But the baseball writers, between their sobs over the latest fallen hero, may now give pause. They may turn their tearful eyes out Hollywood way, and here will they see such sights as never before met their tender gaze. For young women, just swinging into the full bloom of their beauty, young women only beginning to tread the road of their maturity, girls of 24 and 25 and sometimes 23, whose names once brought the movie fans flooding to see them, whose names once lighted up the evening sky in hundreds of watts of electric lights, girls whose acting is better than it was five years ago and better than that of others five years their juniors, are passing out of the movie picture because they are—believe it or not—"OLD-TIMERS."

GIRLS of 24 and 25, and sometimes 23, mind you, done and down and out. Yielding their places to children of 17 and 18. Not yielding wilfully, nor because these newer faces are more beautiful or because their owners are as able, but yielding because the all-too-fickle public demands that every few years it have new faces, albeit not better ones. And if you don't believe it, ask yourself what has become of Elaine Hammerstein—or Constance Binney—or Mary Miles Minter. And none of them have retired because they're grandmothers.

Youth, yea, almost childishness, is the cry here in Hollywood today. Twenty or 21, but preferably in their 'teens. No, 17 isn't too young, 17 is fine, great, excellent. And the word passes around among the studios not even to consider signing anyone of 25 or more, because, you see, any girl getting into the movies at 25 or more hasn't a chance. She's too old and they—not only the producers, but Mr. and Mrs. Public, who set the taste—want them young.

The experts will tell you the average life of stardom for the women of the movies is five years. And the experts, when they say this, are not being conservative. For not only the variety of new faces is desired, there's the changing fashion in types. A few years ago it was the sweet, innocent type. Today the public wants "It" and Clara Bow. Can you, if you are hard put to it, visualize Mae Marsh? Gladys Hulette or Vivian Martin, Grace Darmond, Mabel Trunnelle, June Caprice, Wanda Hawley, Beverly Bayne? Agnes Ayres, Constance Bennett, Marjorie Daw, Doris May? Helene Chadwick or Ann Forrest, Justine Johnstone or Nita Naldi? Going, going, gone.

And Ethel Barrymore, on the legitimate stage, who was a star years before these others, is still a star on the same legitimate stage, an actress of high repute who finds no difficulty in finding roles to fit her years, whose artistry is not one whit hampered by the passing twelvemonths, whose acclaim is as great, whose public is as large as ever it was, and who, we'll wager, draws quite as big a pay envelope as ever she did.

Ethel Barrymore and Mrs. Fiske are as desirable as ever they were on Broadway, but are Florence Lawrence and Lillian Walker, Ruth Roland and Clara Kimball Young still that desirable around Hollywood? Hardly. And the pretty young girls who two years ago—or a year ago—won the stout applause of the men and the gentle tears of the ladies, are retreating along the Hollywood front before the smiles and gestures of Fay Wray and Esther Ralston, Mary Brian and Ruth Taylor, Sue Carol and Loretta Young, a child and nothing more, Sally Eilers, all of 20, and Molly O'Day, 18.

You will say, of course, how about Mary Pickford, how about Betty Compson, or Patsy Ruth Miller, Alice Joyce, Bebe Daniels, a greater attraction than ever? What of Marion Davies, Norma Talmadge, Gloria Swanson? Aren't Mary Pickford and Gloria Swanson and Bebe Daniels and Marion Davies still stars of first magnitude? And aren't the others aforementioned still in the limelight? Yes, verily, so they are. But compare those few to the great numbers who have flashed brilliantly for a passing moment, only to flicker out and fall away. And Miss Pickford, etc., compared to those who have gone by, are as the drop of water to the sea. This continual shifting of stars, this one-day-you're-it business and the next-day-you're-not, has had its effect on Hollywood and the entire picture colony. To human nature contemporary fame always is a bitter-sweet. The shouting, the noise, the acclaim has its shadowy side. And that side of it has been accentuated and exaggerated at Hollywood in a manner unusual. For the star of today, despite all the hymns of praise sung about her by paid publicity men, by movie magazines, despite all the glare of her name in lights, the approval of her public, the nice words of her employers and her friends, there always hangs over her pretty head the sword of passing days. Each hour that passes brings her nearer to the end, and she knows it. As minute succeeds minute, the cord that holds the weapon grows just that much weaker, far off on her sunny horizon she always sees the constantly enlarging cloud. With the increasing craze for younger faces, newer faces, the feminine movie star's transitory triumph has become all the shorter. Suddenly, unexpectedly, her fan mail begins to fall off, reports come from the movie theater managers of the country that Miss So-and-So is not bringing down the house as was her wont. Presently a new face comes into her studio and, as the day approaches when her contract is due to end, nothing is said about its renewal by her producer. Her last day arrives, but with it there comes no contract. And she makes her way from one studio to another and never a new place is offered her. It is the end. Her career was brilliant, happy, self-satisfying. But now it is over, oh, so utterly over.

She returns to her home, an expensive Hollywood home. She may look into her mirror. She will find her loveliness unaltered, her figure unimpaired. Has she lost charm? No, if anything, she has gained it, for the years have ripened her, brought some understanding to her eyes, taught her, in some fashion, an awareness of things. And her acting, she knows, is better, so much better than ever it was before. And, going to her clippings, she looks them over one by one and sees that such-and-such a reviewer, such a fellow as is not too popular in the minds of Hollywood, for he is known as an unusually severe one, declares that in her last picture she pleased him for the first time, that at last—and, he adds, much to his amazement—she has caught some of the art of acting.

And going over other clips, and still others, she finds the same new note in the reviews of the few other "severe critics." For the first time she pays little attention to the always sweet reviewers; from the start they have said she was good and she has always believed them—until now. But now she wants to know what the best say of her. And they say—they say at last she shows indications of becoming an actress—these same stern fellows of the screen who have been so unmercifully flaying the work of this 18-year-old who came into her studio, the new star, the one who pushed her out. And this old-timer of 24, whose grandeur has fallen from off her shoulders, wonders what she can do about it. And she may cease her conjecturing, because for her there is no appeal.

So beneath all this Hollywood gayety and nonchalance you hear about there is an underlying layer of fear, suspicion, anxiety. Every girl who gets an extra bit on a Hollywood lot is seen through a particularly greenish eye, every child of 17 who appears, once in the reel, though she may but carry in a card to announce that a gentleman is calling—her appearance may not last more than 100 feet—is considered a potential star by every established star.

For, in the ceaseless tremor that shakes beneath Hollywood's professed self-assurance, any girl may soon be a contender. Fear such as this takes the edge off glory, the edge off happiness. There is always the secret thought, "Who is going to be the next to slip?"

AND when their days are over and they are convinced of it, the most of them pack up their baggage and make a hasty retreat from Hollywood. It hurts too much, and the pain is less keen in spots far removed from the haunts of their pristine fame. Should they stay, they are soon forgotten, they pass down the streets unknown, the same young women who two or three years before could not go out in public without becoming the target for countless eyes.

But, you say, a few, a very few, keep their places. Mary Pickford, Betty Compson, Bebe Daniels. Why? Well, perhaps because they have personality to a degree that holds the public they won years ago. Perhaps because some indefinable something has kept this little group in favor despite the advancing legions of youth.

As for the stars of another day, what do they do now? Some, of course, are married and have left professional life entirely. Some have gone into business—Ruth Roland, for instance, who is selling real estate. She has made more money out of that than she ever did in the movies. And Kathleen Clifford, still in the films, after a fashion, has a chain of florist shops.

Some stars of today, knowing their Hollywood, are preparing for that finis to their careers which always may be expected. Esther Ralston has a gold mine; Bebe Daniels an apartment house, and James Hall—the men last longer, they usually can play character roles when their great days are past—he, too, is in business. Mr. James Hall is the impresario of a string of doughnut shops.

LONDON.

A PRETTY girl, a not too oldish man, a park bench and a spring night—out of that combination has grown a national scandal with loud echoes in the halls of Parliament and the possibility of the resignation of Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the Home Secretary; Sir William Heywood, Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, and a number of underlings.

The whole situation goes to prove the irrefutable truth of those lines from the "Pirates of Penzance": 'When constabulary duty's to be done, a policeman's lot is not a happy one."

The man in the case is Sir Leo Chiozza Money, noted economist, and the girl is Miss Irene Savidge, the daughter of a friend and associate of Sir Leo.

Sir Leo, who was at one time secretary to Lloyd George, was sitting with Miss Savidge on a bench in Hyde Park. They were discussing some economic question, they say now, when, without giving any intimation of their approach, two policemen came up and placed them under arrest. Of course, later, at the inquiry into the methods employed by the police, Miss Savidge did admit that there was a kiss—just one kiss. But it was a peck, a mere sign and symbol of affection, and not a passionate kiss, she said.

The officers were rather rough in the manner in which they carried out the arrest and they dragged Sir Leo and Miss Savidge off to jail as though they had been a pair of common criminals. They were held at the police station for an hour or more while Sir Leo telephoned about for bail and then, grudgingly, they were given their freedom. So summary was the arrest, Sir Leo says, that he was not even permitted to get in touch with a witness to it—the spectator who subsequently became the mysterious "man with the umbrella."

THE police give a slightly different version of the arrest. They say Sir Leo cried out indignantly: "I am not the usual riffraff. I am a man of substance. For God's sake let me go." Later Sir Leo got in touch with the Home Secretary, who expedited his release on bail.

In police court on the following day they were charged with "behaving in a manner reasonably likely to offend against public decency in Hyde Park." Sir Henry Curtis Bennett, one of the most eminent of British lawyers, appeared to defend Miss Savidge, who is 22 and engaged to be married, and Sir Leo, who is 57 and married. There were delays and the case was put over for a time.

When it was finally heard, Sir Leo and Miss Savidge appeared to enter indignant denials to the charge. Even before Miss Savidge had a chance to complete her testimony, however, the Magistrate of the Marlborough Police Court dismissed the case and assessed costs of $50 against the police.

"I think," he said, "the case should never have been brought and a great deal of pain would have been spared the defendants."

If they had been two ordinary people, the whole affair would certainly have been dropped with this. No more would have been heard of it and nature lovers would have continued to take their chances with the police.

But Sir Leo is a man of considerable influence. He has powerful friends in Parliament, and they set out to create a whirl of indignation. There were speeches in Commons denouncing the police for the way in which they had treated Sir Leo and Miss Savidge. Several newspapers recorded a high pitch of indignation, also.

It looked bad for the police. Speakers in Parliament declared that there was absolutely no substantiation for the charge brought against Sir Leo nor any reason for the arrest. The storm grew in proportions, but even then it might have blown over without any too serious consequences or without jeopardizing the standing of any high official.

AT THIS point, however, a determined move was begun to make the charge stand up and to develop evidence that would make the arrest seem reasonable—with the result that what was a storm of indignation has now become a cloudburst.

Miss Savidge was again taken into custody—virtually kidnaped by the police, friends of Sir Leo charge. She was questioned for five hours at Scotland Yard, and warned, she charges, to say nothing about the episode. Released again, she collapsed, and on recovery, told her story of what happened during those five hours.

Miss Savidge charges that during that time she was forced to submit to the most humiliating third-degree methods at the hands of detectives. She says she was taken from the factory where she is employed and was not even allowed to communicate with her mother to inform her of her whereabouts. She was not allowed to go to her home to change her coat, even though the car in which she was being taken to Scotland Yard passed within a quarter-mile of her residence. No woman police officer was present during the five-hour examination.

"Don't tell lies to us," Miss Savidge was told. "We know everything. If you tell lies both you and Sir Leo will suffer."

A suggestion was made to her that she was not "officially" engaged to be married. She replied with the name and address of the young man. The inspector who was cross-examining her retorted that he knew the young man and the address.

She was asked if she had been properly introduced to Sir Leo, and she replied that she had, by a girl in Albemarle street. She was asked what presents she had received from Sir Leo and replied that she had once received a pair of gloves at Christmas.

Questions were asked about her wardrobe and her income. She was cross-examined about her behavior in the moving-picture house with Sir Leo and as to what happened afterward in the park. Finally, she said in a sworn statement, she grew so tired that she allowed the officers to write down whatever they wanted to.

During the course of the quizzing tea was brought in. There was only one spoon. The officers remarked that one spoon would do for them all, and one said: "Irene will spoon with me."

As questions went on half-hour after half-hour, she was asked if she had taken wine on the night of the Hyde Park incident, and if she were not a little dazed. She denied it. She was then asked to stand up and show the length of her dress. Her statement relates:

"I was requested to give full particulars of the clothes I was wearing and what Sir Leo was wearing. They first requested me to stand up so that they could see the length of my clothing. They inquired whether I wore a petticoat and what the color was. They made a statement that it was a very short petticoat I was wearing."

Chief Inspector Collins, against whom the charges of using third-degree methods are being brought, then remarked, she says: "There are several things one could do without sinning. Don't be afraid to tell us. We are really looking after you."

The exterior of Scotland Yard.

Sir William Heywood, Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police.

Inspector Collins next asked her, Miss Savidge charges, to give a demonstration of what happened in Hyde Park.

"We were young once," she quoted the officer as saying. "We had a good time ourselves. Remember, we are only making these inquiries for the sake of the police officers whose conduct is being investigated."

A PRACTICAL demonstration followed, according to Miss Savidge. "He may have put his hand on your knee," Inspector Collins said, and with this he placed his hand on Miss Savidge's knee. Shortly after this she was released, reaching home about 8 o'clock. She then collapsed.

The sworn affidavit setting all these things forth was presented on the floor of the House of Commons with most dramatic effect. Tom Johnston, Socialist leader, read from the statement in the course of an impassioned speech.

"It is our duty to offer resolute opposition," he said, "to anything of the nature of a cheka, a Turkish system, star chamber methods, or what in the United States is called the 'third degree.'"

He then told the details of Miss Savidge's five-hour ordeal. "Every member who has any respect for civil liberty," he concluded, "and any respect for our ordinary judicial system, must unite with us tonight in making such a demonstration against these methods that these methods will never again be attempted in this country."

A great burst of cheering followed as he sat down, coming not only from the Laborites and Liberals but the Conservatives as well. Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the Home Secretary, and therefore responsible for the behavior of the police, arose to reply. He was obviously greatly agitated. He stated that Chief Inspector Collins and the other officers involved in the examination denied in the strongest terms the charges Miss Savidge had made.

"It is a quite definite challenge to the truth between the two sides," he said. "It is a very serious position indeed. I have no hesitation in saying that no case has given me as Home Secretary such grave anxiety as this case—and still more in consequence of what Mr. Johnston has just stated.

"If there is any truth in these allegations," he added, leaning over with a pallid face to Mr. Johnston, "they are of a most damning character."

Lengthy debate followed and the question of whether or not the two policemen who made the original arrest had perjured themselves at the police court trial was raised. Finally the Home Secretary agreed, when a unanimous consent of the House was obtained, to an impartial inquiry into the whole case by three Judges.

Scenes nearly as stormy arose when the question came up several days later of the Judges to be named on the commission of inquiry. Lady Astor, Miss Wilkinson and a half-dozen other members insisted that at least one woman should be appointed to the commission.

Miss Wilkinson protested angrily at the shouts of "Order" and the derision which greeted this suggestion. "Where a woman's good name is concerned," she shouted, "where she has been dragged through the filth of publicity as this unfortunate woman has been, many of us feel that there should be a woman on the tribunal."

"We could find women who could recommend themselves to the House just as much as those very splendid men who have been proposed," Lady Astor said.

FINALLY, however, the women members gave way and three men were named: J. J. Withers, a member of Parliament; Sir J. Eldon Bankes and H. B. Lees Smith, a member of Parliament. These three men all of them distinguished in their respective fields, are now vigorously prosecuting the inquiry.

Sir Leo, meanwhile, has not been inactive. He has located the "man with the umbrella," who is Leslie William Hastings. Hastings has made an extensive statement on the circumstances surrounding the arrest which has not yet been made public.

Sir Leo and Miss Savidge are confident of exoneration. Miss Savidge's fiance has remained loyal to her through the ordeal, and so has Sir Leo's wife. The police are less confident. A number of official heads are likely to be lopped off if the commission of inquiry finds the arrest was unjustified. At least for the time being there is a marked laxity in the enforcement of the park regulations and the Hyde Park benches have never been so popular

WASHINGTON.

NOW that they are growing oysters on trees, producers along the Atlantic coast are able at last to smile at their old fears of shortages and crop failures. They can even laugh right out, just as the uninitiated does when he first hears about growing oysters on trees. But growing them on trees is not the funny part of it. The funny part of it really is that somebody didn't think of it before. It's quite simple, much more simple, in fact, than growing apples. They don't even require oyster trees. Birch trees answer the purpose very well. And no tedious grafting process is necessary, either. All they have to do is put the trees where the oysters can get to them and the bi-valves climb right on and stick there.

It all sounds about as phenomenal as singing cows and milk-producing birds, but it isn't phenomenal at all. After a bit of careful research the United States Bureau of Fisheries hit upon the quaint scheme and made it work. Now virtually all the oyster growers from New England to the Gulf are adopting it and bumper crops are in sight, much more than enough, in fact, to meet the American consumption of 3,000,000,000 oysters yearly. An enormous increase in production is assured because use of the birch trees saves millions and millions of baby oysters from suffocation and starvation and enables them to grow up into full-sized adults. Here is how the plan works.

In their natural state on the bottom of shallow ocean inlets, newly hatched shellfish have a hard time to find places where they may enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The need for housing facilities is tremendous because of the vast quantities of eggs produced by a single parent. The season's output from one egg-layer will run from 16,000,000 to 60,000,000. That means that three or four average oysters will lay an egg for each man, woman and child in the United States. If they all hatched and the young grew to maturity it would mean that the entire Atlantic Ocean would be filled up with oysters inside of a single year. But that doesn't happen.

In the first place, only a very small percentage of the eggs are fertilized, because fertilization does not take place until the eggs, floating in the water, come in contact with the male germ cells, also floating. Fertilization, therefore, is more or less an accidental process. In the second place, enormous quantities of the eggs are devoured by fish. One good-sized hungry game fish can swallow enough of them at one meal to ruin a season's catch of oysters. After being fertilized, the eggs develop and hatch within 24 hours. Hatching, however, does not mean the struggle is over. The fight is merely begun. Of course, despite the hazards of accidental fertilization and ravaging fish, millions of the eggs are hatched, so many, indeed, that overcrowding results and starvation or suffocation become greater dangers than hungry fish. In northern waters it requires about three years for an oyster to grow to maturity and in that time almost anything can happen. Comparatively few ever reach maturity.

THE heavy death rate among baby oysters comes from the helplessness of the little creatures in their efforts to find suitable places in which to park themselves for future growth. For two or three weeks the tiny "spats," as they are called, float and swim with the tide or current, and then attach themselves to some object which offers a surface that is clean, smooth and hard. When once attached, or "set," the young oyster remains stationary. There is no more roving. The place in which it rests becomes its permanent home.

It is in finding a suitable resting place that the young bivalve encounters its most serious problem. There are always more new oyster homeseekers than there are homes. All the available shells, rocks and pier supports are quickly covered. Most of the youngsters find nothing to which they can cling and these luckless floaters fall easy prey to fish and other natural enemies which maintain constant lookout for such helplessness.

The problem then does not end even when a permanent home has been established. More often than not the home is too crowded for practical purposes. Over-population forces the young oysters into a struggle for bare existence, with early death the lot of the vast majority.

A FAVORITE parking space is the smooth surface of a shell, the remains of some luckless predecessor who failed to survive the struggle. Or it may be a shell thrown into the water by human hands. On this limited area the tiny spats will gather in a colony numbering several thousand. At the time of setting, the creatures are so small that there is breathing space for all of them. With continued growth, however, there comes extreme crowding, and the stronger individuals cause the death of the weaker through suffocation and starvation. The food problem also is serious. An oyster, scientists have learned, drinks about 60 quarts of water daily, extracting or straining its sustenance from this. Unless there is constant movement of new water into the region, a thickly-populated colony will soon strain all the organic particles out of the water around it. Anyway, from one cause or another, the colony on the shell dwindles until at the end of the year there may be no more than a dozen survivors out of the thousands which chose the place as their home.

Even a dozen are too many for the space they occupy. Naturally, a single half-shell is not big enough for the full development of a dozen healthy, grown-up oysters. The result is that even though they may survive the crowding process, they are distorted in shape and unattractive. At the end of the first year the crowding is increased by the addition of fresh sets from the new hatching. And so the process goes on, with death for the younger ones and under-development and distortion for the others.

To reduce this tremendous death rate, science has long tried to provide artificial help by supplying additional housing space for the baby oysters. Various devices have been tried. One of the long-favored methods was that of sinking half-sections of glazed drainage pipes. These offer the smooth, hard surface required, but their use never became popular. Scientific workers of the Bureau of Fisheries kept experimenting with other devices. The result of these experiments was the scheme of using birch trees.

It was Herbert Prytherch of the Bureau who hit upon the idea and worked it out. His demonstrations showed the ideal "collector" or roosting place had at last been discovered. Now the birch tree method is in wide use.

Birch trees were chosen because of the smooth hard surface of their branches and the wood's resistance to water. The trees are cut, loaded on scows and hauled to the spawning grounds. There they are placed, branches and all, in the water so they will still be submerged when the tide is at its lowest ebb.

TO ASSURE steadiness of position and to keep the sunken forest from floating away, the trees are anchored to heavy weights. The myriads of spats, searching for a roosting place, find them and take to them as readily as birds take to trees on land. They attach themselves to trunk and branches by the millions. Parking space is so abundant that if too many get on one branch and get crowded off, it is no great matter because they can easily find another branch. A single branch accommodates thousands of the young oysters and provides them with a ready-made efficiency apartment house permitting liberal room for growth.

An important factor in the success of the "oyster trees" is the facility with which the brush may be brought to the surface and scraped. Brush is far easier to handle than unwieldy sections of drain pipe. This ease of harvesting is of much importance because of the practice of transplanting which prevails among the growers who use birches. When the young oysters have attained the stage at which their future seems assured, the men in charge of the beds raise the trees to the surface and scrape off the "crop." The oysters are then placed in prepared beds near at hand, where they may have plenty of room in which to grow into well-shaped adults and where they may be conveniently harvested.

Since the Government workers have pointed the way, the commercial growers have quickly fallen in line and each year will see increasing numbers of sunken forests in use in the oyster industry.

Under natural conditions there are many curious under-water formations as a result of the oyster's habit of sticking to one home. When the setting takes place on a discarded shell, for instance, the crowding is more than likely to cause the shell to sink into the mud at the bottom, smothering the entire colony. Other shells follow the first one and the accumulation eventually forms a reef. This is small at first, but gradually develops until it shows above the surface at low tide.

The reef sometimes grows into an island of considerable size, formed entirely of the shells and their smothered spats. Through the action of the waves and tide the structure collects shells, mud, sand and debris until its summit rises to a point several feet higher than the level of the highest tide. Islands of this character are common along the South Atlantic and Gulf coasts. In the course of time many of them become covered with grass and vegetation which obscures their true origin and character. The shell islands usually are surrounded by outer layers of live oysters.

The oyster industry is the most extensive and profitable fishing activity in the United States. The production of a single year amounts to something like 30,000,000 bushels, which means enough to supply 10 quarts of oysters for every person in the country. Until 40 years ago the principal oyster harvest came from natural beds, which covered such vast areas that they were regarded as inexhaustible. Over-fishing, however, has rapidly depleted these natural beds. Those of Massachusetts are practically exhausted while those of Connecticut show but two areas of present commercial importance.

The remedy for this condition is found in beds planted artificially and cared for. The nation can no longer depend upon "wild" oysters for its supply any more than it can depend upon wild game for its meat supply. The oysters must be raised and given the same attention that is given to other food animals. And in this undertaking the introduction of the "oyster tree" is of vast and far-reaching importance.

UNDER the present artificial methods of production, beds may be started by transplanting wherever suitable ocean bottom may be found. The most suitable bottom is a firm mud or a firm substratum with a thin surface of soft mud. Sometimes a stable sandy bottom is used with success. Rocky bottom is not so good, for usually it is deficient in food.

Oysters live from above low water mark to a depth of nearly 100 feet and in a range of temperature which extends from the freezing point to 90 degrees. They flourish best in temperatures ranging from 68 to 80 degrees. The best and most productive beds are commonly in strong tidal currents, which bring in new food supplies and keep the shells clean. The oyster's food consists mainly of minute plant and animal organisms strained from the water.

The greatest oyster production at present is from the natural beds in Chesapeake Bay, and Baltimore is the most extensive market. Most of the production from New England, New York and the outer coast of New Jersey, however, is from planted beds where the "oyster tree" is now playing such an important part.

me attention that is given to other animals. And in this undertakthe introduction of the "oyster e" is of vast and far-reaching im-
tance.

UNDER the present artificial methods of production, beds may be started by transplanting erever suitable ocean bottom may found. The most suitable bottom a firm mud or a firm substratum th a thin surface of soft mud. Some-nes a stable sandy bottom is used th success. Rocky bottom is not so od, for usually it is deficient in food. Oysters live from above low water ark to a depth of nearly 100 feet d in a range of temperature which tends from the freezing point to 90 grees. They flourish best in temper-ures ranging from 68 to 80 degrees. e best and most productive beds are mmonly in strong tidal currents. hich bring in new food supplies and ep the shells clean. The oyster's od consists mainly of minute plant d animal organisms strained from e water.

The greatest oyster production at esent is from the natural beds in esapeake Bay, and Baltimore is the st extensive market. Most of the oduction from New England, New rk and the outer coast of New rsey, however, is from planted beds here the "oyster trée" is now play-g such an important part.

TALES of REAL DOGS

Malakoff, the Newfoundland Who Saved His Own Life.

HIS name was Malakoff. He belonged to one Cretin, a small jeweler who lived in the "Temple" neighborhood of Paris, in the seventh decade of the nineteenth century. Cretin had fought in the Crimean War and had been wounded in the successful charge of the French infantry upon the fortified post of Malakoff, in September, 1855, during the siege of Sebastopol.

When the French Government considered that charge important enough, historically, to name a Parisian boulevard in its honor, Cretin decided the name was good enough for his clumsy black Newfoundland puppy. Accordingly, the black dog was named Malakoff. His name was destined to spread within a few years throughout all Paris.

Cretin loved the huge Newfoundland. As it was long before the days of motor cars and as Malakoff was agile enough to keep from under the wheels of horse-drawn cabs and drays, the dog was allowed to wander at will through the streets near his master's shop.

In my own youth, in America, dogs enjoyed a safety which few of them abused, when wandering at large. Now, the dog in America, which dares to cross a street or road, does so at imminent risk of his life. The motor car has not only placed extravagance and many forms of vice within the reach of all, but it has proved to be a wholesale assassin of friendly and harmless dogs.

In Great Britain it is different. There you will see fully 40 dogs at large where here you see one. I have motored the length and breadth of Great Britain several times, and never did I see or learn of a dog being run over by a car. (All of which is a digression from my story, but which proves that the wholesale murder of gentle animals by motorists is not necessary.)

MALAKOFF made increasingly bad use of his liberty. Presently he was a pest to the entire Temple region. Not only was he a formidable warrior and eternally itched for a fight with any other dog, small or large, but he fought to kill. Woe to the wandering dog which Malakoff chanced to attack, or which dared him to battle!

Naturally, dog owners objected. That was all the good it did them. They complained to Cretin about his giant dog's murderous proclivities. Cretin only laughed and told them it was their own dogs' fault for tackling such a renowned battler.

Soon things grew worse in the neighborhood. Not content with fighting other dogs, the huge Malakoff formed the habit of nipping the ankles of men and women who passed along the street in front of the jeweler's door. Cretin laughed once more, declaring Malakoff was a good watchdog and bit only people he suspected of designs to rob his master's jewelry shop.

He pointed with pride to the fact that Malakoff was the cherished playmate of all the children of the region, and that he was as gentle with them as would be a mother. The children loved him, and he was a splendidly efficient protector to them on their walks through the streets. Once in a while in a romp with them he would knock them over, but always he picked them up again, licking their faces and whining for forgiveness.

Then, one winter afternoon, Malakoff came home from one of his daily rambles in a deplorable condition. He was torn and bleeding and lame. A throng of the neighborhood dogs had banded together to avenge their wrongs by attacking him. He had killed several of them and had routed the rest of the pack. But not before they had half-killed him.

Malakoff sprang over the parapet and into the raging river.

He crawled into a corner of the shop, groaning with pain. He would not eat nor move. Nowadays any sane owner, seeing him in such state, would have realized that his nerves and strength were sapped by the frightful battle he had been through, and would have dressed his hurts and given him water to drink, and then would have left him to rest in peace until his shattered nerves and energy had a chance to recuperate. But Cretin and his neighbors had not the sense to do this.

When they saw him lying there trembling and groaning they declared he had hydrophobia. They did not know that hydrophobia does not come on suddenly, nor that not one supposedly mad dog in a thousand is really rabid. So they decided Malakoff must be put to death before he could bite anyone. A veterinary assented to this.

So several men fastened ropes to the great Newfoundland and dragged the suffering dog to the Seine River and to the parapet of the nearest bridge. Then they prepared to wind the ropes around him in such a way as to prevent him from swimming, and then to tie a 50-pound stone to one of the ropes. Thus helpless, Malakoff was to be tossed over the coping of the bridge into the river below.

WHILE the others got the ropes ready to tie up the dog and while one of them rolled up a paving stone to be tied to the ropes, the veterinary climbed up on the top of the low parapet and looked over the edge to make certain the water at that spot was deep enough for the purpose and that no boats were anchored below.

As the man peered over the parapet his foot slipped on the slimy stone and down he went. With a splash and a howl he plunged headforemost into the fast-running river. The veterinary could not swim a stroke. None of the execution party dared risk life in the icy and racing stream by diving in after him.

But almost before the unhappy man's body struck the water Malakoff sprang up, shaking off the half-tied ropes, and sprang over the parapet and into the raging river. He came to the surface and caught sight of the drowning veterinary a few rods beyond. Instantly the Newfoundland headed for him, swimming strongly in spite of his hurts. A throng of people gathered on the bridge to watch the spectacle.

Just as the veterinary was sinking, Malakoff came alongside of him. He seized the man by the coat collar, keeping his head and face above the surface, and struck out for the nearest dock. It was a hard swim, what with the fast current and the veterinary's heavy weight and the dog's own hurts and exhaustion.

But at last Malakoff struggled to the dock with his human burden. Fifty hands reached down to grasp man and dog and to drag them to safety. One spectator announced:

"If this dog is mad, then it is a pity everyone is not mad! He has risked his own life to rescue the man who was killing him. If nobody else will take the risk of harboring him, then I will."

But there was no need. Cretin and a dozen other men of his street carried Malakoff home on their shoulders in triumph. For many years thereafter the heroic Newfoundland lived on, famous and honored, his mere presence bringing redoubled trade to Cretin's shop.

ONE MOMENT, PLEASE!

BY

KONRAD BERCOVICI

THE De Pegourds claimed but a dash of French blood. New Yorkers, when Fourteenth street was still farm land, when their home on Eleventh street was beyond the city's limits, the De Pegourd men had married German, Dutch, English and Austrian wives. However, this dash of French blood had given the family the vivacity and elegance for which they were noted, although five generations had not as much as seen France. They had the French chic, the French "I don't know what," and a soft tang in their speech that made them piquant. Jealous tongues argued that it was unnatural for the De Pegourds to conserve a foreign accent, after so many generations in New York; and they pointed out friends of theirs, whose parents were Dutch, Italian, and even Russian, who spoke American as she is spoken by everybody. "What," said they, "Marcelle and Andree have both graduated from American colleges. Where do they get that zizizi stuff?"

Their father, Joseph de Pegourd, had inherited a small embroidery factory that had been in the family for four generations. Careful and conservative (thanks, too, to that dash of French blood), his factory was still a success. Even the war had not succeeded in yanking the staid business out of its rut.

The home of the De Pegourds, too, had not undergone many changes. The broad, carved oak beds, the marquetry of the tables and chests of drawers, the old, high-backed chairs and the gilded mirrors crowned with angels holding torches in their chubby hands would have been the delight of antique dealers.

BECAUSE of the "I don't know what" in her, Marcelle married young and married well, although she was by no means the most beautiful of her set. Plump, petite, black-eyed, full-lipped and of a clear complexion, she had allowed George Smith, a young banker, to carry her off, two weeks after they had first met, at a tea party given by the Irvins, who had had their eye upon him for their own daughter.

The Irvins had invited Marcelle de Pegourd, a college chum of their daughter's, because she was French, because she had a "de" before her name, because of her vivacity, because she gave style and added color wherever she went. They never thought she would obscure Ethel, their beautiful daughter, and capture George Smith. His eyes, however, riveted themselves on Marcelle the moment she entered the room. A flash of red in a mass of gray; and red won.

Andree de Pegourd found life a little more difficult, after her sister's exploit; the Irvins, the Bronsons and the Sturgises were shy of inviting her. Her brother-in-law's relatives and social set opened new doors and flights into new realms—only the people were dull, frightfully dull. And Andree was a De Pegourd.

Beautiful? Well, no. No more beautiful than her sister Marcelle. But she had a charm all her own; an oval, creamy-white face, large, dancing eyes, fringed with black velvet. Beautiful? No—but charming.

ONE evening Father de Pegourd, on sitting down to table, announced that he had an important letter to read after dinner. The most he would say about that letter, to the repeated questionings of Andree, was that it was written by a second cousin in France.

Marcelle and her husband arrived after dinner that evening. Andree eyed her critically. She was wearing a new dress, a new hat and a new coat. Their car was still snorting outside. Andree read her sister's thoughts and knew that Marcelle felt that she had come home; that her home was still with the De Pegourds.

"What is all the mystery?" the older daughter asked, as she took off her hat.

"What mystery?" Andree questioned, looking playfully at her father.

Joseph de Pegourd pulled out a letter from a wallet

"It is from Madame de Pegourd, in Lyons, a second cousin. Her son, whose photograph she has sent—voila!"

Monsieur de Pegourd went on to explain that this cousin wanted his advice for her son, who desired to come to America and abandon the military career she had planned for him. They were looking at the picture of a gallant young man, in high riding boots, dressed in a smart uniform; the picture of a dark-eyed, curly mustached man, of their own blood. And he wore a uniform, a gallant, beautiful uniform. Their dash of French blood responded.

Marcelle sighed and looked at her gray-suited, handsome, clean-shaven young husband. Andree had always been lucky. Somehow, things always turned out better for her than for her sister. She would marry the dashing cousin. It was certain.

THAT uniform brought to Marcelle visions of court balls, crystal and candelabra, military orchestras, clinking swords, gold-braided uniforms, gayety, color, minuets—and the cousin, the center of attraction. She had never seen these things. She had read about them; most of her friends, too, had read about them, but to her these things had been nearer, more vivid. To the others, such novels had been fantastic tales; to Marcelle, they had been the realization of a dormant ancestral past.

Andree was lucky. She looked into her younger sister's eyes and knew that she, too, had the same vision. Papa de Pegourd was still talking.

"So, when will he come?" Andree queried.

Joseph de Pegourd smiled. His daughters had not listened to him. There was no sense, asking their advice.

"In a month, maybe—voila. Is that soon enough?"

Then, putting up the picture of the French officer near the mirror, "A handsome fellow. I remember a portrait of his father, at the same age—just like him"—

A month later, when the autumn wind was blowing, Joseph de Pegourd welcomed his cousin to America and took him home. Edouard was in uniform, and handsomer than his picture. Marcelle, because he was wholly lost to her, found him even handsomer than did her younger sister. He was irresistible as he gallantly kissed the hands of the ladies. And he clicked his heels together and bowed, when shaking hands with George Smith. It was a d'Artagnan meeting a prosaic banker. "Andree is lucky! Andree is lucky!" The thought ran through Marcelle's mind.

That evening George Smith wondered why his wife, usually so vivacious, was so listless.

"Not well, dear?"

"I am all right!"

"Frank Bronson and his wife are coming after dinner, for coffee."

"All right!"

"Now, what ees the matter, mon enfant?" George Smith questioned, putting an arm around Marcelle's waist and pressing his cheek to hers.

"What ees the matter?"

He mocked her French pronunciation of English. She always responded to that sort of play. Having no imagination for such things, he had repeated the same words, since the first hour of their marriage.

"Stop that, stop it!" Marcelle cried out petulantly, tapping nervously with her feet. "Can't you think of something new?"

He looked at her sternly, and, walking over to the telephone, he told his friend Bronson that Marcelle was not well that evening. She rushed up to him and snatched the receiver from his hand.

"Mr. Bronson—Mr. Bronson—George is fooling you. I am well—the idea! No, really. I don't know what is the matter with him. Do come right over. Of course.

"The idea, George Smith. I am well. I am very, very well. You are stupid."

"I have never seen you that way. Never knew you were so temperamental! Gee!"

"I am sorry, George."

And she was sweeter to him than she had ever been. He wished the Bronsons were not coming. She was so lovely.

Andree and Edouard got on wonderfully well; so well, indeed, that she did not hesitate to make her conquest triumphantly public. The De Pegourds' home livened up considerably after the young officer's arrival. He was dashing, vivacious, and a gallant dancer. In uniform he was easily the most distinguished-looking person, wherever he happened to be; and he was always in uniform. During this time, Marcelle was more in her parents' home than in her own.

Early in December, Andree announced her engagement. Edouard was to become a partner in his father-in-law's business, immediately after the wedding.

The celebrations of the engagement were brilliant; the wedding more so. There were many military uniforms at the wedding-ball.

The occasion was like a beautiful dream to Marcelle; a dream in which she was impersonated by her sister. She should have been wearing that wedding dress, not Andree. Marcelle, not Andree, should have stood beside Edouard at the altar. Andree was lucky. George Smith—and she loved him, he was good and nice to her—looked so unromantic; as unromantic as all those who wore no uniform. Their gray, or their white and black, robbed them of all romanticism. No one knew why she cried; no one, except Edouard. She knew he understood. She wished she had never gone to that tea at the Irvins'.

A WEEK after his return from the honeymoon trip, Edouard de Pegourd donned civilian clothes, gray tweed clothes. The change in his appearance made Andree shriek. She called Marcelle to her apartment, the floor above that on which her parents lived.

"Do come, Marcelle. You must come at once."

Marcelle howled, when she saw her idol in mufti. He looked like anybody else, only more uncomfortable; he was ill at ease in the coat and his arms hung awkwardly. Marcelle's thoughts ran to her husband. She had made poor George miserable for the last few months. She had been miserable herself. Now, George was certainly better looking than Edouard—who was so sheepish, so commonplace, so dull and everyday-like! She pulled at his coat here and there.

"No, it's not the tailor's fault, Edouard, you will get accustomed to them, you will learn how to wear them. Millions of people wear such clothes—you are no exception." And, as it was about noon, she surprised George by calling him on the telephone and asking him to take her to lunch. She kissed her sister, but she shook hands with Edouard de Pegourd—the "& Co." of Pegourd & Co., Embroiderers.

The following day Edouard de Pegourd entered his father-in-law's factory and was shown around. Then he plunged into the work. At first he looked upon the whole business in a theoretical way; as something to learn. Applying himself with the same thoroughness that had won him high praise from his instructors and officers when he was a subaltern, he soon mastered the intricacies of the business. The gallantry of the soldier was transformed into the enthusiasm of a merchant.

Andree was amazed at the change in her husband. She saw him hardly at all.

He came home, flushed and tired as a conqueror. He looked vaguely before him, distant, superior, as if he had just taken a stronghold and was planning a further conquest; yet she knew that he was but planning another economy, an increase in production or a sales campaign. And he was dull. She hoped the novelty of business would soon wear off. But month passed after month, and he grew more absorbed.

When she had friends at her apartment, he hardly glanced at them. He had learned to wear civilian clothes and had forgotten how to click his heels together when taking a woman's hand. If he still kept his mustache, it was because Andree had warned him that she would leave the house the day he shaved it off.

BUT Papa de Pegourd was radiant. His son-in-law was a remarkable business man. Within six months the factory and office had been transformed into a veritable beehive. Edouard spoke English fluently and had learned enough Italian to converse with the girls and women in the shop.

It was Andree now who found it more entertaining to be in Marcelle's home. She found George Smith better company than Edouard.

Marcelle understood her sister well. Words were unnecessary between them. She was disappointed in Edouard, as Andree was; she was disappointed and glad that it had happened so. She shuddered at the thought of the complications that would have arisen in their lives had Edouard remained in uniform.

Thus passed the first winter of Andree's married life. Edouard came home to eat, sleep and study his books. When he spoke to his wife it was only on his favorite topic. Andree knew, from the result of a first effort, that it was useless to try to change him.

Early in April Andree left with her parents to visit some relatives in Providence for a few days. Edouard seemed pleased to remain alone. He planned to spend all his time reading some new books on business.

There was much kissing of hands and cheeks. Spurs buzzed. Swords clinked. "Au revoir. Au revoir."

But he had no sooner left than he received an invitation from his consulate to don his uniform and assist at the reception of a French General, who was coming on a mission to the United States.

Edouard de Pegourd could not refuse; besides, he was a reserve officer of the French army. He debated with himself whether to recall Andree for the reception and banquet, or to let her be. She seemed to have set her heart upon that visit to Providence. Why should he disturb her? He could take Marcelle. That was best. He could not appear at the festivities without a woman on his arm. Marcelle would love it. Buried to his elbows in papers and books, he talked to her over the telephone.

"Yes, of course. Gladly. You don't think Andree would rather you sent for her? No?"

"No, Marcelle. It will be only for a day. Tomorrow. Ten o'clock. The General is going to Washington immediately. Understood? At 9:45 I shall come to fetch you. Be ready."

It was a beastly thing to be disturbed from business. Receptions, banquets, all such silly things were so far away from his present state of mind. He wished he were through with such things. He had important contracts to meet. New machinery was being installed at night, after the workers left. It was a beastly thing to be disturbed just then. Still, he was a French reserve officer, and a General was arriving.

He telephoned to the maid to have his uniform ready. It must be pressed, cleaned and the buttons polished. His cavalry boots had to be made very shiny, like black mirrors.

Having disposed of these details, he plunged into work. There was plenty to do. A Chicago merchant had just signed an important contract; two months of hard work for the whole factory.

There were a number of other contracts in view, with firms in Toledo, Cleveland and San Francisco. He would have to go and visit those cities and meet the merchants. But not before his English was better. Another year and no American would detect him as a Frenchman. He would also shave his mustache—later on.

Well, there were letters to dictate.

"MADEMOISELLE, no. Miss O'Reilly. Ready? Merci. Sunburn Manufacturing Company, etc.—Dear Sirs, Yours of the 29th to hand"—

He dictated 20 such letters, all beginning with: "Yours of the 29th to hand." The correspondence of the firm was the important matter each afternoon between 3 and 4. Before leaving that evening he gave orders to the bookkeeper and manager. He would keep in touch with them all the following day by telephone. He could really not appear at the office, in military uniform! He rose early the next morning and, after waxing his mustache, began to don his uniform.

A flood of new thoughts entered his mind when he looked in the glass. He gazed at himself over and over again, to make sure it was he, himself, and not someone else. The gold-braided cap, the epaulettes, the brass buttons, the high black boots, the silver spurs, the sword, the white gloves.

It had taken him an hour and a half to dress, and not the 20 minutes he usually allotted himself for getting into his business clothes. The maid came to tell him that the car he had ordered had just arrived.

"Bien, bien. Very good."

Marcelle cried out loud when she saw him. It was a cry of surprise and distress. When he kissed her cheeks, she turned and kissed his lips. She was lost, lost, Marcelle Smith kept ringing through her mind.

The reception of the General was a dream of suffused color and light, smothered by tinsel and music. People and things merged into one another and took on fantastic shapes. Two other French officers joined them in their car, which followed the General's.

The sidewalks were lined with people, who cheered the procession. They were applauding the General, applauding her, her and Edouard.

She wished the procession would come to an end. "You are lost, lost, Marcelle Smith, you are lost," hummed the motor, and the streets shrieked the same accusation. During the short collation at the hotel, where the procession halted, Marcelle was introduced to the General. The stout old Frenchman wondered at the abandonment of the hand he kissed and looked smilingly into her eyes. She talked to the officers and smiled at their gallant compliments; she talked with the women about her. She was introduced as Madame Smith nee De Pegourd.

THEY were now taking leave of the General. They stood and talked for a while in the lobby. Old friends promised to meet again soon. There was much kissing of hands and cheeks. Spurs buzzed. Swords clinked. "Au revoir. Au revoir."

Marcelle and Edouard were in their car again. It was 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The tempo of the city seemed to have slowed down. The car took the direction of the De Pegourds' home. They were chatting merrily about this and that. He told amusing stories about his comrades; made clever remarks about their wives.

They entered the De Pegourd home. Would he tell her now that he loved her?

The telephone bell was ringing as they opened the door.

"One moment, please, Marcelle," and he ran to the desk.

Miss O'Reilly was telling Mr. De Pegourd that they had been trying to get in touch with him.

"Well, I have been too busy. What is there so important?

"Sunburn telegraphed to cancel the contract? Impossible! Impossible!"

As he was speaking, he was struggling into the gray coat of his business suit.

"Impossible. I will dictate the letter."

Marcelle listened involuntarily to the voice dictating. It was different from the voice she had heard a while ago. She heard him declaim about principles of business. Contracts must be respected. They were the roots of civilization. What would happen if people signed contracts so easily and broke them at their convenience? One should think long before signing, but, once signed, the contract must be respected though it cause the greatest inconvenience.

He repeated that phrase three times, before the stenographer at the other end of the wire understood it.

"A contract once signed"—

THE words acted like a soothing potion on a drunkard. Marcelle arranged her hat.

"What would happen, if contracts were broken at convenience"——

Marcelle put on her hat.

What he was saying at the telephone applied to her. She had signed a contract—with George Smith.

What Edouard said about probity in business applied to her and to him. He had signed a contract with her sister.

"Though it cause the great inconvenience"——

He had not turned round once to look at her. He waxed eloquent. His voice sounded impressive. She noticed he had put on his business coat.

"All wars have been caused by breaches of contract. It is either honor or anarchy"——

He was talking to her now. He was talking to himself. Sure such talk had never been addressed to a business man!

"Get out of here, Marcelle Smith," a little voice within her said sharply.

She opened the door gently, not to disturb him, but he nodded to her, smiling gratefully.

She had understood.

But she had no sooner left than he received an invitation from his consulate to don his uniform and assist at the reception of a French General, who was coming on a mission to the United States.

Edouard de Pegourd could not refuse; besides, he was a reserve officer of the French army. He debated with himself whether to recall Andree for the reception was a blank. The blood rose to her head. She trembled.

She nestled close to him as they drove through the streets to the pier. She sought his hands. She was dazzled by the gold on his uniform, by his twinkling eyes and the music of his speech. He spoke to her of the harmony of her eyes and the color of her hair. And, all the time, a soft refrain, "You need of leaving Russia temporarily. The Imperial Ballet was about to visit London, Paris Vienna and Budapest, and Mathilde obtained permission of the Czar to join the company. It was the first time that the western capitals of Europe had seen the celebrated Russian danseuse, and they were captivated.

MME. KSHESHINSKA, as a dancer, had an immense success in London. Every night she appeared the boxes of Covent Garden Theater were occupied by the most exclusive society. The court, however, absented itself on every occasion when the appearance of Mme. Mathilde Ksheshinska was announced. It transpired that Queen Mary objected to "that indecent woman." Mathilde avenged herself by occupying the box opposite that in which the Queen of England was seated at another performance, and wearing all her jewels, so that she attracted more attention than the Queen.

Avoid GRAY Hair

YES, GRAY HAIR can be avoided if you know Kolor-Bak, the clean, colorless liquid which brings color back to gray hair, whether blonde, auburn, brown or black. So gently and gradually that others won't detect the change, Kolor-Bak brings back a natural appearance without harming the finest hair or the most tender scalp. Wise men or women won't use any preparations which so often produce weird colors worse than gray; Kolor-Bak is a very different proposition! No worry over shade — the one bottle is right for all. No uncertainty — you needn't experiment on even one lock of hair — Kolor-Bak is sold on a money-back guarantee.

ONCE a Nationally-Known Beauty, NOW SEEKING ALMS

SAN FRANCISCO.

FIFTEEN years ago Milo Abercrombie was an accepted beauty. Harrison Fisher, the artist, called her beautiful; Ernest Linnenkamp, internationally known European painter, considered her one of the fifteen most beautiful women in America, and displayed her loveliness on canvas.

Today, at 32, her memories bitter, twice divorced, her beauty dampened by the sadness of her soul, she has asked for public alms, for she and her children are destitute.

Milo Abercrombie was born in Houston, Texas. She was educated in an Indiana convent. Her family are of high station. Descended from Lord Robert Abercrombie of Banff, Scotland, the family has lived in America for generations. John Milo Abercrombie was for many years president of the University of Alabama. He once was Commissioner of Immigration and was in Congress. In the Southern States the family is well represented by jurists.

Just before the outbreak of the World War, Milo Abercrombie, then 18, came to San Francisco with her father, Gustav Milo Abercrombie, and her mother, the former Irma Ellis, herself a noted beauty of an earlier day. It was then that Milo Abercrombie met Baron Wilhelm von Brincken, Lieutenant in the Imperial German Army and military attache to the German Consul-General at San Francisco.

Baron von Brincken fell in love with Milo Abercrombie, and late that year she became his bride. Two children were born of this marriage.

But the war was on. Baron von Brincken was charged by the United States with conspiring against its neutrality, he was tried, found guilty and in 1917 he was sent to the Federal prison at McNeil's Island. He remained a prisoner until the war's end.

But while the Baron was a prisoner, his wife, who declared her husband was "unbearably domineering, unreasonably irritable and averse to children," sued him for divorce, charging he was a convicted felon. Von Brincken, from his island cell, fought hard against the action, but she was given the decree.

Less than three years later the Baroness announced her engagement to Lieutenant Lyman Knute Swenson of the United States Navy. And announcing it, she declared she at last had found true love. The couple were married in August of 1920 and the wedding was a social occasion.

Of this union two more children were born. But three years after the wedding the former Milo Abercrombie again was suing for divorce. This time she charged her husband was "temperamentally unfitted for matrimony," and she again obtained a decree. But the divorce did not end their troubles; since then there have been tempestuous times.

Milo Abercrombie, today, and as she appeared in 1915.

Their difficulties have lasted for five years; there have been appeals to the police for protection, dashes into court for restraining orders, a charge of crime against the father, court orders, the flight of the mother as a fugitive from justice.

So determined has the mother been to keep absolute custody of her children that a year and a half ago she charged Lieutenant Swenson with a crime against their daughter, Cecelia, then five years old, on the occasion of a visit to her father aboard his ship. Through this charge she managed to get a court order giving her sole custody of the children.

But the Government, investigating her charge, declared it to be wholly lacking in truth, and when the Federal report was placed before the Court which had granted the mother custody of the children, the Judge gave her four hours to appear in court and explain her deception.

She failed to appear and a bench warrant was issued. When the officers tried to serve it they discovered she had fled to Oregon. The Judge ordered the children removed from the "hysterical atmosphere" of their mother's home and given to their father. But the mother and her children were in Oregon, beyond the jurisdiction of the California court.

Some time after this a truce was entered into, and Lieutenant Swenson, it appears, agreed to pay his former wife $150 a month for the support of his two children, Cecelia and Laurence. But, according to his former wife, the naval officer was rather lax in keeping the agreement, for last November she went into a San Francisco court. A decision was handed down in her favor, but it is doubtful if that decision helped her greatly. For when she asked for charity, she said:

"I am destitute. I cannot go out and work because my babies require so much of my time. Lieutenant Swenson owes me $2200, but he refuses to give me a cent. I do not ask anything for myself; I only want money for my children—his children, too."

Meanwhile came the information that Lieutenant Swenson had declared he still loved his former wife, but in such a "sensible way" that he would never think of a reconciliation.

Following her confession that she was destitute, she was given some temporary aid. Her attorney asked the Associated Charities to collect the judgment against Lieutenant Swenson. That organization appealed to the Navy Department. But that department replied that the appeal was not "worthy of official notice."

Today the once famous beauty is living with her mother, who resides at San Mateo, near San Francisco. The life of the "Lady in Gray and Black," as Linnenkamp called his portrait of Milo Abercrombie, has become like the colors in the title of her picture.

Czar's Sweetheart Starts Anew

For three years the dancer and the Grand Duke Andre were constantly together. At first he was constant because it was his duty to be so. Then he was drawn into the magic circle, and the inevitable came to pass: Grand Duke Andre fell madly in love with the morganatic wife of the Czar.

Mathilde, on her part, felt that this young man stood near to her heart. The Czar's once passionate love had cooled down to the point of mere formal friendship. The Grand Duke proposed marriage, and Mathilde consented, on condition that the Czar should approve of the match.

Two months before the outbreak of the war Grand Duke Andre approached the Czar on the subject. The Emperor listened, speechless and bewildered. Marry Mathilde? The very thought was too audacious. With a wave of his hand he dismissed Andre.

The Grand Duke prepared to hear his doom, banishment to Siberia. But the war had broken out, and the Czar had no time for attending to the love affairs of young Grand Dukes. Andre was ordered to the front. Never from that day did Mathilde see the Czar. For three years she lived in seclusion.

ON THE 12th of March, 1917, came a sudden and dramatic turn to Mathilde's eventful life. The revolution was declared, revolting troops stormed the fashionable residential section of the capital, the Winter Palace fell into the hands of the Reds, and the mob assailed the mansion of Mme. Ksheshinska. She heard the cries, "Down with the Czar!" and trembled when women joined the insurgents with "Kill the mistress of the tyrant!"

The old doorman was shot, and Mathilde heard the trampling of boots coming up the marble stairs. She fled from one room to another. In the servants' quarters there was a bathtub. She jumped in, and threw over herself a covering of servants' linen and clothes. Here, in terror, she spent the night.

At dawn there was again calm in the palace. Mathilde donned some of the servants' clothes, stole down the stairs and out into the street. For hours she wandered about aimlessly. At last she rang the bell at the door of Count Wolkonsky's house. The Count years before had been director of the Imperial Ballet and a devoted friend of Mathilde.

She remained in hiding here, fearing for her life. But the victorious revolution did not seek her life. Nobody demanded the arrest of the Czar's favorite. She was still the incomparable dancer, in the eyes of the people. The revolutionary Government even restored her jewels and household valuables which had been seized by the looters. In July, blood flowed again in the streets of the capital. The Bolshevists began their counter revolution.

Disguised as a working woman and with a false passport, Mathilde escaped to Finland. Her luggage consisted of a large steel strong-box which contained the remnant of her fortune, consisting of jewelry valued at $3,000,000.

In 1918 Mathilde arrived in Paris, which was already filling up with Russian refugees. One of them was the Grand Duke Andre Vladimirovitch.

The situation of these two lovers became just the opposite of what it had been in the golden days of the past. Mathilde took good care of her one-time protector, and it was now her turn to propose marriage to the Grand Duke. Andre Vladimirovitch, however, was too proud to marry a woman who possessed wealth, while he had nothing. However, he followed her to the Riviera, where Mathilde purchased the Villa Alam at Cap d'Ail, and the pair waited for some lucky break. This came in 1922, when Czarist conspirators succeeded in smuggling out from Russia some of the crown jewels, which were sold in Paris and New York. Andre's share of the proceeds was said to be more than $1,000,000.

Now that he, too, was rich he married the woman he loved, and in 1922 the danseuse Mathilde became the Grand Duchess Andre Vladimirovitch.

But luck, so long faithful to Mathilde, at last seemed to turn from her. At the same time her ventures in conspiracy lost out.

While the political misfortunes had no immediate effect on the circumstances of Mathilde and her princely consort, their reverses at the gaming tables were more fateful. Mathilde became known at Monte Carlo as the most unlucky gambler in the world. Though she seldom missed an evening at the Casino, and at times gold was piled before her, she would invariably lose her head and attempt to break the bank. The result, of course, was that the bank broke her. Her most costly jewels had to be sold. Now the last evidence of Mathilde's vast fortune has gone: the sumptuous Villa Alam itself.

And yet the "Divine Mathilde" does not lose heart. Though she has passed her fiftieth year she is still a beautiful woman and full of vitality. She is preparing for her return to the stage. She stands at another dramatic turn of her career. At the age of fifty-one she is beginning everything anew!

By replacing the zinc stearate found in other powders with a harmless, adhesive astringent, the specialist who created La-May Face Powder has made more than just a perfect powder for oily skins—he accidently found a marvelous secret for enlarged pores. Thousands of women made the amazing discovery that La-May refines coarse skins and prevents fine skins getting coarse.

So, if your skin is getting coarse, let La-May refine it to youthful beauty. Or, if your skin is oily, let La-May correct this fault. The more you use it the better becomes the texture of your skin.

La-May (French, Poudre L'Ame) is sold by druggists everywhere in all shades at one dollar; also a trial size. Remember, La-May is most popular in New York; even in Paris it is called the purest, finest powder known to science; it is the only powder guaranteed to correct oily skin and reduce enlarged pores. When you try La-May you will say you have at last found a perfect face powder: that it goes on smoother, looks better and stays on longer than any other. Save this.

Teamwork Pays!

Of course a man's wife is part of the team, and her wifely attentions to his personal appearance can have much to do with business success.

There's a decided connection between the full wash line and the full pay envelope. Frequent change of linen is an investment that earns dividends.

Men realize this, but yet in some homes there persists that restraint which says, "Try to keep the wash down this week."

What a mistake! Simply an instance of lack of teamwork which may lose the game.

How the Egyptian Prince Escaped the Madhouse

English Keeper, Who Succumbed to Glowing Promises of Wealth, Returns Home Disillusioned.

LONDON.

IT WAS nearly three years ago that Prince Ahmed Seyfeddine, the "mad" Egyptian, made his melodramatic escape from a private insane asylum at Ticehurst, England, but the "inside" story of how it was accomplished with the assistance of a mysterious American called "Mr. Johnston" has just been told here. The tale comes now as the result of the recent return and arrest of John A. Bastone, one of the two asylum guards who, on the promise of huge fortunes from the Prince's $200,000,000 estate, assisted in the get-away and accompanied the Prince on his exciting dash to Constantinople.

Ahmed Seyfeddine had spent 25 years in that asylum. He was sent there early in 1900 as the result of an attempt two years earlier to kill his brother-in-law, who later became King Fuad of Egypt. During those 25 years his estate was held in trust by King Fuad. Ahmed, following his escape, hoped to regain it, but in this he has been disappointed, and so have the erstwhile guards. Their dreams of living in splendor in the Prince's fairy-like palaces have been shattered, and it was a disillusioned fortune hunter who returned here a short time ago to tell the story.

Prince Ahmed Seyfeddine.

"I have never regretted anything more in my life than that ill-advised wild-goose chase to Constantinople," Bastone told the correspondent after he had been fined $100 in the Hastings Court for assisting a certified lunatic to escape. "I was lured into the plot by soft Oriental persuasion. I had been promised a good job for life and also a big bonus to be the Prince's keeper at Constantinople, but when I mentioned $100,000 as my reward, old Feridoun Pasha, who engineered the break, pooh-poohed this as a ridiculously small sum. He waved his hand with an airy gesture and assured me that just as soon as the Prince's affairs were settled I would have real wealth—not a mere trifle such as $100,000. Month after month passed, but his promise never came true. So I determined to come back. I was sick of Turkey.

"I MADE many attempts to leave, but the Pasha, an old Turk who married the Prince's mother, would not let me go. When at last he realized I was in earnest, he gave me $100 and said good-bye. One hundred dollars! I could have thrown the money back in his face, but I pocketed it and my pride and came home. I was glad to return on a third-class ticket he had bought for me."

Prince Ahmed was only a youth of 17 when he made his misstep that eventually landed him in the English asylum at Ticehurst. He was a member of the family reigning in Egypt and at that time had just inherited his colossal fortune. He was given to brooding, however, and developed a bitter animosity toward Prince Fuad, now King Fuad, who had married his sister, Princess Chivekiar. It was rumored that Prince Fuad mistreated her and these rumors reached the ears of Prince Ahmed. So one day he pocketed a revolver and walked into Khedivial Club in Cairo. There he found Fuad. Summoning the most insulting epithet he could think of, he addressed the Prince.

"You are a dirty pig," he shouted, "for beating my sister as you do." Fuad tried to punch Ahmed in the eye. Ahmed, however, dodged his blow and drew his revolver.

"Take that, you scoundrel—you pig!" he shouted, and blazed away at the future King. Egyptians, as a rule, are not celebrated for marksmanship, especially with a revolver, and Ahmed was no better than most of them. Five of the shots only mutilated the royal fez, but the last one went through Fuad's neck and came near severing the jugular vein. The wounded Prince hovered between life and death for several weeks. Finally he recovered, divorced Chivekiar and filed a charge of attempted murder against Ahmed.

IN SPITE of the fact that Ahmed was a member of the reigning dynasty and immensely rich, he was sentenced to seven years in prison, and for two years he broke rock with common robbers and thieves on the Helouan road. Then, by some mysterious procedure instituted by Fuad, he was adjudged insane and sent to Ticehurst House, which is a private asylum for the rich.

The terrific heat and the heartbreaking work on the roads, to which he never became accustomed, had seriously affected his mind and body, but he was not insane in the ordinary sense. The fact was that he had made threats to kill Fuad as soon as he was released from prison and that the Prince and his relatives had brought powerful pressure to bear on the authorities to have the youth put out of the way for life.

The administration of Ahmed's estate, largely consisting of rich cotton lands, became a fat political plum in Egypt, and many influential people, who had managed to put their fingers in this pie, had good reasons for wanting Ahmed kept in England.

As the years passed the Prince's mother, Princess Nevdijivani, appealed time after time to Lord Cromer, the British Viceroy, and to Lord Lansdowne, the British Prime Minister, for her son's release, but always met with refusal. At various times she sent lawyers to England, but only one of them was ever permitted to see Ahmed. That was Djelaleddin Bey, a prominent Turk, who gained permission from Ramsay MacDonald, the Labor Premier, to visit the Prince in 1924. He reported that the Prince was entirely sane.

During all this time Prince Fuad—he has been King since 1914—never visited England. He feared Prince Ahmed would escape and kill him.

FINALLY Princess Nevdijivani married Feridoun Pasha, a Turkish officer, who favored direct action, and the latter hatched a kidnaping scheme. The Egyptian Government says unofficially the Princess simply wanted her son in order to benefit from his fortune, and the mother retorts that she has as much right to the $200,000,000 as a lot of political grafters in Egypt. At any rate, Feridoun Pasha met a clever American adventurer at the Cosmopolitan Club at Constantinople who called himself "Mr. Johnston," and the latter agreed to go to England to direct the plot. The exact identity of "Mr. Johnston" has never been revealed, but the staff of the United States Embassy in Constantinople have a shrewd suspicion as to who he is.

The two plotters made the journey to Ticehurst, a quiet town only 20 minutes from Tunbridge Wells, and, while the Pasha remained in the background, "Mr. Johnston" struck up an acquaintanceship with Pilbeam and Bastone, the Prince's two guards. At that time the Prince was allowed to go to Hastings and other coast towns with these two companions, and the American had no difficulty in finding many opportunities to talk to them. He had very little cash, as the Pasha is not a rich man, but he filled their ears full of stories of the Prince's great wealth, of the Oriental fairyland where they would live at Constantinople, of a harem that would not only be ample for the Prince himself but for his faithful friends, and added vague references about the magnificence and luxury of an Eastern potentate's life. The two sturdy Britons succumbed to the lure of these delights, abandoning their homes and jobs, and on September 1 the whole world was thrilled by the dramatic story of Prince Ahmed's escape the previous day.

J. A. Bastone.

When King Fuad of Egypt heard of it he shivered down to his toes, hid himself in his castle in Cairo, and ordered an extra watch to be placed at all the Egyptian ports.

"One evening," said Bastone, "about two months before the actual escape, I was taking a walk when I saw Pilbeam, the Prince's other attendant, talking to 'Mr. Johnston,' the American, and a short, stout Oriental man who proved to be Feridoun Pasha.

"They called me over and persuaded me to join in a plot to help Prince Ahmed to escape. I saw no great harm in this, as I was sorry for the Prince.

"IT WAS only after several futile attempts that we got the Prince away. 'Mr. Johnston' had arranged for us to take one of the day excursion steamers leaving Hastings for Boulogne, as these one-day trippers do not need passports for landing in France. We finally boarded the Devonia on August 31. At Boulogne 'Mr. Johnston' had a fast motor car waiting, and we started at once for Paris, where we arrived at 2 in the morning. Feridoun Pasha and the Prince's mother were waiting there. The next day we motored down to Marseilles, where the American supplied us with false Italian passports, and the ship was just sailing out of harbor when word arrived from Scotland Yard to arrest the Prince, but it was too late to do anything then.

The English guard was disillusioned from the moment he arrived at Constantinople. He understood that Prince Ahmed had a number of fairy-like palaces, but King Fuad refused to return his estate on the ground that Ahmed was still a lunatic, and so the Prince and his two guards had to put up at the Pasha's modest home.

According to Bastone, the Prince has conducted himself in a thoroughly sane manner since his arrival in Constantinople.

King Fuad still refuses to release his property and there seems to be no power to force him to do so. It appears now that Ahmed will be compelled to spend the rest of his life in poverty.

Folks Do Lose Fat
without hard work or starving

It is evident on every hand that people do lose fat in these days without starving. Look about you—note how slenderness prevails. Abnormal figures have largely disappeared.

One great reason lies in a discovery made by leading scientists. They found a cause for excess fat in a certain gland deficiency. In a gland which assists nutrition. Thousands of tests proved that fat reduction came by correcting that lack.

A great medical laboratory then embodied that factor in Marmola prescription tablets. They have now been used for 20 years—millions of boxes of them. In every circle you can see the results. Almost anyone has friends who can tell them.

The users of Marmola have told others, and the use has grown. Now people are using some 5,000,000 tablets a month. And excess is fast becoming an af tion of the past.

Abnormal exercise diet is neither requ nor advised. One sim takes four Marmola t lets daily until we comes down to normal

The Marmola presc tion is not secret. full formula is given every box, and a b states the reasons for good effects. You know that you are tak what modern physicians prescribe, why the effects are natural and help

Don't suffer longer from abnorm fat. It blights beauty, health and vita Learn how Marmola corrects the c ditions, and why. Go get a box tod and this day may be a red-letter day your calendar.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 a box. Any druggist who is out will order from his jobber.

Lovely Teeth
that sparkle in a smile

FLASHING teeth . . . glistening . . . bright . . . healthy. No wonder Miss Georgia Gwynne is proud of her lovely smile.

Of course her teeth were always even and white, but much of their beauty is due to the careful care she has given them.

Daily cleaning with Colgate's for fourteen years and a trip to the dentist every six months—that's Miss Gwynne's secret.

In this country, and in foreign countries the world over, you will find thousands and thousands of men and women who began using Colgate's ten, fifteen, even twenty years ago, and whose teeth today are exceptionally sound and beautiful.

There is nothing mysterious about these enviable results. The men and women fortunate enough to secure them did nothing that you cannot easily do yourself.

Miss Gwynne as a child
